BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

AUTUMN BUILDING MATERIAL PRICES LOWER—AUGUST PLAN FILINGS EXCEED THOSE FOR SAME MONTH LAST YEAR.

Gain of Million and Half—September Lists — Cement Export Quotations

LOCAL building construction has not suffered from the effects of the war, judging from a comparison of the plans filed and their values made for the month of August just closed with August of last year. There is a total gain of 45 buildings and of $1,567,072 in value. Detailed reports from the bureaus of buildings covering the five boroughs for August of this and last year by weeks follow:

| Week ending | 1914. Total No. | Total value. |
|---|---|---|
| Aug. 8 | 214 | $3,370,650 |
| Aug. 15 | 174 | 3,004,993 |
| Aug. 22 | 201 | 2,553,074 |
| Aug. 29 | 132 | 1,021,986 |
| Total | 721 | $9,950,703 |
| | 1913. | |
| Aug. 9 | 138 | $3,649,338 |
| Aug. 16 | 173 | 1,417,211 |
| Aug. 23 | 185 | 2,297,782 |
| Aug. 30 | 180 | 1,017,300 |
| Total | 676 | $8,381,631 |
| Gain Aug., 1914 | 45 | $1,569,072 |

Practically all of these operations had been financed before the European disturbance developed. The architects filing the plans assert that they will go ahead and complete the work, but that money for new building projects will continue to be tightly held until after the first of the year. But the significant feature about the foregoing compilation of weekly filings is that they do not show any signs of panic or unusual disturbance in the face of the worst month American finance and industrialism has ever known. The very fact that a decided increase in building construction is indicated proves first, that there is still a real demand for more buildings in New York; second, that the building investment public continues to have unbounded faith in real estate development in times when the securities market is disturbed; third, that there is undoubtedly a lure to the building investor in the low prices of building materials now prevailing; and fourth, an apparent belief among financial interests that out of the recent doubt and dismay will come a prosperity that will react tremendously upon New York realty.

A comparison of building material prices ruling today with those of September last year shows a general reduction in quotations in current lists. Common brick, both new and second hand, one and one-half inch gravel, spruce, hemlock, yellow pine and nearly all hardwoods, structural steel, crushed stone and hardware are all lower. Lime is a little higher in some brands. Three-quarter inch gravel is stiffening. Linseed oil is higher and American Portland cement, mill base, is steadier. German Portland cement is not quoted as stocks here are extremely low with little chance for more imports for some time.

Building plans filed this week with comparisons with those filed last week, follow:

| | Week ending —Aug. 28— No. | Value. | —Sept. 4— No. | Value. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Manhattan | 4 | $140,200 | 2 | $295,000 |
| Bronx | 5 | 139,350 | 16 | 410,850 |
| Brooklyn | 82 | 680,725 | 122 | 464,500 |
| Queens | 29 | 63,363 | 82 | 208,120 |
| Richmond | 12 | 7,348 | 14 | 28,735 |

HARDWARE.

Bigger Demand for American Products Generally Expected.

HARDWARE interests are embarrassed principally by the difficulty experienced in getting steel. This is also true of machinery manufacturers of all kinds. Otherwise the trade is tranquil and is in hopes ultimately of getting back some of the fancy hardware business that has been diverted to France, Germany and England by the tariff. The South American opportunity looms large in this department.

The tendency among the retailers seems to be to curtail purchases even in the face of prospective advances in certain lines. The upward movement of steel reinforcement material doubtless will be followed by other lines, as American manufacturers will not be slow in getting back to levels that had been forced down by the late reduction in imposts at all American ports. Sheet copper is quoted at 18 cents a pound, but spelter has jumped to indefinitely high levels. Tin is also moving up.

SMALL GRAVEL STIFFER.

Dollar Price Level for Three-Quarter Inch Higher for Small Quantities.

QUOTATIONS for gravel remain the same as last month for 1½ inch size, 90 cents being the prevailing figure. The demand has been so keen for ¾-inch size of late that wholesalers are asking a slight advance over $1.10 for moderate requirements.

COMMON BRICK.

Sales Exceed Arrivals for Hudson Rivers —Unloading Less.

SALES of Hudson river common brick exceeded arrivals on the wholesale dock this week. For three days the demand was exactly equal to the supply at West 52d street, a sign of stability in building. Registered unloading fell off sharply, however. The total number of bargeloads arrived in August this year was 198 as compared with 156 arriving in the same month last year. Sales were 184 last month as against 193 in August, 1913. This left fifteen bargeloads unsold of the August consignments this year as against all shipments sold pluss 49 reserve barges.

There are fewer unsold bargeloads on the market to-day than there were on even date in the same month a year ago. Last year at this time there was considerable buying for stacking purposes among dealers. This buying has not developed so far this autumn.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, Sept. 3, in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson Rivers unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

PROTECTING RESIDENTIAL DISTRICTS

Methods Employed in Various Cities Where Efforts Have Been Made to Confine Industrial Concerns Within Prescribed Zones*

By LAWRENCE VEILLER

DOES the constitutional right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness include those important considerations which our English cousins in their recent town planning legislation refer to as the "amenities"?

It is only in very recent years that we have been conscious of the necessity of doing something to protect our citizens in the enjoyment of the right to lead a quiet, contented, rational existence and bring up their families free from the noise, discomfort and nerve-racking atmosphere which generally surrounds our industries.

During the last few years in a few of our larger cities we have awakened to the folly of this disorderly and thoughtless method of living and are beginning to ask ourselves whether these discomforts of living are really necessary after all.

Property Restrictions.

From the earliest days even in America those of us who have not been especially enamoured of noise and of a hurly burly life, have sought so far as mere man could, acting alone and without the powerful support of government, to control his own neighborhood and protect the home and where he expected to bring up a family and live for the rest of his life. And so we find for many years in America an effort through private covenant or what is popularly known as "property restrictions" to secure the result desired.

Unfortunately this method which has been followed to a greater or less degree throughout all parts of the country has not proved entirely satisfactory, being a private arrangement between individuals, and being only a mutual agreement or contract, it has proved to be easily dissolvable. Furthermore, in many of our States the courts have held that property restrictions imposed some years back by the then owners of property are no longer binding and of effect when the neighborhood conditions have changed and when the succeeding property owners have desired to dissolve the terms of such agreement.

Private covenant having proved ineffective, the use of the police power of the State has finally been sought. How far the police power will stretch in America is still a question to be decided. That the police power cannot be stretched to cover merely æsthetic considerations is clear from the decisions of our courts.

As yet no one has sought to define the meaning of that important term "general welfare." It is a most important one for those interested in progress. I take it to be the American equivalent of our English city planners' "amenity."

What Has Been Done.

Such efforts as have been made in the United States to extend the use of the police power in this direction have all been within the past few years, the earliest attempt having been made in the State of California five years ago. Here in 1909 the first effort to establish residential districts and to exclude therefrom certain industries was made in the city of Los Angeles.

In the year following a similar attempt was made in Michigan, in the city of Grand Rapids, and more recently, viz., in 1913, there seems to have been an epidemic of regulation of this kind, the States of New York, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois having all passed legislation of this nature.

So far as I can ascertain, all these various attempts were made in an unrelated way by each State, without knowledge of what the other was doing; in fact, in most cases I believe without knowledge of what California had done four years previous.

California Leads.

The Los Angeles ordinance differs in many respects from the districting plans of other cities in that it lays the greater emphasis upon the establishment of industrial districts, whereas the schemes embodied in the laws of other states concern themselves with residential districts. The difference, however, after all, is chiefly a question of emphasis.

The entire city of Los Angeles, with the exception of two suburbs, is divided into industrial and residential districts. In addition to the industrial districts there are what are termed "resident exceptions;" in other words, small spots where certain unobjectionable industries are permitted.

The industrial districts vary greatly in shape and size. The largest has an area of several square miles and measures five miles in length and two miles in width. The smallest district comprises a single lot. As a whole the industrial districts are grouped in one part of the city. The "residence exceptions" are small, with the exception of one which is about a half mile in area. None of them covers a greater area than two city blocks and in many cases each does not occupy more than one or two lots.

The line that is drawn between the industrial district and the residential district in the Los Angeles scheme is that all kinds of business and manufacturing are permitted without restriction in the industrial districts, while in the residential districts certain specified businesses of a distinctly objectionable nature are prohibited. Those industries which are not enumerated in the prohibition are permitted.

Manufacturing Forbidden.

In the residential districts all manufacturing but that of the lightest kind is forbidden, but less offensive business and manufacturing establishments which are excluded from the residential districts may be carried on in the "residence exceptions," which seem to be a sort of "twilight zone" between the two extremes.

A distinctive feature of the Los Angeles scheme is that certain industries, even if already established in the residential district before the district is created, are to be excluded; that is, it becomes unlawful to maintain these industries even though they may have been in operation for many years before the district was created.

In Michigan in 1910 the Common Council of Grand Rapids, without any specific authority from the Legislature, passed an ordinance establishing residence districts, and subsequently this ordinance was amended by creating additional residence zones. The validity of the ordinance was attacked in the courts and the Superior Court of Grand Rapids held that the ordinance was unconstitutional and void, among other reasons on the ground that "such ordinance constitutes a taking away of the property of relator without due process of law, in violation of the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States."

The Legislature of Wisconsin in 1913 passed an act authorizing cities of 25,000 or more to set aside exclusive residential districts. The act thus affects the cities of Milwaukee, Green Bay, La Crosse, Madison, Oshkosh, Racine, Sheboygan and Superior.

At about the same time that the State of Wisconsin was acting, the State of Minnesota was taking similar action. The Legislature of that State in 1913 passed an act empowering cities with a population in excess of 50,000 to establish exclusive residential and industrial districts. Acting under authority of this law the City Council of Minneapolis on February 28, 1913, passed an ordinance establishing certain residential districts. So far as we can ascertain, the validity of this ordinance has not as yet been tested.

The State of Illinois in the same year also passed an act empowering cities to establish residential districts and exclude therefrom certain other classes of buildings, but this was vetoed by the Governor upon an opinion from the Attorney-General that such an act would be unconstitutional.

New York State Acts.

At the same time the Empire State of New York was taking similar action. In the Housing Law for Second Class Cities will be found a similar plan for the establishment of residential districts. In that act a plan is provided for the establishment of "residence districts" and the erection of any building other than a private dwelling or two-family dwelling in such districts is prohibited. The residence district may be made as small as one side of a city block.

Acting under authority of this law the cities of Syracuse and Utica have passed ordinances establishing such residential districts.

New York City has also taken similar action within the last two months, the Legislature of 1914 having passed an enabling act authorizing the Board of Estimate to divide the city into districts and to regulate the use of buildings in each district on a different basis. A commission is to be appointed by the local authorities of New York City to determine the boundaries of districts and to work out the details of this plan.

What, it may be asked, are the important considerations to be borne in mind in seeking to utilize the police power to regulate the character of neighborhoods and to protect citizens in the enjoyment of residential districts free from the invasion of objectionable industries or occupations, and how can we so formulate our enactments that they will not be subject to adverse decision by our courts?

It will be seen from a study of the different enactments that have been described that they differ in many respects and in some essential particulars.

In the first place, should we limit the industries or uses which we exclude from a residential district to certain specified ones that may be enumerated in the statute, or shall we prohibit all industries in our residential district and forbid there any use other than for purposes of residence?

In the California law we find that only those industries are excluded that are enumerated, and presumably only those are enumerated which the authors of the law believe can be shown clearly to be objectionable from the point of view of public health, safety, morals or welfare. In the Minneapolis ordinance and in the Milwaukee ordinance the same principle is followed and specific industries are enumerated.

It has become an axiom, however, in legislative experience that specific enumerations are extremely dangerous, for the very simple reason that the numerator is apt to forget many points which should be enumerated and may possibly include in the enumeration things which are subject to attack.

In the New York Second Class Cities Law everything but private dwellings and two-family dwellings and private garages or stables at the rear of the lot are excluded. In this act no attempt is made to enumerate objectionable industries or objectionable uses of property in residential districts, but all uses other than for purposes of residence are by the act itself excluded.

The Multiple-Dwelling.

An important feature of this scheme which should not be lost sight of is carried out in the New York law, namely, the exclusion from strictly private residence districts of huge multiple-dwellings, such as tenement houses and apartment houses and hotels.

None of the statutes which have been cited, neither the ordinances of California nor the laws of Wisconsin or Minnesota, will be of any value in the effort to keep apartment houses, tenements and hotels out of private residence districts, as the laws of these states simply give to the local authorities in the cities affected the right to differentiate residential and industrial districts. The multiple-dwelling, either apartment house, tenement house or hotel, is, of course, a residential use of property and such a building could not therefore be excluded.

There are cities such as New York and some of the older Eastern cities where the multiple-dwelling is the chief type of house that we can expect to find at the present day in the future development of the city. Here therefore it will be necessary to distinguish between the prohibition of multiple-dwellings and the prohibition of industries

The next question which confronts us is, shall our statutes be retroactive? Shall we reach back into the past and disturb industries or uses of property which have been maintained for many years? In other words, shall we after a given date, no matter what the conditions, exclude from a newly created residential district all industries or objectionable uses to which property may be put?

A Limited Prohibition.

This has been the method employed in California. It is also the method employed in the Milwaukee and Minneapolis ordinances, but it should be noted that these ordinances in excluding certain industries from residential districts are limited solely to those industries which can be shown to be objectionable from the point of view of public health, morals or the general welfare.

The New York law does not go so far. It does not seek to affect anything but the future. It accepts the principle that where a district has already gone and industries are well established that it is futile to attempt to save it for residential purposes.

A third consideration is, how far the residents and property owners of the district affected by the restriction shall determine whether such restriction shall apply. Here there are two elements of danger.

If the law permits the decision to rest solely with a majority of the property owners affected there is likelihood of its being set aside by the courts on the ground that one group of property owners cannot deprive another group of property owners of the right to use their property in such way as they may wish.

On the other hand, we must be on our guard not to place the determination of this question solely in the local legislative body or permit it to act without giving the property owners whose interests are affected an opportunity to express their views and have some voice in the determination of the question at issue.

It is apparent, therefore, that both of these elements must be considered. The restriction to be valid must either originate with or have the affirmative approval of a substantial majority of the parties in interest whose property is affected. It must also have the approval of the government, that is, of the local legislative body.

Another important consideration from the practical point of view, if not so essential from the side of the legality of our plan, is that the plan shall be a workable one and that the geographical boundaries of the district affected shall be such as to give a scheme that will not unduly stop the progress of a city nor interfere with the development of business where business development is necessary and desirable.

For American practice the best unit seems to the writer to be one side of a city block. Anything larger than this is bound to cause trouble. It will not do to make the entire city block the unit of our residential district, because it is well recognized that we have in many cities conditions where one side of a block located on some broad avenue is best adapted for business purposes; in fact the only development that could be appropriately and profitably made at a given time on such a location is of that nature, whereas the other three sides of the block may be located on distinctively residence streets, and the most appropriate use for them is a residential one.

With the unit thus limited to one side of a block, it is possible to give to each part of a city the special treatment that it needs—business in one case, residence in another.

Another important consideration from the point of view of workability is that the plan shall be flexible so that the industrial progress of the city may not be checked. It ought to be possible, therefore, to have the restrictions that are imposed removed or removable by as simple a process as the one by which they are imposed.

VALUE OF AN APPRAISAL DEPARTMENT

How Key Values to Property Are Found and Recorded in Brokers' Offices, and Decisions Based on Actual Facts Instead of Guesswork

ESTABLISHED knowledge of the real value, the market value and the quick realization value of property is an absolute essential for any intelligent action or advice connected with any parcel of real estate." This is the opening statement in another real estate article in System, the Magazine of Business, by Joseph P. Day of New York. The writer emphasizes the danger of guesswork, born to the one who acts on the guesses or the reputation of the broker offering it.

If you select the three real estate firms in each city, that are acknowledged leaders in their territory, says Mr. Day, you will find each one has a complete appraisal system and therefore bases its decisions on actual facts instead of snap judgments. The salesman who cannot supply full information about a property, its neighborhood and the trend of values is at a decided disadvantage in competition with salesmen from offices which do maintain proper information systems.

The first aim of the appraisal department is to get, if possible, one actual value of one lot or parcel on every block or at least one actual value in every square block. Of course, it gathers as many values in every block as it can get. In the absence of a factor of value in the actual block, values across the street or on the next block can be used to figure values of the specific property in question.

In default of actual values, the tax appraiser's figures or inheritance tax appraisals are illuminating and the amounts loaned on mortgage or building loan establish certain minimum values. The gross rents supply a factor. The net income enables one to calculate with satisfactory accuracy the value of equities. Bonafide offers also help. To get at the trend of values, it is important to have records of transactions on parcels in the same block or near by, over a series of years.

No one who has not actually spent time in the appraisal department of a big office can have any conception of the mass of matter and facts and gossip that must be carefully considered by the appraiser and his assistants. For example, reading line by line all newspaper reports of sales, transfers, operations, leases, mortgages and clippings, and pasting or recording of all significant facts is only the beginning of the work. In addition, all real estate trade journals must be scrupulously studied; the tax lists must be gone over property by property; inheritance tax reports analyzed and the City Record—giving all municipal actions—carefully scrutinized for facts affecting property.

Whenever an important transaction without consideration is recorded, the appraiser must make an effort to get at the fact through private sources. Frequently, he gets this value in absolute confidence and then must enter it on the key-card in a secret code understood only by himself and his department heads. Utterances of public men or real estate experts must be analyzed for key values and entered at their exact worth.

When we started our appraisal department fifteen years ago, we had only one or two empty drawers, a supply of blank cards and a lot of undigested records of our own sales, mortgages and leases. Year by year we have added key values and reports, until today we have one or more positive facts of value or key values for many thousands of different properties. We have also made connections with brokers who keep their own appraisal systems in outlying sections and other cities whereby in exchange for our appraisal information about New York, we can use their appraisal cards in their own sections.

The first few years the records were not complete enough to yield full results, although we soon began to see and reap benefits from this systematic keeping of information. Today, with records giving in some cases ten and twenty transfers for a single property, the appraisal cards have become invaluable. They bring results far greater, I believe, than the considerable expenditure of time and money and thought which they represent.

Of late years, too, I have begun to gain a cash by-product from them which greatly reduces their net cost and which promises soon to enable this department to yield a good profit above its overhead and a good percentage on the entire investment it represents. Calls for my appraisal department to value estates, to give expert testimony in court proceedings and condemnations, and to supply impartial valuations for owners or intending purchasers are now frequent and yield important fees.

A CIVIC CENTER OF NEW EAST BRONX

The Neighborhood Around the Junction of Prospect and Westchester Is Still Growing Rapidly and Taking on Mercantile Importance.

IN 1905, one full year after the West Farms Subway was opened, the report of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company showed that 1,511,754 tickets were sold at the Prospect avenue station. For the year ending June 30, 1913, 6,129,100 were sold at the same station. While more recent records are at present unavailable, the remarkable increase of population, as evidenced by the larger number of passengers from that point, is indicative of the new importance of Prospect avenue.

At the subway station, four streets converge, namely, Prospect avenue, Westchester avenue, Longwood avenue and East 160th street. Traffic pours in from six different directions. In the evening, Prospect avenue, probably on account of its great width, is very popular for promenading and on account of its crowds of strollers and brilliantly lighted shops is being called a "Great White Way." A number of theatres, including the Prospect Theatre, also serve to attract great numbers of people nightly. One moving picture theatre in the neighborhood seats 4,500 and runs each evening both indoor and open-air shows.

There are to be found in a survey of the neighborhood solid blocks of five-story apartments flanking every side of the junction. They are equipped with all modern improvements and are of a uniform type of construction. The rents, according to local agents, range from $5 per room for the "walk-ups" to $11 per room for the elevator apartment, with practically small concessions. The tenants are principally small manufacturers and people of comfortable means, who have been attracted to this section from nearly every section of the city.

To meet the demands of this vast army of apartment house dwellers who patronize the local dealers, a chain of taxpayers has been erected on Prospect avenue, Westchester avenue and Longwood avenue. Practically every class of trade is represented from the 5 and 10 cent store to the furniture business, and cabaret. While no particular kind is conspicuous, there seems to be a large number of concerns dealing in ladies' wearing apparel, including furs, millinery, corsets, etc. The stores have fine show windows, and being built as taxpayers, have great depth. This class of building, namely, the one and two story, for business purposes is the prevailing type, because it enjoys distinct advantages over the apartment house. Where taxpayers have not been built the lower floors of frame buildings and flat houses have been altered to meet the steady demand for such kind of property. There are probably 150 stores established on the various avenues with practically no vacancies. For the benefit of the local business men who are permanently established, there are two business banks, the Union and Westchester Branch of the State Bank and the Cosmopolitan Bank.

Rents and Values.

"The renting situation is exceptionally good," said Robert E. Simon, this week, "and rents have increased considerably. Three leases which expired recently affecting Prospect avenue properties have been renewed at increased rentals, which indicate not only the desirability of the avenue for business purposes but also the willingness of merchants to hold on to their present locations."

"Property values on Prospect avenue have undergone a phenomenal growth within recent years," said Emil Leitner, of the office of Jacob Leitner, "and in several instances the rent of the ground floors of buildings almost equals the price for which the lots could have been purchased ten years ago. Lots which could have been purchased at that time for $4,000, a conservative appraiser will hold today at $40,000. The northwest corner of Prospect avenue and 160th street, a one-story building on a plot 77 by 120 is under lease for $16,000 a year net, which creates a value of about $320,000. The ice-cream parlor just opposite is leased for $6,000 a year.

"While there has been no recent selling activity, this cannot be regarded as an evidence of weakness. Most of the property is improved with taxpayers, which are bringing excellent returns to owners on their investments, and they are holding on because the properties pay so well. The most important of the recent deals involved a plot on the west side of Prospect avenue between 163d and 165th street, where lots were sold at an average of about $14,000. This property has since been improved by a taxpayer with a theatre in the rear."

Although there are no new building operations contemplated in the business district, a number of new apartment houses are being erected in the immediate neighborhood. The block fronts in the west side of 163d street between Stebbins avenue and Rogers place and between Rogers place and Intervale avenue are being improved with high-class multi-family structures, typical of this section. A dozen similar houses are being built on Stebbins avenue between Westchester and Longfellow avenues. Others have recently been completed on the east side of Westchester avenue, between Hewitt place and 163d street. One of the more important of the recently completed buildings is the Empire Theatre with stores at Westchester avenue and 161st street.

The Fall building market outlook as affecting new operations is generally being regarded as not particularly encouraging, on account of the probable difficulty in obtaining loans. Those new

CONCRETE HOUSE CONSTRUCTION

Problems to be Faced by Builders and Architects—Various Methods Shown and Merits and Demerits Discussed.*

By GURDON S. MUMFORD

DUE to the increased use of concrete in industrial and business buildings remarkable developments have taken place in this branch of the industry, though until recently little advance has been made in the class of buildings of residential character. Dampness is the principal objection to concrete construction. It is easy to see that if a solid wall thoroughly chilled has warm air suddenly impinged upon it that the moisture in the air will be condensed as with an ice water pitcher on a warm day. Now ordinary, monolithic concrete of a fairly rich mixture is practically waterproof. The condensed water is not readily absorbed by the wall—hence the damp condition that follows. Brick, tile and many other materials are absorbents of water to a certain degree—wood to a large degree.

It is quite clear then that if we want to eliminate dampness from sweating we must approximate the condition of such materials that do not sweat and a construction that cannot be damp under any conditions.

Various Types.

To begin with, there is the typical wet mix. Here the water practically carries the cement in saturated solution to all surfaces of the aggregate and deposits it there, enough mixing and churning being given to distribute the cement-saturated water evenly. This type has many advantages as to ultimate strength and waterproof qualities and is universally specified, but it is not in the least adapted to residence work, either as a final material or as an economy proposition.

At the other extreme is the typical dry mix (used fifteen years ago in foundations and rather generally in the concrete block industry to-day). This type, on account of excessive porosity and the great amount of tamping or pressure needed, is equally unfitted for residences. Midway in the scale, however, is another kind of concrete that has some remarkable properties—which are just what the house builder is after.

Voids Wanted.

This mix should have primarily an excess of the medium sized aggregate and sand. That is, we want voids but we want them very, very small and not connected, so to speak. In other words, we want to approximate the structure of wood or brick, not the closeness and homogenity of steel. It should be wet and plastic like mud, but with no surplus of water, and requires mixing for a comparatively long time. Finally, it should be rapidly cured or dried out by removing the forms as soon as possible. The qualities of this product are peculiar. It will absorb water to a moderate amount without being subject to leakage and attains considerable tensile strength while still green; also it does not exert much pressure when setting and is not nearly so subject to expansion and contraction as a wet mix. Cracks will often re-knit 24 hours after final set, on application of pressure. Frequently scrapings from a wall, two days old, catch on the wall below and set up again, adhering so firmly that a cold chisel is required to dislodge them. Further, such a mix when cast in wall form is strong enough to hold four feet of concrete above without side support, and yet is soft enough to cut like cheese at the bottom, and is an ideal material for certain purposes.

*Excerpts from a paper read at the First Annual Convention of the American Society of Engineers, Architects and Constructors.

But what we started after was, to begin with, a material approximating brick and wood, with little tendency to sweat—and finally a construction that would nullify whatever tendency there was. The last requirement is not by the double wall, that is, two concrete walls with an air space between. To carry this construction through, however, economically and structurally, several serious difficulties had to be overcome.

Problems to Be Solved.

First—Some practical construction method was needed to transmit and equalize the weights coming on the inner and outer wall. Obviously, two thin slabs stuck up on edge, one slab taking all the floor weights and the other only its own weight and part of the roof and tied together merely at intervals by through ties at right angles to walls, was not altogether satisfactory, unless each wall was over thick; also comparatively thin slabs of any length or height are particularly subject to temperature shrinkage and resultant cracking, thus requiring much reinforcing steel.

Second—A double wall construction calling for the use of core forms presents the item of considerable expense, and many practical difficulties arise if a standard construction is used. Again, the ordinary form methods are practically out of the question, due to certain special conditions peculiar to house building, viz., number and variety of openings, irregularity of walls, necessity of placing beams without waiting a long time or the great number and variety of chases, plugs or openings to be anticipated.

Third—In a general way, the point of economy so governs the whole question of residence work that unless it can be shown clearly that concrete is at least as cheap as other masonry construction it is idle to consider whether or not it is satisfactory as a whole.

Along Definite Lines.

Concrete construction has grown along certain definite lines, the general experience being that forms and form work are comparatively expensive, but that the mixing and placing can be done quite cheaply by machinery, mixer and chutes, provided there is enough yardage of cubic amount to pay the cost of installing the plant and running the system. This is based on the use of a very wet liquid mix, as that is the only kind that will flow readily.

So that, to a very great extent, working along these lines, all endeavor has gone into cheapening the handling end, very little, until recently, into investigating conditions of the mix or improving the forms. This, of course, is largely due to the ease of handling a wet mix and the fact that if enough stories are to be cast in a high building the initial cost of the forming is divided sufficiently often to bring out a very reasonable total.

But in the smaller type of building and residence we have an entirely different proposition. The wet mix is not a satisfactory material; the yardage will not justify an elaborate handling plant, and the forming cannot be standardized upward.

Way to Save.

The savings here must be made in another way, by the method and forms themselves, in cutting down the labor of setting them up and taking down, in eliminating to a great extent the cost of shifting, in providing an automatic plumb and alignment scheme that is independent of care and trade skill, and, lastly, in using standard forms in big units that can be used on any and all buildings, irrespective of varying wall lengths, and all this with little or no depreciation of forms and equipment. This can be accomplished by a scheme of standardization longitudinally. Previously the small cast concrete building had apparently been conceived entirely as a monolith, somewhat as the first sidewalks were made, without joints.

The introduction of a separately built joint member in connection with cast walls and girders made possible the satisfying of the various form criterions noted above and also did away with the structural difficulties previously mentioned as connected with the double wall.

Example on Long Island.

In a concrete residence on Long Island, the walls of which were recently completed by this method, the entire cost of cellar and walls, including setting and shifting forms and depreciation, averaged $5.50 a cubic yard. There were 385 cubic yards in the entire building. The dimensions of the building were 62.6x41.6x23.6 from first floor beams to roof plate. The approximate time of erection above first floor beams was fourteen working days.

As the walls largely consisted of two 4-inch slabs, each square foot of wall surface represented the equivalent of two-thirds of a cubic foot, which gave a cost per square foot of wall surface of fourteen cents. The conveying apparatus used consisted of a 5 cubic foot mixer with hoist and bucket dumping into a very short steep chute, which in turn emptied into wheelbarrows. No scaffolding whatever was erected, runways over horses and on second floor beams being substituted.

Overhead Cost.

There is one other factor in the general problem, namely, the overhead cost of concrete work. The tendency has been in the building art to develop concrete work as a thing apart for large buildings and structures requiring great strength. Architects and engineers have become accustomed to use a standard form of specification whose requirements, if lived up to, furnished a product suitable to heavy structures, and little else. To require an ultimate strength of 2,500 pounds to the square inch where the maximum strain would never be 25 is certainly keeping on the safe side, but obviously a little absurd and very uneconomical.

The result has been that (1) in small work the requirements have not been lived up to, which practice has been more or less condoned by architects on account of the high factor of safety and (2) the segregation of the skilled concrete workers into a class employed almost entirely on big work.

But concrete is rapidly coming in as a universal building material, and with the enormous demand for cement and gravel we will find it inexpedient to be wasteful with it, either directly or indirectly, and there will soon be a real demand for skill in its use as a plastic building material, which will automatically remedy the present condition.

The individual income tax receipts for the year were $28,253,534, of which New York paid $12,522,797.

MEETING THE DEMAND FOR HOMES

How Property Owners and Development Companies Are Making Inducements to Entice Young Apartment House Dwellers Into the Country

WHEN there is a slump in the money market the young married man with an ambition to own a home of his own meets his golden opportunity. Chances are prevalent today that will not exist hereabouts for another generation. Suburban homes are being bought today at bargains never dreamed of by either househunter or investor.

The unexpected stagnation of money just at a time when the whole business world was expecting a big trade recovery from the depression of the last year has thrown many development companies into embarrassing straits. They find themselves land poor just at the time when they had expected to be reaping the harvest of their enterprise and foresight. Great public improvements that were required to bring new properties into demand; and to make tracts already developed populous, have been shelved, and yet thousands of dollars have been spent on the tracts. If they cease their operations now, the tracts will go to seed. They have got to go ahead. If they cannot get new sewers, they will have to use cesspools until the financial market straightens out sufficiently to warrant the city in making the necessary appropriation. If they cannot get piped water, they will have to use artesian wells. If they cannot get rapid transit, they will have to get along with slower transportation until the city can finance them. But no matter what happens these developments cannot stop.

Construction is cheaper in cost today than it has been in years, or than it will be in a decade hereafter, if the market follows its logical trend. These development operations have been pushed with the building material at its lowest level. Next spring it will be higher and if the war continues it will be increasingly high as the next few years unwind. It is the salvation of the development investors to get their projected houses completed while the price of material is low.

Why Inducements Are Made.

Money is tight; so tight that it is extremely difficult to raise funds on mortgages on suburban property that is not tenanted and showing some income. It is physically impossible to raise money on mortgages placed on untenanted homes on isolated tracts in the suburbs, whether it be in Queens, Brooklyn, Bronx, Westchester or New Jersey. But it is different when there are people living in the houses, and the front gardens are well kept, and there are signs of life on the cut-up farms of half a decade since. So the development company is making inducements to the men of moderate means, who have steady employment and who are of good reputation to come out to the suburbs and buy good, modern houses on easy terms.

Easy Terms Are Offered.

There is a very large number of empty suburban homes in the metropolitan district. These homes rent from $25 a month to $60. In practically every case the sign on the front indicates that the place is "for sale or for rent," and the conditions of sale in a great many instances are almost identical with those of rental. Houses that formerly rented from $35 to $50 a month are obtainable today with improvements on leases running from one to three years, at $30 to $40. Houses that brought $60 are a drug on the market, not only in the New Jersey suburbs, but throughout the district. Even in the resort sections of Long Island houses running more than ten rooms in size are not in demand.

Here in New York, however, the apartment house demand is keener than it has been in years. There is a great inrush of foreign residents who are filling the hotels and higher priced apartments so that within a month a condition of stagnation in this department of the real estate market has changed perceptibly. It has tended to make the attitude of the renting agent more rigid for his own terms and in consequence the man who pays only moderate rent is not so likely to make the arrangements he would like to make. And here is where the suburban home salesman gets in his fine argument.

All that he has to do is to convince the young man of family that it is healthier for him to get up a little earlier in the morning in order to catch a train that will get him to the office at the regular time; that he had better buy his coal direct than pay the apartment house company a profit on the coal that supplies his share of heat; that he can have his little barrel of ashes removed for ten cents a week, and that this amount of money can be netted in the summer time out of his own little truck farm that graces his backyard.

Coming down to the children, the salesman can inspire an imagination in the apartment dweller that his children's cheeks will reflect the suburban sunlight instead of the pallor of the paved street and that the crickets and the tree toads instead of the huxters and the L roads will lull and wake him and his tired wife, and that as for shovelling snow and cutting the lawn, he as a shut-in man of sedentary habits needs the exercise—and lo! he has got the apartment dweller on the road to owning his own home on a modest basis of $35 a month rent, part of which is a monthly slice off the total cost of the house he lives in and some day will own.

Construction Costs May Increase.

A few more tenants and the development company can raise a mortgage to carry it until the European war is over and there is a regular demand for homes in the suburbs. But then the cost of materials will be higher, and Europe will be demanding such large sums for rehabilitation that interest rates will be stiffer so that it will not be possible to put up structures to sell on easy terms at any such rates as are now obtainable. Furthermore, populated centers remove one stereotyped objection of the city dweller against going to the country—isolation.

There are building loan societies and home buying leagues galore, but the thrifty chap with an ambition and a steady job can take a financial short-cut now to his own home in the suburbs, and a physical one when the subway improvements are made.

WHERE THE CRICKETS AND THE TREE TOADS SUCCEED THE HUCKSTER AND THE "L."

A Unique Suggestion for the Building Code.

Among suggestions received for the Building Code is one for a provision for screening all windows of buildings except those on the street fronts. The purpose of this is to prevent tenants or occupants of buildings from throwing trash and other things out of the windows into adjoining premises or down upon the roofs of adjoining buildings of less height. These screens would be so affixed that they could be opened in case of necessity, but it should be made unlawful to have them opened except in case of necessity.

—Renting in the Park Slope section of Brooklyn is the best in recent years. Apartments are being leased much earlier than in other seasons and there are fewer apartments vacant this year than any previous season.

President Wilson's prediction of a boom "in six weeks" came true in a way, but it was a different kind of a boom.

Hard times in the financial district mean vacancies in the best apartment house districts. But it is said the Stock Exchange will be open again in a few weeks—not months.

The most formidable influence that has to be contended with in any public effort to introduce efficiency into State and municipal affairs is, of course, represented by those political forces that are ever seeking an excuse to create new public and semi-public offices, and ever trying to keep alive old ones, for the sake of the salaries or fees to be derived.

No public question of more vital interest to the men and women who have a stake in this city and State than the question of what is to be done to mitigate the evils of over-regulation of private property and premises. A declaration of principles should be demanded from every political party seeking control of the functions of government at the coming elections, so that the taxpayers may know where these parties stand and what is to be expected of them.

The state of employment in the building trades has steadily improved since the opening of the season and is now officially reported as good, if an exception is made for the bricklaying trade. This is a remarkable state of affairs in view of the depression in general business, and is accounted for by the fact that building operations in the suburbs, especially on Long Island, are above normal. Engineering operations (public works) are, on the other hand, employing less than the usual number of men.

The Plan for a General Building Department.

The plan submitted by the New York State Factory Investigating Commission to remedy the evils in the present system of inspection of buildings has, since it was announced, been the occasion both of action and discussion. The action has been taken by the Real Estate Board of New York, which has appointed a committee of seventeen members who are to work with the Factory Investigating Commission in the carrying out of its proposed plan. This committee will contain representatives of real estate men, resident in all five boroughs, and its co-operation will be of the utmost value.

Opposition to the plan of the commission is to be expected as a matter of course. The centralization of building inspection in a bureau, the head of which will be appointed by the Mayor of New York, will affect a number of existing groups of officials. It will affect, among others, the officials employed by the State Industrial Commission and the Bureau of Labor, who are now engaged in enforcing State laws, and it will affect the local building departments of the outer boroughs which are now independent of central control and are appointed by the Borough Presidents. The plan is likely to meet with hostility from both of these sources, and in order to win out it will require on the part of the real estate interests resolute and intelligent support.

The case of the local building departments was admirably expressed in the Record and Guide of last week by the Hon. Cyrus C. Miller, formerly President of the Borough of the Bronx and a man who is not given to urging captious objection to desirable administrative reforms. Mr. Miller's complaint is in general that the building business of New York is too vast, and too complicated and too much determined by local conditions to be satisfactorily inspected from one central office. Mr. Miller proposes, consequently, to consolidate the work of inspection, but to delegate it to the building departments of the several boroughs. There is, however, not the remotest chance that such an organization of inspections will prove acceptable to the powerful element in public opinion which sustains the work of the State Commission. The Building Department under the proposed plan will be more than a bureau of inspection. There will necessarily be vested in it a certain discretion in issuing orders, and in modifying orders to meet new conditions. It will be very difficult to obtain the consent of the people who are interested in factory inspection to the granting of this power to a department under the control of the Mayor. It would be impossible to get their consent to the delegation of this power to a local official who was responsible only to the administrative chief and the public sentiment of his own borough.

The Record and Guide is inclined to believe that Mr. Miller over-estimated the administrative difficulties which would result from the centralization of inspection. It would, of course, be necessary to establish a local office, headed by a deputy commissioner, in each borough. The inspectors would report to the local office and all of the ordinary routine work of inspection would be transacted through the local force. An appeal to the central office would be necessary only in the case of some doubtful clause of the law, or of some special ruling, which a builder or a factory owner might desire to get. It would not be imposing an excessive burden upon such a builder, or owner, to ask him to submit his claim to a department with its headquarters in Manhattan. These cases would not be numerous in the business of any one man, and a central department which was operating in all the boroughs, which was more independent of local pressure, and which could benefit by the largest fund of experience and the best quality of expert advice—such a department would be more likely to exercise its discretionary power in a wise and disinterested manner.

It is this matter of the discretionary power, necessarily vested in the Department of Buildings, which makes the problem of reorganization so difficult. If it were possible to pass a definite and complete code, which would contain in final form all the regulations which were necessary to promote the safety of buildings and the wellbeing of their occupants, the work of enforcing the law would be mechanical and would depend merely upon a sufficient amount of inspection and the honesty of the inspectors. But the whole tendency of modern regulation of business activities under the police power is to seek results rather than rigidly to define methods. It has been found, after a long and costly experience, that regulation in detail is either inefficient or oppressive or both. No matter how much the statute goes into detail, the legislators cannot anticipate all the expedients which will be invented to defeat its purposes. Neither can they devise the best means which can be taken to carry out its objects. The best methods are constantly changing and a rigid statute constitutes a barrier to improvement.

The laws which have been passed to safeguard the construction of buildings in New York City and to make the industrial operations carried on therein more wholesome, contain a mixture of the old theory of legislation and the new. They require revision, and there can be no doubt that the revision, as it comes, will little by little reverse the amount of discretions which is bestowed upon the officials who administer the law. They will be made responsible, not for the obeying of a definite order, but for the accomplishment of a salutary result. Under such conditions the honest and intelligent administration of the law will become as important as the law itself. The Building Department will not be a mere servant of the Legislature. It will become the professional adviser which the Legislature employs in order to accomplish a desired object. It will need the service of men of experience, integrity and ability for the accomplishment of its work, and it will need to be independent of political pressure.

Whenever large discretionary powers have been conferred on administrative officials the tendency has been to vest them in a board rather than in a single commissioner; and we have no doubt that when the plan of the Factory Investigating Commission comes to be worked out it will include some methods of bestowing upon the ruling of the department the authority of an expert board rather than the personal judgment of a single man. In this, as in other respects, the details of the proposed legislation have still to be carefully considered. Mr. Rudolph P. Miller points that in drawing it up some arrangement should be made for consultation with the Charter Revision Committee of the Board of Estimate. It has been announced that this committee has been at work for a long time and has made considerable progress in drawing up a new instrument of government for New York City. The new charter will necessarily deal with organization and work of the Building Department, and any method of organization, which it proposes, should not differ essentially from that supported by the local real estate interests. If possible an agreement should be reached upon a definite bill with the Board of Estimate Committee so that the New York real estate interests can have the support of that local government in demanding at Albany a redress of their existing grievances.

—Wine, beer and freight in transit will carry the new war taxes, according to present plans in Congress; and there will be no tax on automobiles, gasolene, magazines or checks. The Government needs one hundred million dollars more annually in order to meet expenses because of the falling off in customs duties on account of the war.

The New Plan for a Great Central Freight Terminal.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Supplementing our former article, which suggested the location of the central freight depot of New York on Randall's and Wards Islands, after they should have been annexed as a peninsula to the Borough of the Bronx, in place of the present main or distributing freight depot at 59th street and Hudson River, permit us to submit herewith some further suggestions, showing what appears to us to be the most practical manner of distributing the freight from the central depot on Randall's and Wards Islands to the several boroughs, constituting Greater New York, as promised in our former article.

An additional reason for so doing may be found in the urgent request appearing in the Record and Guide of recent date that a comprehensive plan of freight terminal development should be submitted, to which the various plans now under consideration in the several boroughs could be correlated, so as to secure ultimately a harmonious development and satisfactory solution of this most difficult question.

The fact that the city of New York has definitely committed itself to the principle of municipal freight railroad building, in Brooklyn, on July 30 of this year, by commencing legal proceedings necessary for the construction of a freight railroad from the Brooklyn Bridge to Red Hook furnishes another argument to show how important is the discussion of this general subject, if we wish to avoid its treatment from a narrow, local standpoint, without regard to the interests of the city at large. Inquiry in the Borough of the Bronx developed the fact that former Borough President Cyrus C. Miller had prepared, through his engineers, a plan for a freight railroad in form of a large loop extending along the water front, beginning and ending in the immediate neighborhood of Randall's Island, and therefore most suitable to be incorporated into the plan advocated in this writing.

The Public Service Commission has adopted as a part of the general system of subways, a tunnel to Staten Island, from Brooklyn, of sufficient size to permit the transmission of freight trains, with the object of making it a link in the ultimate circle of freight railroad development. On Staten Island itself, carefully worked-out plans for harbors and freight line connections have been made, as set forth in a recent article in the Record and Guide.

In the Borough of Queens, the officials of the Chamber of Commerce are most anxious for a freight line along the water front, extending beneath the Queensboro Bridge, northward from Newtown Creek, to a point opposite to the southerly end of Wards Island, which line might easily be connected with the central freight depot on that island by a short tunnel.

It appears, therefore, that in the other boroughs of Greater New York, as well as in Manhattan, the question of the transportation of freight by a municipal railroad is being demanded, and it is therefore most advisable that the solution of the question in Manhattan should be found in such a form as to satisfy the demands of the other boroughs, and to form with them one harmonious system for the whole of Greater New York. In fact, when we consider that this solution is being made now, not only temporarily, but practically for the life of the Metropolis, so far as we can foresee it, it behooves us to look at the question most carefully and without partisan desire merely for our own immediate profit.

It happens, however, that the plan which would seem best suited to the other boroughs is not less adapted to the real commercial interests of Manhattan and is also most particularly suited to preserve to that borough the character of a great residential center of the world's richest and most cultured civic population. Moreover, the expense of the elevated freight railroad, just mentioned, from Brooklyn Bridge to Red Hook seems hardly justified, unless it is built as a link in a general chain of similar lines, connected with each other and with the central freight yard of Greater New York; for the Bush warehouses as well as the New York Dock Company warehouses, already has each, its local freight railroad for handling the freight of that locality on the immediate waterfront; why then build a municipal freight railroad, duplicating these two lines, at the back of the warehouses? For local needs it is certainly not necessary; as a link in a general system of municipal freight transportation, it will be most useful.

It is submitted, therefore, that the city authorities must have given their approval to such a scheme and that they will welcome any suggestions, tending to furnish a harmonious solution of the gigantic problem of uniting the warehouse district, present and future, of the several boroughs with each other, and with the main central freight depot. The large expense for a market, connected with this Brooklyn freight railroad project, shows that the city is committed also to the principle of purchasing and developing large areas suitable to urgent municipal needs, connected with food distribution, a central freight depot certainly falls within this class of investments. Assuming that in our former article we have shown important advantages to be derived by the Borough of Manhattan from relieving its main residential neighborhood, from the incubus of a freight railroad and freight yard on the Hudson River waterfront, between 59th street and Spuyten Duyvil, through the location of the central freight yard on a peninsula to be formed by the union of those islands and by attaching them to the Borough of the Bronx. We wish to call attention to the fact that such location would also meet the requirements, already set forth, by affording a suitable center to which the warehouse districts of the several boroughs could be easily united, thereby also securing mutual connection of their several actual or prospective local freight lines.

J. BLEECKER MILLER,
REGINALD PELHAM BOLTON.

Brooklyn League for Consolidation.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

We have given considerable attention to the matter of unifying the various departments which have charge of the examination of buildings, both factories and apartment houses. There is no doubt that at the present time there is much confusion and uncertainty resulting from conflicting orders and requirements of the various departments. We believe it would be much more satisfactory to owners of such buildings to have one system of inspection under the charge of one central department.

We do not believe that there should be any relaxation in the requirements imposed upon builders and owners, but under such a unified system we think that the inspection would be more efficient; that the welfare of the occupants and workers in such buildings would be sufficiently protected; and that the owners and builders would be able to know definitely just what their obligations were, and whether or not they had been correctly performed.

Therefore, the organization which I represent is in favor of such a unified system of inspection.

CHARLES H. FULLER,
Pres't Brooklyn League.

—The hearing which the State Labor Commissioner was to have accorded the public at City Hall this week was not held, but postponed indefinitely at the Commissioner's request. Real estate interests in New York would like to reach an understanding with the Commissioner in view of the general dissatisfaction with inspection laws. Rumors are to the effect that Commissioner Lynch is not in sympathy with the efforts of the State Factory Investigating Commission in certain directions.

WARNING FROM R. E. BOARD.

Everyone Should Be Particularly Careful at This Time in Regard to Fire Hazard.

An interesting and rather startling side light on the effect of the European War on local business and finance is furnished by correspondence between a fire insurance company and the Real Estate Board of New York. The conditions pointed out by the insurance company are considered by the Real Estate Board sufficiently grave to require prompt attention on its part.

For this reason it has sent out to its entire membership a letter calling attention: 1st, to the serious consequences that would result from a conflagration at this time, because of existing financial conditions; 2nd, to the necessity for agents warning holders of fire insurance policies to take special precautions for safety; 3rd, to the urgent necessity of all members of the Real Estate Board notifying the insurance companies where risks are not sufficiently covered in proportion to the fire hazard. The Real Estate Board's warning to its members follows:

Gentlemen:—We are in receipt of a letter from a prominent fire insurance company enclosing clippings from the Journal of Commerce, and referring to a matter that is of extreme importance to the general business situation and our own business as well.

The clipping states that normal fire losses have been heavy, and if a serious conflagration should come the existing banking conditions would produce unusual results, as the fire companies would have to sell securities. With the Stock Exchange closed and practically no market, this would lead to a disturbance which would be serious to all.

Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, have instructed their help to be exceptionally careful at this time regarding fire hazard, and advise all to take wise precautions, particularly at present, to prevent fire loss.

The insurance company, commenting on this, says: "Fire insurance companies are about the only market where a man can realize a hundred cents on the dollar for his building, machinery or stock. The moral hazard that is created is unprecedented and serious. The greatest service an agent can render at this particular time is to consider carefully the position of every policyholder. If he fails to measure up in character, good housekeeping on his own premises, safe control of fire hazard, or doubtful financial condition, you should act in the interest of the companies, which is also the public's at this time."

I beg to commend the entire soundness of the propositions to your immediate notice. Where there is any doubt on your part as to the extra hazard of the companies now, it is your immediate duty to advise the Fire Insurance Companies of this fact so that they may take such action as they deem advisable for the protection of themselves and the community at large.

Considering the large amount of insurance placed by the Board members acting as insurance brokers, it is highly desirable that our members take immediate action to convince insurance companies that their interest essentially is our interest, as well as the interest of the bulk of the policyholders whose risks they now insure. You cannot act too quickly in this matter for the benefit of all. Very truly yours,

ELISHA SNIFFIN,
Secretary.

A Brick Manufacturing Center.

In the vicinity of Kingston on the Hudson there are seventeen brick manufacturing plants, with a maximum capacity of about 300,000,000 brick annually. These plants, when running to full capacity, employ about 2,500 men, with a semi-monthly payroll amounting to more than $60,000. This, together with the large number of brick barges employed to transport the brick to the New York market, aids materially in keeping busy towing lines and boat building plants located in the city.

TAXPAYERS' FALL CAMPAIGN.

United Real Estate Owners' Associations Plan Many Activities for Realty Owners.

During the past year the real estate organizations of the city have shown an active and intelligent interest in the city's affairs. At almost every public hearing, at which the finances or the real estate of the city were discussed, the realty interests were represented in large numbers. The fact that their activity is not to abate, but is to become greater and more general than before, is evidenced by the ambitious program of the United Real Estate Owners' Association at their first fall meeting on last Tuesday evening at the Astor Hotel.

Henry Bloch, the president, in outlining the work of his association, stated yesterday: "All preparations have been made for an energetic and vigorous campaign for the owners of real estate in this city. We have twenty active committees studying the many problems confronting the property owner, and helping to restore confidence in the ownership of real estate, which has in these troublesome times proven itself to be the safest and most secure of investments. Owners have but recently realized that the burden of the cost of the city government has been borne by real estate almost alone, and that they were practically the sole direct payers of taxes. They have determined to assert themselves and to be heard when any proposal involving a large expenditure of money by the city is planned. Officials, too, have displayed a desire to cooperate with taxpayers.

"Our Budget Committee has been promised every facility in its study of the departmental estimates of the various city departments. It is also gratifying to know that plans are being prepared, seeking to bring about a consolidation of several of the Municipal Departments having jurisdiction over buildings—a project which our Association has and will continue to vigorously advocate. This plan, if adopted, will relieve the owner of one of his greatest burdens. Multiplicity of inspections and duplicity of orders by the city departments make the ownership of real estate undesirable. The owner now is often annoyed and harassed by the many requirements until he in bewilderment sometimes wonders whether the city or he owns the property he has paid for.

"The opening of the 'Headquarters for Taxpayers' at 170 Broadway has met with approval among realty interests. The facilities of the 'Headquarters' are at the disposal of all taxpayers. We now have what the taxpayers have long wanted—a recognized meeting place for the discussion of civic and realty problems—a central bureau of information for owners of property. Taxpayers are invited to call.

"Every effort is being made to materially increase our membership. Negotiations are now pending for an affiliation with our organization by the 'Taxpayers' Alliance of The Bronx,' a large and influential body from that borough; the 'Upper-Manhattan Taxpayers' Association' and the 'Chester Taxpayers' Alliance,' a federation of ten taxpayer associations. With these members, the United Real Estate Owners' Associations will be represented in almost every section of Manhattan and The Bronx."

—Engineering operations depending on railroad and municipal activities are decidedly slack this fall, and a large proportion of engineers are disengaged.

A GREAT TRAFFIC CENTER.

Difficulties in Constructing the New Diagonal Subway Station.

At the meeting of the Commissioners yesterday afternoon the bids were opened for the important contract to construct the Diagonal station which will connect the present subway in Park avenue, Manhattan, at 42d street with the new Lexington avenue route north of that point, the two to form the new East Side Route of the Interborough portion of the Dual Subway system from the Joralemon street tunnel to the Bronx.

This station will be adjacent to and connected with the Grand Central Terminal. It will also unite with the Hudson Tubes extension and with the Steinway Tunnel connection. Shuttle trains in Forty-second street will connect it with the Times Square station in the new West Side Route, the present system of operating trains from the Bridge up Park avenue, across in 42d street, and on up Broadway to the Yonkers line and to the Bronx being abandoned after the new routes are ready.

The engineers say that the construction of this connection will present many new engineering features, and that it will be one of the most difficult engineering problems in the dual system. This contract extends from points in Park avenue, near 38th and 41st streets (tracks connecting with the present subway at both of these points) northerly under Park avenue and the old Grand Union Hotel property to the north line of 42d street. Also, at a lower level easterly under 42d street to about 100 feet east of Lexington avenue to a connection with the Steinway Tunnel.

The construction of the line from 42d street under the property of the New York Central will be carried on under an agreement with that company. The work on the Park avenue end of the connection will have to be prosecuted while trains in the present subway are operating, in the rush hours on a headway of less than two minutes between trains. This will necessitate a great deal of work being done after midnight. The tracks in the connection are also to be linked up with the tracks in the existing subway, and this will be accomplished by switching trains from the track on which work is proceeding to other tracks.

Skyscraper Over Station.

The Diagonal Station and its concourse, located immediately above the tracks, will be one of the strongest built stations in the world. With its two platforms and four tracks it will be more than 100 feet wide, yet it is to be built strong enough to support a twenty-five story building, on the site of the old Grand Union Hotel, which has been demolished so that the work can be carried on.

Franchise Granted

The committee, composed of members of the Queens Chamber of Commerce, has been active in aiding the Long Island Railroad to obtain a franchise for a side track across Borden avenue, Long Island City, at Fox street, in order that a big industrial plant from the West may be installed at this point. It is stated that the initial structure to be built will cost about $2,000,000 and will furnish employment to more than 2,500 persons. The completed plan, it is stated, will cost not less than $7,000,000 and employ some 5,000 people.

The granting of the franchise was opposed by the Bureau of Franchises on the following grounds: 1—General principle of grade crossing being objectionable; 2—Because Borden avenue is used by funerals proceeding to Calvary Cemetery; 3—Because there is a trolley line on Borden avenue.

The members of the committee co-operating with the Merchants' Association, the Long Island Railroad, and the owners of the property, called upon both Borough President Connolly and Mayor Mitchel and urged their co-operation to obtain this switch in order that the industry might locate in New York City. The Board of Estimate at its meeting of July 2nd, passed a resolution authorizing the granting of the franchise.

OLD REALTY MARKET.

Public Operations in Real Estate Have Existed in New York City for Two Hundred Years.

Public operations in realty have been continuing in New York City for 200 years. At the northeast corner of Broad and Water streets, probably, stood the Exchange Coffee House. It was near or opposite the Exchange, built in 1691 or 1692, at what was then the foot of Broad street. The Coffee House certainly dated back to 1701, and it is there that, after 1704, all meetings seem to have been held.

As early as March 1, 1730, an advertisement in the New York Gazette, the first paper in New York, founded in 1725, offered some land for sale.

This early advertisement appeared thus:

"Public Notice is hereby given, That on the 22d day of September next, will be Sold at Public Vendue or Outcry, at the Exchange Coffee House, in the City of New York, to the Highest bidder, A certain House and Ground, on the East side of Broadway in the said City, now in the Possession of Capt. Matthew Norris. Also a House and Ground, on the same Side of the same Street, opposite to the Bowling Green, now in the Possession of Samuel Rout. And also, a Parcel of Land on the South side of Crown Street, being about One Hundred Foot Square; now in the Possession of Daniel Horsmanden, Esq.; and is part of the Garden commonly called Barberie's Garden.

N. B. For all which Houses and Grounds an indisputable Title will be given to the Purchasers thereof."

In 1737, the same paper contained an advertisement of the sale to be held at the Exchange Coffee House, of three parcels of land, two of these being on lower Broadway and the third on Crown, the present Liberty street. The latter property belonged to Chief Justice Daniel Horsmanden, eminent lawyer and author of the "History of the Negro Plot," now a rarity.—Wall Street Journal.

CIVIC CENTER IN EAST BRONX.

buildings already under way will in all probability be completed and in the light of precedent will have no difficulty in being tenanted. While the transit facilities of the section are at present satisfactory, it is expected that the installation of the Broadway-Lexington avenue line will not only tend to lessen the congestion, but will also cut down the running time to the downtown districts by about ten minutes. The various surface lines, including the Westchester avenue, Clason Point and East 163d street lines, place the section in touch with all parts of the Bronx for one fare.

Prospect avenue with its thriving shops, its theatres and its evening crowds, is becoming one of the leading business thoroughfares of the Bronx. With thousands of residents from the thickly populated apartment house blocks pouring nightly into the avenue, and with all the resultant benefits to the business man, the high rents are apparently justified. New apartment houses are nearing completion, which will mean even a greater inflow of population, making the future of the avenue assured. In the present, Prospect avenue, typical of the wonderful strides which the Borough of the Bronx has made in the last ten years, offers an interesting study. Ten years ago it was a private house section, with buildings few and far between. Today it is a flourishing business street, with every foot of space utilized.

Astoria and Flushing Want New Line Built.

The Public Service Commission adopted a resolution on July 30, granting a rehearing in the proceeding to require the New York & Queens County Railway Co. to extend its railway on Flushing-Astoria road from Ehret avenue to Jackson avenue. The hearing will be held on Friday, September 11. E. A. MacDougall has been appointed to represent the Transit Committee of the Chamber of Commerce at the hearing.

This rehearing is the result of a petition prepared by Gilbert W. Roberts, president of the Flushing Association, and signed by Robert W. Higbie, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens; M. A. Maher, president Civic Association of Corona; F. H. Backe, president East Elmhurst Association; Charles H. Buchanan, president North Shore Civic Association; G. Wurtmann, chairman of the Flushing-Astoria Transit Committee, and by Gilbert Roberts, president of the Flushing Association.

The proceedings were discontinued in the former hearing on April 24th, Commissioners Cram and Maltbie favoring the construction of this line, and Commissioners McCall, Williams and Eustis voting against it. The petition for the rehearing states that at the former hearing testimony was not brought out to show the legal obligation of the New York & Queens County Railway Co. to construct and operate its line of the Flushing-Astoria road from Ehret avenue to Jackson avenue.

The construction of this extension will open a large territory of the First and Second Wards of Queens and give a direct route from the Astoria section of Long Island City to Flushing and other parts of the North Shore, the residents of which are now compelled to travel many miles out of their way between Astoria and Flushing.

Disbursements for Subways.

The Public Service Commission has furnished the Department of Taxes with a statement of the disbursements made by the City of New York for rapid transit purposes from the beginning of the existing subway work to June 30, 1914. The statement also shows the disbursements for the first six months of 1914 by which it appears that the City of New York for those six months paid out on an average more than $1,650,000 per month, or a total for the six months of $9,703,443.02. In addition, during the same six months the Interborough Rapid Transit Company paid out of its contribution $560,289.81, and the New York Municipal Railway Corporation out of its contribution $393,005.31 on account of City owned line construction.

Excluding purchases of real estate the disbursements of the city for regular and extra work in rapid transit construction from the beginning to June 30, 1914, aggregate $100,338,171.45, of which more than $48,000,000 is chargeable to the existing subway. These figures represent actual disbursements. The total amount of contracts awarded by the City to August 15, 1914, aggregated $135,910,269.01 on the new lines alone.

H. and R. E. Owners Meet.

At the meeting of the House and Real Estate Owners' Association of the 12th and 19th Wards, last night, at the New York Turn Hall, Lexington avenue and 85th street, the recent victory which the organization achieved was announced, whereby an express station will be established on the Second Avenue Elevated Line at 86th street. As a result of the active interest of the association and its vigorous campaign, the Public Service Commisssion adopted a resolution, directing that an express station be placed at that point.

STEAM MAINS IN STREETS.

Company Objects to Order for Their Replacement.

The New York Steam Company has applied to the Public Service Commission for a rehearing upon the order made by the commission July 23 last, requiring the company to reconstruct 58,986 feet of its old type of steam mains and to replace them at the rate of 12,000 feet a year with the new and modern thoroughly protected type of mains. The order was issued after an investigation by the commission, which showed that damage was caused by the steam and heat escaping from the old mains.

The company bases its application for a rehearing upon three grounds: (1) That the amount of reconstruction ordered is excessive. (2) That the requirement for the replacement within five years from September 1, 1914, is "oppressive and unnecessary, and under the existing condition of affairs—owing to the great European war which has broken out since the making of your said order—is impracticable of execution, and a much less number of feet and a much less amount of money should be required of the steam company." (3) That during the subway construction now going on in the lower part of Manhattan it will be impracticable for the steam company to replace its mains in adjacent streets, for the reason that traffic would be either prevented or seriously obstructed.

The commission has not yet taken action upon the application.

The New York Steam Company was formerly owned by Wallace C. Andrews who, in his will, left it in trust for the Andrews Institute for Girls, at Willoughby, Ohio. It is said that the school depends upon the earnings of the company for its support. During the hearings before Commissioner Milo R. Maltbie, the company pleaded this state of facts and represented that it might have to default on its bonds if required to make excessive expenditures. In his opinion recommending the order, Commissioner Maltbie held that the nature of the company's ownership was no excuse for the maintenance of improper mains.

At Douglaston, L. I.

There has been marked indication already of a large increase in the all-year population of North Shore communities in 1915, and the automobile is responsible for much of it. People seek this section of Long Island for quick jaunts into the country and as a result become attracted and interested in many places along the Sound waterfront. People passing through a modern home development where a number of well-designed houses have been built and where the roads are properly made, sidewalks and other improvements installed, cannot help but be impressed with the advantages of suburban living. A developer cannot spend his money where he will get greater return than by keeping the appearance of the property up to a certain high standard. This not only impresses the casual visitor and causes him to look twice but holds the interest of the man already living to such an extent that he cannot help talking about it.

New Long Island Highway.

Hempstead, Rockville Centre and Oceanside, in southern Nassau County, Long Island, will be doubly joined to Long Beach, instead of by a single road as now, if a bill to be presented to the next Legislature asking for $400,000 for the purpose, passes; and, the sum asked for also includes the cost of improvements to the present highway between Rockville Centre and Long Beach, known as Long Beach road. Not only do the residents and property owners of all the towns from Freeport to Lynbrook desire these improvements, but the people of Long Beach do as well.

The proposed new highway would consist of an extension of Oceanside avenue, or what was Christian Hook road, from its present terminus in the central part of Oceanside south to and across Hempstead bay to Long Beach. The proposed appropriation would also include the cost of a concrete viaduct across the bay which would have piers on certain hassocks there. Long Beach road is an offshoot of Oceanside avenue, at Rockville Centre, and it passes through the westerly part of Oceanside to and across the bridge to Long Beach.

Oceanside avenue extends from Greenwich avenue in the village of Hempstead southwest through Hempstead terrace and Rockville Centre to and through Marion Park and Rockville Centre terrace to Oceanside. The entire territory penetrated is growing in population steadily and is served by a trolley road as well as by one steam and two electric divisions of the Long Island Railroad.

Activity at Brentwood.

Usually immediately after Labor Day a large number of automobiles loaded down with household goods are seen on the Jericho Turnpike from the mid-island sections; on the Motor Parkway from Brentwood and on the Merrick road from Bayshore, but this year many of the summer residents have elected to remain longer and enjoy the beauties of autumn in the country.

The fact that an ever-increasing number of summer residents remain later in the year, before taking up city abodes, and also that the number that remain and make it their winter home, has had its effect on real estate values in this territory. The five new California bungalows for which contracts have already been let and the work begun will add somewhat to the appearance of Brentwood. Most people are attracted to this Pine Belt on account of its healthfulness. The Brentwood Realty Co. has improved several miles of road during the year and extended the blue stone sidewalks through its property.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Two acres of vacant land in Harlem, in the heart of a big apartment house colony, figured this week as one of the leading transactions. It concerned a large plot in West 146th and West 147th streets, which will probably be improved with apartment houses. Other deals concerned Yorkville plottage purchased as a possible site for a new club-house; Bronx apartment houses and a Brooklyn block front purchased by builders.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 7 as against 14 last week and 17 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 1 as compared with 2 last week and 4 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 6 as compared with 12 last week and 13 a year ago.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

As the result of an action brought by M. M. Warburg against the 28th Street and Seventh Avenue Co., to recover a loan of $106,000, three parcels comprising the southeast corner of Seventh avenue and 28th street, were sold at foreclosure, at the stand of Bryan L. Kennelly, this week, for $90,000 to the plaintiff. The entire block front on the east side of Seventh avenue, between 27th and 28th streets, was assembled several years ago by the defendant company, and the foreclosure sale splits up the ownership of the block.

Another of the former properties of the New York Real Estate Security Co. passed into new ownership by the sale of Regents Hall, at the northeast corner of Broadway and 123d street, to Charles M. Rosenthal, who was foreclosing a second mortgage of $24,000. The property was sold subject to a mortgage of $170,000. The only bid made at the sale was $20,000 over prior liens, made in behalf of the plaintiff, which brought the total figure up to $194,012. The sale was conducted by Joseph P. Day.

Moving Day

Moving day discloses the fact that most of the moving vans are depositing their loads in front of buildings equipped for electric service.

Modern families demand electric light in their homes. They know its many advantages and conveniences and go where they may enjoy them.

The home electrically equipped rents more readily and sells at a higher price.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

SCIENTIFIC APPRAISALS

By WALTER W. POLLOCK, President Manufacturers' Appraisal Company*

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

I SHALL undertake to discuss in this paper methods and systems for the ascertainment of "normal" values, first explaining the standards by which the various elements entering into normal values may be set down and traced in their relation one to another, so as to show the normal value under ordinary circumstances of property involved, to a going concern, at a given time.

It has been less than twenty years since the efforts at scientific analysis of property values have justified the organization of appraisal companies, but within that period of time the growing demand for the application of system to business has created a big market for expert appraisal services, which has so far been only partially developed. New reasons for scientific appraisals are developed every year, and the profession or business of "appraiser" has come to have a special significance of its own.

Many large industrial institutions find that they can obtain better service at lower costs by employing appraisal companies to inventory and appraise their properties, than by making such inventories and valuations through their regular organizations. The employee of the ordinary industrial or commercial concern is selected mainly with a view to his efficiency in the manufacture and sale of product. It is found that the trained appraiser is able to better analyze and classify and value the land, buildings and the machinery and mechanical equipment than the man whose daily vocation consists of running an engine or machine, or in computing costs, or keeping books, or in salesmanship.

Appraiser's Field.

The appraiser's field is different from that of the mechanical engineer, and it is different from that of the architect or the builder. The engineer and the architect and builder are employed chiefly to design and construct buildings and factories suitable to given purposes. The appraiser, on the other hand, is employed to appraise property which already exists, under the conditions in which he finds it. He has no theories to follow out except to put down on paper what he finds, under intelligent classification and arrangement, and to apply certain standards for valuation and depreciation.

General Classification.

Leaving for discussion later on the subject of the appraisal of land, we find that the uses for scientific appraisals may be classified generally under the following headings:

First: For the determination of the amount of fire insurance to be carried, the accurate distribution of fire insurance over the several classes of property involved, so as to make certain the most complete protection upon all classes; and the proof of loss after a fire.

Second: For the determination of true present values, considering all of the elements which make up such values, including depreciation; such values being considered for audit and accounting purposes.

Third: For the determination of the capital value of the various departments of an industrial concern, such knowledge being especially useful as a basis for cost accounting, and the distribution of overhead or non-productive expenses.

Fourth: For the determination by uniform standards of the values of a number of plants which may be considering amalgamation into a single corporate existence.

Fifth: For the determination of the fair value of the property of public utilities as a basis for service rates or capitalization and,

Sixth: To determine equitable and proportional taxable values of buildings and mechanical equipment.

The same appraisal methods may be used to ascertain values for all of the foregoing uses. They are all based upon the consideration of ascertaining the value of the property to a going concern at a given time. The same standards may be properly applied to the ascertainment of values, whether for purposes of insurance, audit, merger, rate-making or taxes.

Methods of Appraisals.

For many years the fire insurance companies, in the settlement of fire losses, have established the starting point as the present cost of new reproduction; and after such present cost of new reproduction has been ascertained, existing depreciation, if any, is deducted therefrom. In the commercial appraisal of today the present cost of new reproduction is the recognized standard—not the original cost at some time in the past, nor the theoretical cost at some time in the future. The adoption of the present cost of new reproduction as the standard gives a basis which can be most intelligently checked against, when the appraisal is systematically made. An appraisal made on any other basis is difficult to check or to compare, as the data upon which a conclusion is reached cannot otherwise be made a matter of complete record.

In the appraisal of buildings the scientific appraisal shows an inventory of the kinds, the quantities and the unit prices for new reproduction, under the general headings of Excavation, Foundations, Masonry, Iron Construction, Wood Construction, Windows and Doors. Roofing, Painting, Galvanized Iron and Tin Work, Plumbing, Heating, Lighting, Elevators, and other classifications which may pertain to the building, and be required for the operation of the building. With separation of the piece-bills of materials by floors under these several classifications, and with unit prices applied, it is possible at any time in the future to establish accurate comparisons with the costs of new reproduction at any subsequent time when required. If there has been a variation in such costs, a building can be appraised at new reproductive cost at a future date by revising the unit cost of new reproduction; the appraisal being classified and arranged so as to show all items which enter into the property appraised.

Depreciation.

Depreciation upon buildings is applied in the scientific appraisal specifically upon each class of construction. This depreciation analysis can be carried into as great or as little detail as may be desired. The foundations of a building may be in perfect condition, without actual depreciation, while the roof may be subject to a fifty per cent. depreciation, and the application of judgment as to depreciation specifically upon each class of construction will enable a final summarized judgment as to the present value.

In the ordinary industrial plant there are between twenty and thirty different classifications of machinery and mechanical equipment. We are frequently asked how it is possible for an appraisal company to maintain enough experts to cover the wide range of manufacturing plants, office buildings, municipal property and public utilities.

Industrial Plants.

To the trained appraiser it makes little difference what the product of the plant may be. All industrial plants have buildings, and the man who can appraise the buildings of a brewery, or an office building property, is equally competent to appraise the buildings which house a watch factory or a laundry. The technical problems are the same in either event, and this is also true in a large measure of the mechanical equipment in various plants. They all, no matter what their production may be, have engines, boilers, pumps, generators, heaters, motors, shafting, hangers, couplings, collars, heating, plumbing and lighting systems, benches, tables, racks, cupboards, office furniture and fixtures, and many miscellaneous small items of equipment; and the problem of listing these items in a plant is identical, no matter what the product.

Out of a large number of classifications of equipment in the ordinary plant there are but two classifications in which a textile plant differs from a machine shop, these two classes being those of machinery and tools. While the machinery classification may have a much greater money value than all of the other classifications put together, the number of units in the minor classifications is very much greater than in the machinery classifications. A very large proportion of the machinery in most plants is of standard type, and the same statement is true of tools.

In plants which have a large number of special jigs, dies and tools, an expert toolmaker is required, but practically all of the other classes of property in the ordinary plant may be listed by the trained appraiser and priced from the standard price lists which an appraisal company must have. The most difficult part of the work of the trained appraiser lies in his ability to put down on paper technical descriptions of everything that he finds. With such technical descriptions set down it is possible not only to identify every machine, or tool or other item if destroyed by fire, but it is also possible to verify the new reproductive cost attached thereto.

Determining Present Worth.

After a property has been appraised on the standard of the present cost of new reproduction, the next question to consider is how much less it is worth at the present time. The subject of depreciation has always troubled accountants and appraisers, and there are many theories of depreciation based on age, rather than specific condition. The scientific appraiser, however, realizes that he must have in mind a specific consideration when he applies depreciation. He opposes the theories of the past which have advocated the application of age rates of depreciation, and has proven that age is not a true measure for depreciation.

I believe that the only statutory description of an appraisal of physical property that has ever been enacted into law in the United States is that of the new Ohio Public Utilities Law. This law provides that after the new reproductive cost has been ascertained, depreciation, if any, shall be deducted for each of four classes. The first of these is "mechanical deterioration;" the second, "age;" the third, "obsolescence," and the fourth, "lack of utility." This is, as I believe, faulty in the one respect that it gives credence to the ancient theory concerning depreciation which includes age as a measure thereof. Aside from this, I believe that the Ohio statute provides a clear route over which the owners of office buildings or of industrial plants may travel in the direction of ascertaining the true value of all man-made property as a part of their going concerns at any given time.

Mechanical Deterioration.

Mechanical deterioration may be the result of ordinary wear and tear or of breakage which may interfere with the mechanical condition of a building or a machine, or of any other property. A judgment as to mechanical deterioration can be made independently of the age or the length of time since it was first put into use. There are many types of machines, and the same is true of buildings, which do not become adjusted to their best usefulness until after they have been in operation for some time. A machine may last fifty years without losing its mechanical excellence, or it may become useless through breakage within a week after its installation; and the successful business man is always spending money to keep his property in good condition.

"Obsolescence" may result through the invention of a better machine or type of building; through the failure or going out of business of the manufacturer, thus making it impossible to obtain spare parts; or the discontinuance of the process for which the machine was designed. Either one of these three conditions which may bring about obsolescence may occur within a week, or a year, or twenty years, and therefore age may not safely be taken as the measure of obsolescence depreciation.

Lack of Utility.

"Lack of utility," as applied specifically to public service properties, is a kind of depreciation to be applied when the property, whatever its value may be after the ascertainment of new reproductive cost and the deduction of depreciation for mechanical deterioration and obsolescence, has no value for the particular business the "fair value" of which is under consideration for appraisal. The same theory may be applied to industrial plants and office buildings, independently of the other elements of value, and in the judgment of "lack of utility" age is not in any sense a measure of the amount of such depreciation.

After these three classes of depreciation have been applied specifically upon the judgment of the appraiser, it is clear that there is neither room for nor appropriateness in the application of depreciation based upon age or supposed average life, for all of the things that cause depreciation should have been considered in the application of judgment of the effect upon value of depreciating elements other than "age."

I do not mean to assert that the owner of a property should not, as an accounting proposition, and to provide for theoretical future depreciation or upkeep, make an estimate as to what the future depreciation may be. But I most emphatically state that such consideration is purely theoretical and unnecessary, assuming that knowledge of present value is desired, if he will rejudge depreciation specifically at each annual period.

If, on the theory that the property will be eventually wiped out, it is deemed necessary to set aside a sinking fund to provide for the repayment of the original capital cost of the property, there can be no objection to such action if its true significance is understood. "Age" depreciation could be adopted as a basis for theorizing, but it should be constantly kept in mind that the application of such theories is an accounting rather than an appraisal problem.

—The most definite information that can be obtained from public officials as to the date when the Fourth avenue subway will be ready for operation is "early next year." Last spring, January 1 was the date set. This refers to the operation only as far as Thirty-eighth street, the section beyond that being still in course of actual construction.

AMERICAN WOODS.

Their Relative Merits For Interior Finish—Oak Placed First.

Our American woods at one time were very plentiful and cheap, so that their true merits were not properly appreciated, and the once bountiful supply has been depleted and in an apparently reckless way; till at the present time some of them, being scarce and expensive, are highly prized.

There is scarcely anything in nature that is more beautiful than the variegated colors and grains of our American woods when properly developed and finished.

White oak and ash have been the principal sufferers, and it is probable that in fifteen or twenty years more, quartered oak, and perhaps also the best grades of plain sawn oak, will almost be a thing of the past. The demand for quarter-sawn oak is the chief reason for its rapid depletion. The method by which this is done is as follows: The log is first divided into quarters and then the planks are cut radiating from the center, making the boards narrow at the center and wide at the outside; this, of course, increases the waste a good deal. In quarter sawing the cut is made parallel to the medullary rays instead of across, as is done in straight sawing, and this forms the peculiarly wavy lines by which the two can be distinguished.

Woods are commonly spoken of as being "fine-grained," "coarse-grained," "cross-grained," or "straight-grained." The wood is said to be fine-grained when the annual rings are relatively narrow, and coarse-grained when these rings are wide. When the fibers are straight and parallel to the trunk of the tree, the wood is said to be straight-grained, but if they are distorted or twisted so as to be spiral in form, not growing straight up the tree, but following around the trunk, the wood is said to be cross-grained.

Commercially speaking, the soft woods are classified as belonging to the conifers or needle-leaved trees, and the hardwood the broad-leaved trees, but this does not hold true in all cases. Some people classify whitewood and redwood as soft woods, while hard pine is frequently called a hardwood. Very often the term "hardwood finish" is used to designate all work that is to be finished in varnish, to distinguish it from the painted work. Painted work as a rule costs less than varnished work, for the reason that cheaper grades of lumber are used, and the same care is not usually taken to keep it clean while it is being put up.

For finished work that is to be painted the first consideration is that it shall stand well, and next to this are freedom from pitch, knots and low cost. For finish work that is to be stained or varnished in its natural color, the color and grain of the wood most influences the selection.

Qualities of Various Kinds.

Aside from the appearances of the wood, however, the hardness is a very important quality, as the softer woods mar and get dented very easily, which greatly injures the appearance of the trim. It is for that reason that soft pine, whitewood, redwood or cypress are inferior to oak, ash, maple or chestnut, which is moderately soft, although otherwise each one makes a very attractive finish when properly treated. Redwood is quite brittle and the edges break easily.

All hard or soft woods that are to be used for interior trim should always be thoroughly kiln dried just before being sent to the building. Care should be taken to see that the interior trim is not delivered to the building until the plaster is thoroughly dried.

In placing the American woods in their relative positions for interior finish or woodwork, the writer places the oak in first position. There are about twenty different kinds of oak found in various parts of the country, but there are only three distinctive species which are sold separate. Of the two principal kinds white oak is the stronger, less porous and more durable. Red oak is of a coarser texture and is not as easily seasoned. The wood of the white oak is of a light straw color; that of the red oak has a reddish tinge, so that they cannot be used together for interior trim as the color of the woods is increased by varnishing.

They are both used for interior trim and should be thoroughly dried, after which they will stand well. When used for doors the wood should be sawn into veneers, not exceeding 3-16 in. thick and glued to a pine core. Oak is always better if quarter sawed, as it will then show what is known as the "silver grain." For finishing purposes red oak answers practically as well as white oak, but care should be taken not to mix the two kinds on account of the color as before mentioned.

Chestnut Comes Second.

The second place in rank is given to the chestnut, which is quite equal to the oak in attractiveness and texture. The wood is light in weight, has a rich brown color, of coarse texture, and under very simple treatment becomes quite handsome. It works easily, and stands well.

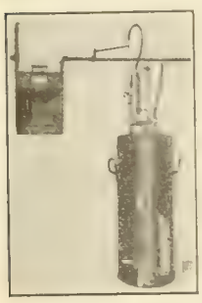
Ash is a wood that is frequently used for interior trim and ranks next. The wood is heavy, hard, tough, straight grained and of coarse texture. The finished wood resembles bastard sawed oak very much, except that the grain is much coarser. It is easier to work than oak, and when thoroughly kiln dried is used for making solid ash doors. The wood of the ash is about the same color as the white oak.

In rooms where light colors and dainty woodwork are desired the birch and maple stand fourth and fifth respectively. The birch is very hard and heavy, the sapwood is whitish in color, while the heartwood is of very handsome shades of brown with red and yellow. There are two kinds, the red and the white birch. The red birch is used the most for interior finish. The birch is used quite often to imitate cherry and mahogany, as the grains of these woods are much the same.

Almost all the maple used for building purposes comes from the sugar maple tree. The wood is hard, of fine texture, and often has a wavy grain known as curly. It is of a creamy white color with shades of brown in the heartwood. The curly or birdseye maple is one of our handsomest of hardwoods, and at present is only used for very fine interior finishing. Some of the very finest chambers are made of birdseye maple.

Cypress, which is strikingly artistic, and very often has a wavy grain similar to that of the maple, ranks sixth. That known as gulf cypress is the best and although it resembles olive wood very closely in color, is not quite as fine grained. It makes a very pretty finish and is used for making solid doors and sash. It can be obtained in very wide boards, and if it were not for its softness would be one of our very best woods for interior finishing.

There are two distinct classes of pine used in building work, namely, the white and yellow pine, which rank seventh and eighth. White pine, when of a good quality, is a creamy white in color, soft and straight grained and easy to work. One of its valuable characteristics is that it will not crack and warp in the process of seasoning, like most of the other woods. It is the best wood to use for solid doors or sash, and is the wood used as cores for all veneered work.



Yellow pine, sometimes referred to as Georgia pine, is of a very fine and close grain, and its resinous matter is quite evenly distributed. Owing to the fact that it is not quite as interesting in grain and color as the before mentioned woods, it is not used to such a great extent for interior trim. Comb-grained pine, which receives its name from the method of sawing that leaves the grain in straight lines, is used to a great extent for finished flooring. This does not warp or sliver and is very durable. —Gordon Dempsey in National Builder.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration

Tests Gas Meters on Wall.

IT no longer will be necessary to remove meters from walls to test them, according to G. W. Anderson, of Galesburg, Ill. He has invented a portable apparatus, which is shown in the accompanying illustration. The use of this device insures a saving to building managers and others who have to stand the expense of having the meters removed when they appear to run fast.

A tank is filled to its capacity with water while thermostat indicates the temperature of the gas. The thermostat indicates the temperature of the water which must be the same as that of the gas. The cock when turned off allows the gas to escape to a special opening which enables the operator to discover the temperature of the gas. This being done the cock is opened and the pressure under which the gas is flowing will be indicated by the rise of the water in a gauge graduated in 10th of inches.

When a test is to be made, the inlet tube is connected to a gas jet, the temperature of the water corresponding to that of the gas, and the cocks are opened to let the gas flow into the tank, the pressure being indicated in the gauge which, before the gas is turned on, stands at zero. The faucet is then opened and the water allowed to flow out at a rate that keeps the water in the gauge standing at zero while gas is being measured. By this arrangement the gas flows into the tank as freely as if it were being burned, there being neither pressure nor vacuum. When the dial hand on meter shows that 1 foot of gas has passed the faucet and cock are closed simultaneously. By referring to the water column, the condition of the meter registering will be indicated by the scale showing the quantity of water remaining in the tank. If the water stands at the zero mark at the end of one foot, it would show the meter as registering correctly; should one foot of gas fail to displace one foot of water it would indicate the meter was registering fast, or delivering a short foot. If the water remaining in the tank after registering one foot on the meter fall below the zero mark on gauge, it shows the per centum rate of meter retard.

Saves Facade Disfiguring.

IT is surprising that building managers and owners have countenanced disfiguring signs upon the front of their buildings for so many years. Nothing cheapens a structure so thoroughly as an ugly painted sign stuck up announcing that apartments are to let especially when, to meet the exigencies of the situation the figures denoting the number of rooms in the apartment are pasted over, scratched out or worked over in a botchy way.

So it is doubtless with a sigh of relief that these interests have received information to the effect that patents are pending for a device that is being introduced here by the Advertising Specialties Company, of 284 Pearl street. The sign is artistically shaped in wood or metal, and when hung is out of the way of malicious persons. If the five-room apartments are all rented, and only the three or four-room suites are available, the number 5 on the sign can be removed and the desired number inserted in a perforation in the center of the sign. On the insertable discs the number is painted on both sides so that the message to be conveyed to the house-hunting passerby may be read as he approaches from either direction. There are blank sides to some of the figures so that there need be no aperture in the sign if there is not more than one-sized suite to rent.

Iron Studding for Sockets.

SETTLING of buildings is very often due to rotting of sills or rusting of toenailing of studding. To avoid this, there is being placed on the market an iron socket into which studding is placed so that moisture cannot get between the foot and the sill. By the use of these devices, so the manufacturers, G. M. Ross & Co., of Grinnell, Iowa, say, a circulation of air is maintained under the footing so that the setting is always dry. They are advantageously used, it is said, where studding is placed in wet concrete or where wood is placed into concrete in such a way that water can soak into the footing and rust the nails or bolts. Furthermore, they have two keys that sink into the footing and retain their hold against accidental jarring loose of supports.

Combined Reinforcement and Guard.

VARIOUS devices have appeared from time to time that are designed to protect concrete edges, either on steps, wheel-guards or curbs, but the distinguishing feature about the device shown in the illustration, made by the Clip-Bar Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia, is that it serves as reinforcement as well. The size of this device is sufficient to take in the depth of the average step or curb, although it comes in various lengths to suit special cases. The economical side of this bar is that the protection is confined to the point where it is most needed, namely, the edge where wheel chipping permits the rapid destruction of curbs of this character.

Lighting Circuit Controls Heat.

ONE of the newest systems on the market for regulating the temperature of air in buildings is operated entirely from the lighting circuit, and is being introduced by the Gold Car Heating & Lighting Co., 17 Battery place. The appearance of this device, which is on the order of a thermostat, is shown in the two illustrations. The manufacturers say that with this arrangement no compressed air or extensive installation is necessary.

The thermostat consists of two special devices, including an electric thermostat operating contacts by the expansion and contraction of a temperature-sensitive diaphragm, placed on the wall of the room, and a special electromagnetic valve, which takes the place of the ordinary inlet valve on the radiator. The valve and thermostat are connected by electric wires, the operating current being obtained from the electric lighting circuit.

The operation of the thermostat is affected by a metal diaphragm capable of expanding and contracting. Within this diaphragm is sealed a small amount of a volatile liquid, which is expanded by heat and is contracted by condensation. The expansion and contraction of the diaphragm actuates a metal strip which opens or closes the circuit, as the case may be. This action operates the magnetic valve or valves that are connected to the radiators. The thermostats are so made that a range of 10 degrees can be obtained by moving the thumb-screw on the side of the thermostat. A switch with lock attachment is furnished, when desired, for cutting the current off during the season when heat is not required.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

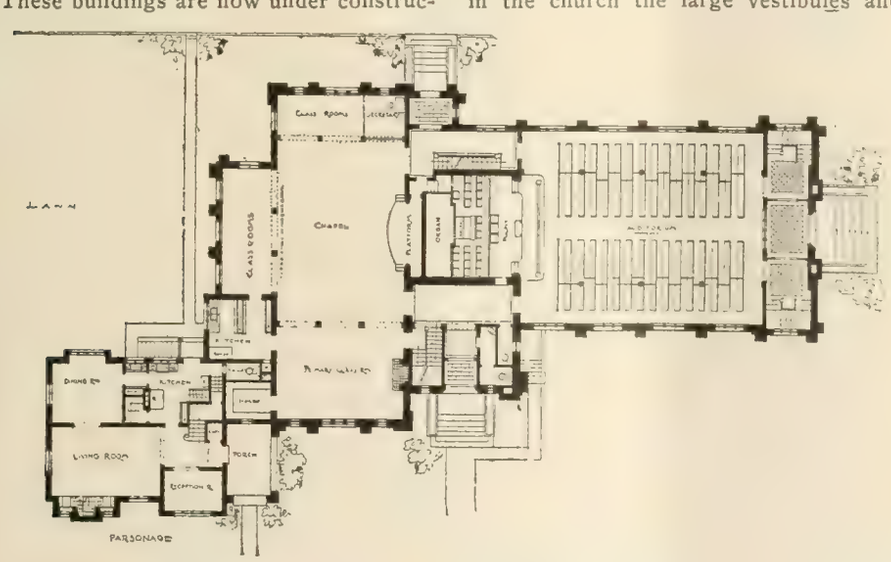
The New Methodist Church at Sea Cliff— A Modern Suburban Church of Moderate Cost.

THE construction of a suburban church of moderate cost is a problem full of interest to all church people and one deserving the most careful consideration of architects as well as church building committees. Churches are to be found in all communities which violate all canons of art and good taste. For some time past it has seemed almost as though nearly anything would do for the design of a rural or suburban church so long as four walls, roof and a steeple were provided. In Colonial days, however, many churches were designed and erected which, by the beauty of their proportions and graceful decoration, have since become the inspiration for much that has been accomplished along the line of a revival of American Colonial architecture.

There can be no doubt that a church or church group may be designed in the Gothic style of architecture and so planned as to meet all modern requirements, and still retain the charm and orderliness of the style. Milton See & Son, architects, 15 East 40th street, Manhattan, have demonstrated this fact in a church group recently designed by them. These buildings are now under construction at Sea Cliff, Long Island, and are for the First Methodist Episcopal Church of that village. That the architects have made a study of the needs of a suburban church is apparent even in the uncompleted state of the building. H. H. Vought & Co., 346 Madison avenue, general contractors, have charge of the erection of this building under the direct supervision of the architects.

This building as a unit consists of a church, chapel or Sunday school and parsonage. The total cost of the completed operation will be in the neighborhood of $45,000. The structure is being erected on the site of the former church and on what is probably one of the most commanding plots in the village. It is in the very heart of the community and overlooks Hempstead Harbor and Long Island Sound. The plot is irregular in shape and has a frontage on three avenues, one of which, Sea Cliff avenue, is the main thoroughfare of the village. This irregular plot has provided the architects with an opportunity to expand their ground plan in a manner which would be quite impossible for a city church, except in rare instances where large plots are obtainable, but it has given the Methodist congregation of Sea Cliff a layout that in point of efficiency is as near ideal as thought, study and careful planning has been able to provide. Broad lawns and wide main approaches provide the necessary isolation from the business life of the village, while within the church the large vestibules and wide aisles provide for the comfort of the congregation.

The walls and partitions of this building are built of hollow tile. All exterior walls being veneered with light buff brick. Ornamentation of the exterior is of carved limestone. The roof is of variegated gray slate, which harmonizes well with the sidewalls. In design the architects have adhered strictly to the Gothic style and have created a building which seems to thoroughly fit its environment and which will be a noteworthy addition to the village.



The north elevation of this building is perhaps the most interesting of any of the facades, the central motif being a massive square tower, flanked on one side by the two and one-half story, half timbered and stucco parsonage; and on the other by the main church building. Entrance through this tower is provided to both church and Sunday school.

The auditorium of the church has been planned to seat approximately 320 people with the provision back of the pulpit for a pipe organ, consol and a choir of twenty-four voices. The Sunday school room will seat approximately 350 people and is so arranged that the chairs may be removed and the room used for the social gatherings of the various church societies. The parsonage, while an integral part of this building, is entered through a separate entrance porch. On the first floor is a large entrance hall, reception room, living-room, dining-room, pantry and kitchen, while on the second floor are four bedrooms and bath.

ARE YOU MARRIED?

Business Agents Investigating Reports That Married Men Are Discriminated Against.

The United Board of Business Agents of the Building Trades have found upon investigation that there is foundation for complaints that have reached their office of discrimination by certan employers against men who have families to support and also against men who are not physically in sound health.

They have inquired the reason of this unfair treatment and have learned that the excuse is that the casualty insurance company, or companies, which carry their insurance policies, have refused to carry these employes. The United Board, through Secretary Roswell D. Tompkins, reported the cases to the State Compensation Commission, and is informed that the complaints have been verified by that body also.

The United Board of Business Agents represents ninety-five per cent. of the men employed in the building trades of Greater New York and vicinity, and is recognized as the principal central body by union men. Upon being convinced of the truth of the complaints the board adopted resolutions setting forth the following:

"It has come to the notice of various business agents, representing the Building Trades mechanics, helpers and laborers of New York, that certain employers of these Building Trades mechanics, helpers and laborers, have, or are about to discriminate against those who are married and have families to support, or who are not physically in sound health, by refusing to employ them.

"These men were employed at their various vocations previous to the enactment of the Workmen's Compensation Law and were satisfactory to their employers, and we believe this discrimination is being fostered and created by private casualty and insurance companies through their refusal to insure such 'employes' as above mentioned, who may be in the employ of any employer who has or is about to insure in private casualty or insurance companies.

"We consider that discrimination of this character is unfair, unjust and unwarranted to such mechanics, helpers and laborers so afflicted, and if permitted to go unchecked by the labor organizations affiliated and at large, will no doubt cause great hardship upon numerous members as well as cause a feeling of discontent with a law which was enacted for the benefit of the working people in case of injury or fatality while employed at their vocations.

"The United Board of Business Agents of the Building Trades of New York City and vicinity will refuse to permit any member of an affiliated Organization to work for any employer who attempts to discriminate against any mechanic, helper or laborer for the abovementioned causes.

"A copy of the resolutions has been forwarded to each affiliated organization, to the Workmen's Compensation Commission, to the Building Trades Employers' Association, and other central bodies, with a request for their endorsement."

President John T. Taggart and Secretary Tompkins have recently been reelected and the other members of the United Board are John Hanley, Edward Broderick, John F. Lalor, David Danehy, Samuel E. Wilson, Charles W. Ryan, Charles H. Bausher, William A. Brennan, Thomas P. Nolan, Patrick Fallon, Louis Ferrarini, William McMillan, Walter West, Michael Carraher.

OVERLAPPING JURISDICTION.

If It Should be Eliminated, Building Interests Would be Benefited.

President Crawford, of the Building Trades Employers' Association, gives hearty endorsement to the plan of the State Factory Investigating Commission for combining into one city department the several bureaus and departments of the city and boroughs that have jurisdiction over buildings, and he hopes that the plan will be sufficiently developed in time to present to the next Legislature.

"The number of bureaus and departments that must be consulted before a building operation may proceed without danger of violating some statute, is a great drawback to the architects and builders," said Mr. Crawford. "In 1892, as the result of a similar agitation, due to similar troublesome conditions, a building department was created. Since then that department has been gradually stripped by different legislative enactments of many of its functions which have been transferred to the Tenement House Department, the Fire Prevention Bureau, the State Labor Department, and so forth.

"As an illustration of the overlapping jurisdictions of these several departments we might take the plumbing and drainage of a building. When the Building Department was created in 1892, among other duties imposed was the supervision of plumbing. There has been no complaint or dissatisfaction, at least not in recent years, as to the performance of this duty by that department, and the rules promulgated with respect to plumbing have been effective and generally above criticism. And yet, at the present time, the Board of Health has rules (Sanitary Code, Sections 27 to 38) covering matters provided for in the rules of the Bureau of Buildings; the Tenement House Department is making inspections of plumbing and issues orders affecting plumbing, and the State Labor Department (Section 88a) is authorized to make rules covering the installation of certain parts of plumbing systems. That the Board of Health feels that it still has jurisdiction over plumbing is further shown by the fact that in March of this year it issued an amendment to Section 36 of the Sanitary Code, one of the sections affecting plumbing.

"If this sort of overlapping jurisdiction could be eliminated it certainly would be a great benefit to the building and real estate interests."

Wages Higher in 1913 Than in 1914.

The average weekly wage in forty leading cities of the United States for more than sixty industries in 1913 was higher, according to a statement issued by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. The greatest average increase was for marble setters, which was 6.6 per cent.

The following increases were made in the period stated:

Bricklayers, 1.7 per cent.; carpenters, 1.7 per cent.; hod carriers, 1.3 per cent.; painters, 4.2 per cent.; plasterers, 1 per cent.; plumbers and gas fitters, 3.1 per cent.; structural iron workers, 2.6 per cent.; stone cutters, 2.2 per cent.; iron molders, 5.3 per cent.; compositors (newspaper), work, 2.1 per cent.

The highest scale per hour paid in May, 1913, in the above trades was as follows:

Bricklayers, 87½ cents, in Dallas and San Francisco; carpenters, 65 cents, in Chicago; hod carriers, 50 cents, in Portland, Salt Lake City, and San Francisco; painters, 65 cents, in San Francisco; plumbers and gas fitters, 81¼ cents, in Seattle; structural iron workers, 75 cents, in San Francisco; stone cutters, 70 cents, in Portland; iron molders, 50 cents, in San Francisco; compositors (English newspaper), day work, 75 cents, in Seattle.

The bureau reports that thirty-four trades showed a reduction of hours between May, 1912, and May, 1913; twenty-eight reported no change, and one reported an increase.

SERVICE BUILDING FOR FORD MOTOR CO.

WORK has been commenced upon the new addition to the service building and assembling plant of the Ford Motor Company, on Jackson avenue and Honeywell street, Long Island City. The building was designed by John Graham, architect, and Fountain & Choate have obtained the contract for the portion of the work below the first floor. The contractor for the superstructure has not been selected. The operation will involve about $400,000. The new addition will follow the original structure closely in general treatment of exterior, the facade being red face brick and terra cotta. The addition will be constructed of reinforced concrete with long spans. On the south side of the building will be a spur of the railroad, connecting with the Sunnyside yards and from this track materials will be unloaded and lifted to the various floors by large cranes. There will be six stairways in the new building, one of which is a fire tower stairway opening on balconies on the front of the structure. The other stairways are to be enclosed in fireproof partitions, with fireproof self-closing doors. Each stairway has a direct exit to the exterior of the building. Two freight and one passenger elevator will be installed. The roof will be covered with promenade tile and will be used for testing the cars after they were assembled. Contractors are now figuring superstructure.

New Family Hotel for Brooklyn.

Montrose W. Morris, architect, 82 Wall street, Manhattan, has prepared an attractive plan for a family hotel to be erected in the Bedford section of Brooklyn at a cost approximating $200,000. The structure will have a frontage on Bedford avenue of 150 feet, with frontages of 100 feet in Pacific and Dean streets. The Bedford avenue front will set back fifteen feet from the building line. This space will be terraced and beautified with shrubs and flowers. The building will be six stories in height and will be fireproof throughout. Louis F. Seitz is the owner.

New Catholic Church in Brooklyn.

Raymond F. Almirall, architect, 185 Madison avenue, Manhattan, has been retained to prepare plans and specifications for a new Roman Catholic church to be erected on Classon avenue, between Putnam avenue and Madison street. The owner is the Church of the Nativity, Rev. Father John L. Belford, pastor. This church will be of brick and stone and will have a seating capacity of between fifteen and eighteen hundred people. Full information in regard to size and details will not be available for some time.

Bungalow Colony at Brighton Beach.

George H. Suess, architect, 2966 West 29th street, Brooklyn, has completed plans for seventy-five one-story frame bungalows to be erected during the winter at Brighton Beach. They will be built on the north side of Sea Breeze avenue, east of Ocean Parkway. Each bungalow will be 18x24 feet and contain two rooms with a porch across the front. They are to be built by the Brighton-by-the-Sea Co., 161 Remsen street, Brooklyn, owners, and will be rented by the season. The operation will cost about $100,000.

Addition to Brewery.

Maynicke & Franke, architects, 25 East 26th street, have been retained by the Jacob Rupert Brewing Co., 1639 Third avenue, to prepare plans for a modern storage building. The building will be erected at Third avenue and 92nd street and will be ten stories in height.

TRADE LITERATURE

Toch Liquid Konkerit.

Toch Bros., who have made an international reputation for themselves as manufacturers of reputable concrete dressing, have just issued another little booklet under the title forming the heading of this article. The booklet introduces several of the leading products of the company and bears especially upon the application of this dressing to concrete work. The booklet describes how this is to be used and states that one gallon of the primer will cover from 150 to 200 square feet of one coat, according to the porosity of the surface to which it is applied. The book is illustrated with cuts of buildings of different types, into which this material has been applied and is, withal, a very attractive and interesting little publication.

"Concrete Reinforcement."

Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, of Chicago, are issuing Technical Library Number Eight, entitled "Concrete Reinforcement," in its second edition. The book describes different types of reinforcing iron and steel and gives valuable tables for the convenience of specifiers. It is printed on strong paper so that it will be very serviceable in an architect's office. Copies may be obtained by addressing any of the offices, the local one being at 30 Church street.

Nutley's Recent Growth.

Nutley, N. J., having modern city improvements and excellent automobile roads, has a large percentage of its residents, owners of their own homes. A hundred new dwellings have been recently erected and the population increased about 500, now totaling nearly 7,500. Projected improvements include a new county park and parkway system extending through the entire length of the town, a new railroad station, a Carnegie library and the installation of a new electric lighting system.

JOBBERS HOLDING FIRM IN ANTICIPATION OF A SHARP RISE IN PRICES SHOULD EXPORT BUSINESS DEVELOP THIS AUTUMN

Brick Easy—Week's Plan Filing

JOBBERS in building material staples showed a disposition this week to make quotations subject only to immediate acceptance. Thirty to sixty days are allowed to old customers. Most distributors are holding themselves in readiness to meet any unusual fluctuation in demand that may develop from South America or Canada.

Steel interests were reported to have assumed this position to a certain extent, and some Portland cement companies are said to have followed suit. Lime is stiffening. All equipment jobbers, especially those depending upon steel, are careful about making extensive quotations.

This means that manufacturers are not over-stocked and any sudden movement of material, either into domestic construction or originating from foreign shores, will immediately react upon local prices by a pure and simple principle of demand being greater than the supply. It is said that the Portland cement and the Hudson River and Raritan brick departments are the only ones stocked to meet an emergency call without making an extended outlay in labor and raw material. The steel companies are equipped so far as capacity is concerned, but the scarcity of feromanganese ore is a retardant.

W. N. Coster, traffic manager for a large exporting house handling general supplies, at 50 Church street, said this week that business seemed to be developing from South America, Australia and Africa for American products:

"It is too early yet to determine what we can supply. We are getting figures on materials which you would think could never be profitably exported from this country. In the meantime the transfer of ships to the American flag is clearing the situation wonderfully, and if W. R. Grace & Company and the International Mercantile Marine follow the lead of the United Fruit Company and the United States Steel Corporation, the way to the establishment of an American exporting business in American ships will be much clearer. Mexico is beginning to call for materials of one sort or another, especially for corrugated iron, plaster block and roofing material of the cheaper grades.

"The only drawback to the development of South American trade is that the American business man is long on the tendency to make the customer pay for credits running from three to six months. Sometimes credit of a year is asked by South Americans, and unless the seller has unlimited resources it is doubtful if he would find this business profitable. Furthermore, we must remember that there are big concerns heavily capitalized who are already in the field and have for years been exporting material in competition with Germany, Belgium and Great Britain who will be in the middle of the road for any opportunity that will develop down in South America. But the chance is worth developing and I cannot see why the building material market cannot expect as much out of that section as any other line."

As for the local situation there is a better spot business developing from mason supply companies in the suburbs. Those who are fixed to stack up on cement, lath, brick, clay conduits, lime and plaster are doing so liberally, getting from the distributors the best discounts obtainable in anticipation of a general change in the tone of the market before long. Lumber interests are extremely busy, they report.

Plan filings in the five boroughs for the week closing yesterday afternoon compared with those of last week are as follows:

SEABOARD CEMENT CO. SUED.

Receiver Alleges Waste of Funds—Organized 1907.

WILLIAM F. ALLEN, receiver of the Seaboard Cement Company, has begun suit in the Supreme Court against Edwin C. Willets, a director of the company, for $1,000,000.

The Seaboard Company was organized in May, 1907, with an authorized capital of $5,000,000. February, 1908, Mr. Willets was elected a director, and in March, 1910, George A. Beaten, its president and owner of more than $75,000 of a $2,000,000 issue of 6 per cent. mortgage bonds, applied to the United States court for a receiver. The company joined in the application and in April, 1911, Mr. Allen was named.

The charge is made that the defendant permitted the creation of other companies for the financing of the Seaboard Company, the selling of its securities and the transferring of its money and property rights without consideration. These subsidiaries, the complaint says, are the Eastern Security and Finance Company, the Eastern Portland Cement Company, now known as the Atlantic Concrete Material Company; the Cuban-American Cement Company, now known as the Atlantic Cement and Clinker Company; the Cement Engineering and Construction Company, the Eastern Cement and Concrete Company, the Havana Portland Cement Company and the General Finance Company.

MORTAR COLOR PRODUCTION.

New York an Important Zone of Manufacture.

MORTAR colors reported marketed to the United States Geological Survey in 1913 was 5,357 short tons, valued at $35,443, a decrease of 3,915 tons in quantity and of $52,152 in value as compared with 1912. This apparent great decrease in the output and value of mortar colors in 1913 is partly explained by the fact that heretofore a large amount of the iron-oxide ores have been reported as ground for mortar colors. Since the Survey is striving to give accurate statistics, it was thought best, upon the discovery of this condition, to include such iron oxide with the metallic paint figures rather than under mortar colors. It was found to be impossible to revise the figures of production for previous years, but it is hoped that in the future the producers of this class of material will aid the Survey in its endeavors to express correctly the output of the various natural mineral paint materials.

It is questionable whether figures for mortar colors should be included as a separate item of production, since a large part of the material sold under that name should probably be included with metallic paint or ground slate and shale. The material is used for tinting mortar, cement and concrete, and the colors are usually of the various shades of red, brown, purple, blue and black. The average price per ton for mortar colors was $6.62 in 1913, as compared with $9.45 in 1912. The material entered the market first in the dry ground condition, for which the prices are given of mortar colors from 1910 to 1913, inclusive.

SPRUCE STILL COMING IN.

War Fails to Check Supplies from Canadian Mills Via Canals.

THANKS to the completion of the canals connecting New York harbor with Canadian waterways, shipments of Canadian spruce and other lumber are being made into this country, despite the fact that Canada is in a state of war. Up to the present time there has been no curtailment of supplies, although for a while shipments were delayed which gave rise to the rumor that deliveries would cease. The threatened change in prices for Canadian spruce has not been made, although quotations are not being made for general business. Supply and demand governs this commodity exclusively. At present the demand is very good, according to several large firms, outside of subway orders. A great deal of building lumber is going into suburban construction and according to the statement of the largest firms the fall season is opening briskly despite the disturbing elements in business.

COMMON BLOCK.

Shipments Curtailed as Plants Close for Season.

MOST of the Hudson river common brick plants have closed for the season, a month earlier than usual. Scarcity of labor, a quantity of 1913 brick still unsold, a late start and low prices combine to make early shutdown advisable. Estimates of an unofficial character place the total production of common brick in the Hudson district this year at less than 700,000,000, but there is said to be close to a billion brick available for this market under shed or in kiln now burning. This is 200,000,000 below normal.

Dealers have not yet begun to stack, although this movement is expected to be quite general and liberal during the next 30 days. The shutting down of brick plants gives notice that overproduction will be one thing that manufacturers will avoid this year and that prices which are weak at present levels will probably not go lower either now or next spring. The brick price reaction is said to have extended to its lowest possible level.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, Sept. 10 in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson Rivers unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

PRINTING TRADES FORM UPTOWN CENTERS

Publishers, Advertising Agencies and Supply Houses Locate Along Line of Subway—New Structures Erected For Their Specific Occupancy

BY FENIMORE C. GOODE.

ONE of the most important trade movements of recent years is the shifting of the printing, publishing and allied trades from the old district in and about Newspaper Row to new locations further uptown.

This movement has not attracted much attention because it has proceeded steadily and unobtrusively and because popular interest has been focused on the spectacular changes along Fourth avenue and Fifth avenue and in the Twenties and Thirties adjacent to these thoroughfares.

Firms Lease Large Space.

Nevertheless a surprising amount of space has been taken by the printing and allied trades in the uptown district. The writer, for instance, has leased more than 300,000 square feet of floor space in the last eight months to firms engaged in the graphic arts. And this is in heavy type buildings alone, where the actual work of preparing printed matter is done. Aside from this, a great deal of space has been rented to publishers, advertising agents and printers' supply houses for offices and showrooms.

The publishers, advertising agencies and supply houses have elected to locate along the line of the subway, in new office and loft buildings on Fourth, Fifth and Madison avenues, Broadway and side streets between 34th and 48th streets. In this district lofts rent for 50 cents to one dollar per square foot and offices bring from $1.50 to $3.00 per square foot.

Two Centers Established.

The printers, bookbinders, lithographers, electrotypers and photo engravers have established two new centers where buildings for their special accommodation have been erected. One of the centers is Lafayette street in the neighborhood of Canal street. The other is the district between 23d and 42d streets, 7th and 11th avenues.

Reasons for the migration are various. In the first place, the demand for books, magazines and advertising matter in printed form has increased in proportion to the increase in population and the growth of trade and industry in New York City. In addition to this normal growth the printing trades have expanded by reason of the fact that an ever increasing amount of out-of-town work is being done by New York firms. At the present time at least one-half the output of printed matter in the United States comes from Manhattan Island. Furthermore, the invention of new machinery with labor and time-saving devices has necessitated the acquisition of larger quarters in specially constructed buildings by firms who keep abreast of the times. Also, when their big customers moved uptown the printers were forced to follow suit in order to hold their trade.

In the old days most of the printers were located in Pearl, William, Rose and Vandewater streets, to the north of the Brooklyn Bridge, and in Frankfort, FENIMORE C. GOODE.

Ferry, Beekman and Fulton steets south of the Bridge. A few were to be found west of Broadway in Chambers, Warren, Murray and Vesey streets, Park Place and West Broadway.

Downtown Concerns.

In either location they were handicapped by narrow, crooked, congested streets which rendered trucking difficult and expensive. The buildings they occupied were low ceilinged, dark and poorly ventilated. Elevator service was of the crudest sort, floors were overloaded to a dangerous degree and output was limited by lack of heat and adequate power.

A few buildings of heavy construction erected for the printing trades twenty years ago brought high rents and were always well filled until the uptown migration began. These buildings included the Scott and Bowne building at Pearl and New Chambers streets, the Munroe buildings in Rose and Vandewater streets, the Rhinelander buildings at Duane, William and Rose streets, the Metropolitan Realty building overlooking the Brooklyn Bridge and the Excelsior Power Company building in Gold street.

Construction a Decade Ago.

Eight or ten years ago several new buildings were erected which compare favorably with present day structures. These include the Schieren and Chapel Court buildings at Ferry and Cliff streets, the Healy building at Gold and Ferry streets, the Black building at William and Frankfort streets and the Hallenbeck building at Park and Pearl streets; all of these structures (except the Hallenbeck building, which will be taken by the city to make way for the new court house) are filled with tenants and show good returns.

Two or three years ago the value of Lafayette street for printing trades buildings became apparent. It had two great advantages over all other north and south thoroughfares. In the first place it was wide enough for six rows of trucks to travel abreast and yet was not obstructed by trolley or elevated. In the second place it was the route followed by the Interboro Subway which brought all points along its length within a few minutes of important uptown and downtown centers.

Paper Supply Houses Move.

Paper supply houses were quick to take advantage of this and a number of leading firms to-day are located along or just off Lafayette street. About two years ago the Inverness building was erected at Lafayette and Howard streets and all the lofts rented to firms in the printing trades. This year the Bradstreet Company finished a twelve-story building on land purchased at the northwest corner of Lafayette and Howard streets. All the space in the building outside of that occupied by Bradstreet's has been leased with the exception of a part of one floor. Adjoining the Bradstreet is the twelve-story Aberdeen building standing on a 100-foot plot and finished last spring. Most of the space in this structure is occupied by the printing trades. A few blocks below the Wynkoop, Hallenbeck, Crawford Printing Company is erecting a sixteen-story printing house with a plot area of 19,000 square feet. These buildings are popular with printing firms that have as customers city departments, lawyers, railroads, the cotton and white goods trades and financial interests.

Reasons for Change.

Several reasons account for the location of the uptown printers in the district lying between 23d and 42d streets, Seventh and Twelfth avenues. Firstly, land could be purchased at $500 to $2,000 a front foot and plottage was not difficult to assemble. Secondly, the streets were broad and the avenues comparatively unobstructed. Thirdly, there were two elevated lines and several trolleys supplying good transit, and there was the prospect of the Seventh avenue subway now under construction. Furthermore, the new postoffice, the Pennsylvania Railroad station improvements and the West Side docks attracted firms who would profit by their proximity.

The uptown district is in reality made up of two districts. Between Seventh and Eighth avenues are located the firms who are willing to pay a premium for space close to the business centers of Fifth avenue, Broadway, 34th and 42d streets, or are forced to be within easy walking distance of certain large customers. West of Ninth avenue are other firms whose business does not justify the rents obtained near Seventh avenue and who find that any location is satisfactory as long as it is reasonably accessible.

Among the first comers were the Federal Printing Company and the McGraw Hill Book Company. These firms erected an eleven-story building in 39th street just west of Seventh avenue and found such a demand for space by their business associates that an annex was constructed. The two buildings have a combined frontage of 183 feet and are filled with publishers and advertising firms who pay much higher rents than obtain in other buildings in the same neighborhood to-day.

Group of Tenanted Lofts.

Adjoining the McGraw building is the twelve-story 75-foot structure owned and partially occupied by the American Press Association. There are no vacancies. Across the street is a 63-foot building occupied by the Pictorial Review. An addition of the same frontage and height (twelve stories) is to be erected this year and all the space in both buildings will be occupied by the Pictorial Review.

Around the corner in 38th street is the twelve-story building, 120x100, held under net lease by the Art Color Printing Company. It is fully tenanted. In 39th street between Seventh and Eighth avenues are the 75-foot buildings erected by the Marmac Construction Company and fully rented and the large publishing house of McCall & Company.

In 43d street, just west of Eighth avenue, is the fifteen-story printing house of Chas. Scribner's Sons. The floors not occupied by Scribners are leased for long terms to responsible printers and lithographers. In 18th street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, is the Monahan Express Company building with only two vacant floors.

Seventh Avenue Project.

At 25th street and Seventh avenue is a big new building owned and occupied by three firms in the printing trades—the Publishers' Printing Company, Wm. Knoepke Pamphlet Binding Company and F. A. Ringler & Co. West of Ninth avenue in 25th street is the ten-story building on plot 125x100 leased to the Rome Metallic Bed Company and the Isaac H. Blanchard Printing Company.

This property was leased by the McKeon Realty Company to the Rome Co. for 21 years on a net basis, four floors sublet to the Blanchard Co., the building erected and sold—all within a year. Geo. W. Loft now owns the property.

At the corner of Ninth avenue and 26th street is a building completed this year by the Heywood, Strasser & Voigt Lithograph Co. This firm occupies six floors and has sublet the remaining four floors to printing and lithographing firms for 10-year periods. The Wolff Bindery erected an eight-story building 225x100 at Nos. 518-534 West 26th street and filled all the floors with allied firms.

The Williams Printing Co. followed the same course and improved the block front on 11th avenue between 36th and 37th streets with an eight-story building.

Near Tenth Avenue.

The largest recent operation was the erection by the McKeon Realty Co. of a thirteen-story building 131x100 at Nos. 424-438 West 33d street. Floors in this structure were rented to the Library Bureau, Zeese Wilkinson Company and other prominent firms and the property was sold last spring to Joseph Guinet for about $700,000.

At the northwest corner of 36th street and Tenth avenue the Hill Publishing Co. is putting the finishing touches to what it claims is the finest printing trades building in town. This structure has twelve stories, although it was built the height of a sixteen-story building, and covers a plot 175x100. It embodies many unusual features such as double floors, humidifying devices, automatic ventilators, iced drinking water and mailing chutes. The exterior of the building is of white glazed terra cotta and has an unusual expanse of windows. The Hill Co. occupies four floors and has rented the store to the Oxford Paper Co. and five lofts to the Carey Printing Company.

Three new buildings are now in course of erection on the west side. One occupies the 75-foot plot at Nos. 344-348 West 38th street between Eighth and Ninth avenues, another a plot 125x100 at Nos. 438-448 West 37th street and the third a plot 250x80 at Nos. 406-426 West 31st street. Each one of these buildings is about one-third rented, leases being made from the plans before ground was broken.

The last-named building is the result of three years' planning and it aims to embody ideal arrangements for the printing trades. As good light is essential to good printing, this particular site was selected after a painstaking search of the neighborhood as embodying the best features obtainable. It has unobstructed north light across the open cut of the Pennsylvania Railroad which is 40 feet deep and 2 blocks wide. Because of its shallow depth there will be no dark corners or waste space in the center of floors in the new building. The structure will be fifteen stories high with a ceiling height of nearly 14 feet on each floor. There will be a basement and sub-basement to provide storage room for paper stock and space for an unusually extensive heating plant. The top floor will be equipped with skylights, dark rooms and special plumbing for the business of photoengraving and color plate making.

A great deal of thought has been given to the arrangement of columns, stairways and elevators so that printing machinery of varying sizes could be set up with the greatest economy of space and operated with the maximum efficiency. All electric wiring will be placed in the floors, leaving the ceiling clear and unobstructed. The building itself will be of skeleton steel construction rigidly braced to prevent sway and sheathed with brick, terra cotta, concrete and wire glass.

The land consists of 11 parcels formerly held by as many individual owners. It was pieced together only after negotiations which extended over the course of fourteen months. To-day it represents the last big plot near the Pennsylvania Terminal that can be secured without recourse to the courts or without heavy expense.

It is expected to deliver the building for occupancy Jan. 1, 1915. The total cost of land and building is about $1,500,000, which makes it the most important commercial improvement in the Pennsylvania district. Early in the spring the store, basement and first four lofts were leased to the American Book Bindery (for many years located at Cherry and Rutgers streets) for a term of 15 years at an aggregate rental of about $750,000.

REAL ESTATE AND THE YOUNG MAN

The Requirements and the Rewards of a Useful Life Calling Described by Charles E. Duross

WHILE the professions always seem to be crowded, the opportunities are constantly broadening in real estate because of the increasing numbers of people seeking homes in the cities and suburbs every year, writes Charles E. Duross, of the New York Real Estate Board, in "America." There is a constant moving and shifting of trade centers, and manufacturing and building is ever active. These all require attention and guidance by the real estate man, who should be a man of unquestioned integrity and upright dealing. Character forms his principal stock in trade which is the good will and confidence of his customers. Once he has established his reputation for honesty and square dealing he will have no lack of clients who will keep him busy, for every man of worth seeks or hopes to acquire real estate in one form or another. Real estate is the foundation of much of our wealth and therefore a young man starting out in life to seek his fortune ought to consider well the advantages of getting at the foundation at the beginning.

Although it looks easy to go to the fountain head and gather in the prize, the actual quest is sometimes like the search for the beginning of the rainbow. Not all real estate leads to wealth and discrimination must always be used. I once heard a story of a famous United States Senator, who was invited to make a campaign speech in one of the Western States, in aid of an aspiring statesman. At the conclusion of the address, there was great enthusiasm, and the politician in thanking the orator said: "Now Senator, as a token of our esteem and gratitude for coming amongst us I am going to present you with a section of land in Sun Rise Township of our county." The Senator, of course, was very much puffed up and told the hotel clerk about his good fortune and the generosity of the politician. But the clerk in a warning voice said: "Senator, be careful he does not slip you two of those sections." The lesson is obvious. It is always better to investigate before you plunge.

What type of young man is best adapted to succeed in the real esate business? That is one of the problems in life for which no rules are laid down. I should say, however, after a long experience of my own and the satisfaction of training a dozen or more young men, several of whom blossomed out into successful real estate men each with a business of his own, that any serious-minded, healthy young man with good walking power, imagination and determination to succeed, willing to work hard and wait for results, is the kind of man to make real estate his life work. The fruits of the labor are often long delayed but the work is always absorbing and of infinite variety. It is never monotonous. The rewards are sometimes princely to a few, but then that is the result rather of speculation and investment than agency brokerage or management. One of the advantages a beginner has over the struggling professional man is that it is not necessary for him to wait for the chance client to come to him before he can prove his knowledge and ability, but he may strike out into the broad business or social world and lay his plans and propositions before any one who may have money and courage to carry out the proposed schemes. I do not pretend to know, but as I sit here writing, it occurs to me that Christopher Columbus became the first real estate man, when he put this great Continent on the map. The large development which he opened up has furnished a fertile field for his successors down to the present time.

Looks Good for Builders.

William G. Morrisey says the Bath Beach and Bensonhurst sections offer every opportunity for the building of high-class houses. It is an exceptionally attractive section, in his opinion, because of its many natural advantages, having a mile and a half of beach, fronting on the beautiful Gravesend Bay, where bathing and boating are the principal pastimes during the summer season.

As there are only three or four apartment houses in the locality at present, it looks like a profitable field for builders in view of the prospective new subway facilities.

Organization of Builders at Portchester.

For the purpose of settling amicably differences which may arise between employers and employes, the leading builders of Portchester have organized the Building Construction Employers' Association, with the following officers: President, J. Fred Dold; vice-presidents, William Hamilton, Harry S. Townsend, Charles Marshall; secretary, Robert J. Armstrong; treasurer, Neil Brown. Contractors engaged in the building and construction business in Rye and in East Portchester are included in the membership.

VALUE OF RECORDS TO AN APPRAISER

This Branch of Business Requires Intimate Knowledge of the City, and Years Are Consumed in Accumulating Necessary Data

PROBABLY one of the best forms of insurance that a property owner can carry is to have his holdings properly appraised, not in a slapdash manner, but rather by a firm which makes a specialty of this portion of the realty business. The majority of owners do not realize the importance of this step and consequently are not fully informed as to what their holdings are really worth. Oft times the wish is father to the thought and they feel that a certain parcel should be worth a given amount, therefore it is. Disappointment is often the result of this policy and in many instances the investor is prejudiced against realty.

This man, however, would not consider, for a minute, running his own business along the same lines. At least once a year he takes an inventory of his stock, not only the amount on hand, but also the value. Depreciation plays a big part where merchandise is involved, though when brick and mortar are concerned the item of deterioration is altogether overlooked.

Conditions Always Changing.

The usual answer given by a property owner to the question of whether he has had an appraisal recently is "No." When the purchase was made his favorite broker told him solemnly that it was valued at an amount in excess of the purchase price, which while all being true, still as time goes on conditions change, new loans obtained, and the parcel is placed upon an entirely new footing.

Then again the owner should know for his own satisfaction what the present day market value is, so that when an offer is made for the property an intelligent answer can be given. Many owners have lost money, because they overstayed the market, while if they understood how the trend was going they could have withdrawn and invested elsewhere at a profit.

Choosing An Appraiser.

While the foregoing is all true, still the danger point is to be faced in the choosing of a competent appraiser. During the last few years the city has expanded to such an extent that but few houses have been able to keep abreast of the times in every section. The result has been that many concerns have specialized in given sections and should occasion arise where business is to be done outside of their zone, other firms in the vicinity of the property are consulted. While this is typical of the selling and leasing fields, it is still more so when appraisals are considered.

To properly appraise a piece of real estate it is necessary for the appraiser to have a history of the property and this is only obtainable through a long accumulation of records extending over a period of years. These records must not be confined only to the property in question, but must also embrace holdings in the neighborhood. Intimate knowledge of "past performances" and "future possibilities" must also be taken into consideration, otherwise grave mistakes are almost sure to be made.

Most Properties Mortgaged.

Virtually every parcel of property in Manhattan carries with it a loan, but in most cases the borrower puts it up to the lender to have the appraisal made, though he has to foot the bill. Of course this is all well and good as far as it goes, because the lender won't put out his money without an appraisal. Does it not follow that if the lender thinks that he must be thoroughly satisfied as to the value of the property, that the owner of the fee should be likewise. Is it likely that the same man would be contented to have a buyer set a value upon merchandise to be sold? Whether the deal went through or not, the seller would certainly be in a position to intelligently talk about the value of the goods to be disposed of, if he knew its true worth.

Appraising a Specialty.

Realizing the magnitude of the appraisal business and the fact that it is a specialty in itself, many real estate firms do not attempt to enter this field. In the same way some concerns confine themselves to the selling and leasing branches, disregarding the management branch of the business. Realty values have risen in Manhattan to such a figure that great care must be exercised in order to reach an equitable price for a given parcel. Not only is the value of the land and the cost of the building to be considered, but also its adaptability to present day needs of the section in which it is located.

Sections of the city are continually changing. Tenants are a shifting quantity and as a rule follow along the line of least resistance. In many instances sections which for years were known as wholesale districts are now given over to office buildings; where retail concerns were located, now wholesalers do business; where only residences were, today there are many instances of business encroachment, so that the districts are now no longer desirable for living purposes. All these changes have placed realty upon an entirely different footing. Values today are at total variance from those of ten years ago, hence the necessity of an appraiser.

Opinion of a Broker.

Harry Stewart Hall, of N. Brigham Hall & Wm. D. Bloodgood, Inc., in speaking of the value of appraisals to property owners, said this week: "Too much stress cannot be laid upon the necessity of an appraiser. He fills a sphere of his own and is of inestimable value to the owner. Years ago I realized what an opportunity existed in Manhattan for this class of work, though at that time all my friends said that should I undertake this branch of the business that I would run up against a stone wall.

"In 1892 we started a system of keeping track of properties, but after a six months' trial temporarily abandoned the project. This lapse was not due to any change of heart, but the market was active at that time and we felt that more money could be made by using our time in other branches of the business. In 1895, however, a system was started which has been kept up to the present time, and in my opinion it is one of the most complete in existence.

"For virtually twenty years every item which has been published regarding any Manhattan property has been filed on cards. These records include conveyances, mortgages, foreclosure suits, foreclosure auctions, lis pendens, projected buildings, building loan contracts, alterations, recorded leases, as well as reported leases, reported sales, partition suits, voluntary auction sales and estates appraised. In addition to the above a large amount of general information about properties has been accumulated and indexed, as well as newspaper clippings.

Record and Guide Valuable.

"The Record and Guide has furnished us with the large percentage of records, the form used being the most adaptable to a filing system. We adopted the large card system, the size used being about 5½x14 inches. These cards are not captioned for individual properties but are divided into blocks. The advantage of this system is that cards do not have to be taken out for every parcel, where plottage is to be considered.

"There are but few parcels of realty that have not some record against them during the last twenty years. To be sure it may only be the installation of a dumbwaiter, or some other trivial matter, but still a clue to the property is given, which may prove of value to the realty man. There are many ways which the system can be utilized outside of appraising, so we are killing several birds with one operation.

Capitalization of Income.

"The value of real estate is the capitalization of the income. This is a very important factor to be considered where appraisals are concerned. In many instances appraisers just consider the value of the land and the building and let it go at that, but the subject is of much more importance and many details must be looked into before an intelligent and unbiased judgment can be obtained. The fact that a structure of specific type is erected in a given location is not enough. Many times were slight alterations made, the income producing qualities would be increased materially, with the consequence that the value of the property would be enhanced. Buildings upon a net rental basis, or upon long term leases are frequently easier to appraise than those in which tenants are continually shifting and which cannot be classed as either fish, flesh or fowl."

A Riverside Drive Improvement.

Title to the lands needed for the widening of Riverside Drive in the vicinity of West 181st street will be vested in the city on October 1. The improvement will consist of building a service street from a point 400 feet south of 181st street to a point 500 feet north, and grading, flagging, etc. West 181st street from Northern avenue to Riverside Drive; Haven avenue from West 180th street to West 181st street; Northern avenue from a point about 100 feet south of West 181st street to a point about 84 feet north of West 181st street.

The work to be done comprises the following: 35,000 cubic yards filling, 6,680 cubic yards earth and rock excavation, 3,760 linear feet new and old curbing, 3,840 square feet bluestone flagging relaid, 5,700 square feet granolithic sidewalk, 6,510 square feet new bluestone flagging. The cost of the improvement is estimated to be $61,000.

URGENT NEED OF NEW SOURCES OF REVENUE

Declaration By the Real Estate Board—Calls on the Board of Estimate to Eliminate Unnecessary Committees, Commissions and Offices

THE Real Estate Board of New York at a meeting of its Board of Governors this week took up for serious discussion the question of the city's finances and the obvious need for economies of the most rigid kind, especially in view of the $100,000,000 loan just negotiated by the city through a banking syndicate.

As a result of action taken a communication has been forwarded to Mayor Mitchel, Comptroller Prendergast, President McAneny of the Board of Aldermen, President Marks of the Borough of Manhattan, and to the other members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, calling attention to the need for economy in municipal affairs, and suggesting a method by which this may be secured.

Resolutions Adopted.

The Real Estate Board believes that new sources of revenue should at once be sought out and utilized; that a number of duplicate and unnecessary committees, commissions, Bureaus and officials should at once be weeded out, and even that some salaries should be reduced. And it asks the Board of Estimate to appoint a commission to confer with it and other civic and business organizations on the recommendations made. These suggestions are embodied in the resolution sent out on Wednesday to the Board of Estimate and reading as follows:

Whereas, The Board of Estimate and Apportionment by resolution on September 11, 1914, has adopted a policy in regard to improvements and financing city obligations that must materially increase the City Budget; and

Whereas, The fact that on July 1, 1914, there were uncollected taxes amounting to $154,000,000, besides many millions of uncollected assessments, is conclusive evidence that the present sources of city income can bear no further burden; and

Whereas, This great amount of uncollected tax exists notwithstanding the fact that there have been sales of tax liens in every borough of the city during the past five years; and

Whereas, While it is absolutely necessary that a policy of economy and retrenchment be adopted and rigorously followed, it is also important that necessary improvements should not be curtailed, and that there should be no general dismissal of minor employees; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Real Estate Board of New York call to the attention of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment the necessity for the following:

First, to find and utilize immediately such new sources of city revenue as may be made readily available.

Second, to appoint a committee of the Board of Estimate to confer with representatives of the Real Estate Board and of other business and civic organizations, and to consider with them the proposed City Budget for 1915 with the serious purpose, in this period of financial stress, of eliminating all duplicate or unnecessary committees, commissions, bureaus or officials, and of reducing such salaries as may, on investigation, be found to be excessive.

Resolved, further, That the co-operation of other taxpayer, civic and business organizations be enlisted in this effort of the Real Estate Board to inaugurate a regime of economy and retrenchment commensurate with the necessities of the times.

ECONOMY of an extraordinary kind, in municipal expenditures, is advised in a series of resolutions which the Real Estate Board has addressed to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the City of New York. The City, which has just had to borrow one hundred million dollars, owing to financial stress, is now making up its Annual Budget. Millions of dollars could be saved to the taxpayers by a proper pruning of the allowances usually made to various departments and commissions, in the opinion of many civic bodies. The Real Estate Board asks that a committee be appointed not only with this purpose in view but also to consider if new sources of revenue cannot be found.

Commenting on the condition to which this resolution calls attention Mr. Laurence M. D. McGuire, President of the Real Estate Board, said:

"It may be taken for granted that the officers of the Real Estate Board would not presume to appeal along these lines to the Board of Estimate without having first considered this matter very thoroughly. To do so without serious cause would be to affront officials of the city. As it is, we realize that the suggestions contained in this resolution are radical in the extreme. But desperate conditions require heroic treatment, and we have passed the point in the city's financial affairs where vague generalities will suffice.

A Practical Suggestion.

"We have made a definite, precise and, I believe, practical suggestion to the Board of Estimate. Briefly, what we have asked means real economy and real retrenchment. To put it baldly, it is no longer a question of economy. One economizes when one saves out of what he has. We are asking the city officials not to contract, for the next fiscal year, obligations which are beyond the city's resources, unless it is agreed beforehand to do a flagrant injustice to the main supporters of the City Government, the owners of real estate.

"The city has just arranged with a banking syndicate for a loan of $100,000,000 to meet certain obligations contracted abroad. The loan was a necessary one. The city had to make the best terms it could in a period of abnormal financial disturbance. The Board of Estimate probably did the best that could be done under the circumstances. It would be unfair and in bad taste to criticise the loan and its terms.

"Nevertheless, the fact remains that it places a grave responsibility on the present administration to do everything in its power to offset the cost of this loan, and to make as small as possible the inevitable rise in the tax rate.

"If I understand the financial statement of the city as of June 30 the entire indebtedness within the debt limit and outside of temporary debt, deducted from the net funded debt of $1,249,186,113, was $754,538,787. This deducted from the borrowing capacity of $804,985,991 (10 per cent. on $8,049,859,912) leaves a debt incurring power of $50,447,204. Of this, I understand, $37,778,700 was reserved to care for improvements to which the city is committed, leaving a somewhat attenuated available unreserved balance of $12,668,503. By no legerdemain of tax experts can any large increase in this be created and added to the borrowing power. There has been no rise in real estate values to warrant it.

"The Real Estate Board believes that the tendency of our administration of city affairs in recent years has been to multiply bureaus, to pile committee on committee and commission on commission. This tendency recently has been sharply emphasized. The average citizen knows comparatively little of these bureaus and commissions. But they are there, and they go to swell the budget and to delight the soul of the tax eater.

"An honest investigation, such as we have asked of the Board of Estimate, and which could be made without expense, will, I am sure, justify this statement. I think it will show that these more or less new fangled and amateurish side-shows of municipal government are not the evidences of real efficiency. And I am sure they are not agencies of economy. The weeding out of many of them would mean lopping off many salaries, and the reduction of others. This can be done without injury to the army of real employees who are doing the legitimate work of the city."

Resolution on Building Supervision.

The Board of Governors of the Real Estate Board has also adopted the following:

Whereas, Real estate owners have in recent years been increasingly subjected to unnecessary annoyance and expense through multiplicity of inspections and divided jurisdiction in the supervision of building construction and alteration; and

Whereas, Public officials concerned are now generally convinced that the present system of building supervision is unscientific and uneconomical, and are disposed to aid in remedying it;

Resolved, That the Real Estate Board commends the spirit of interest and co-operation displayed by city officials in this matter.

Resolved Further, That the Real Estate Board hereby expresses to the State Factory Investigating Commission its appreciation of the interest taken by the commission in the above matter, as indicated by its preparation, for criticism and suggestion, of a tentative plan with respect to building inspections.

The Preference for Apartments.

The remarkable extension of apartment house construction in distant suburbs, where there is no sign of congestion or great need for economy in land, is one of the signs of the times. Why should one go to the country to live in a flat? was once considered an unanswerable question. But families that could afford a house of their own are taking apartments nowadays in suburban districts—in Yonkers, Mount Vernon, Flushing, Jamaica and Elmhurst. In all these places builders who have tried the experiment of erecting apartment houses have found them successful. The extension of the subway and elevated systems is creating flat house sections in various directions.

Edward A. MacDougal, president of the Queensboro Corporation, expects that the section in Queens lying between Jackson and Roosevelt avenues, contiguous to the rapid transit line, will witness soon the greatest apartment house development that has ever been seen in the city of New York.

A MUNICIPAL UNION FREIGHT TERMINAL

How the Randalls and Wards Islands Project Fits Into the Other Plans for Marginal Railroads and Freight Tunnels

By J. BLEEKER MILLER and REGINALD PELHAM BOLTON

THE erection of the Brooklyn elevated freight railroad, from Brooklyn Bridge to Red Hook, having been determined upon, and legal proceedings having been commenced, it is natural to consider, first its connection with the proposed central freight yard at Randalls and Wards Islands. The direct line for such a connection—after reaching Manhattan Island, by one of the bridges, indicated on the map, in the Record and Guide of August 15—would be down First avenue to Fifteenth street, and then, turning eastward, down Avenue A to a point about opposite the east end of Canal street.

This line might be either elevated or subway, as the city authorities may determine,—but from this point a tunnel would begin, to pass under the East river and reappear on the Brooklyn waterfront, at the north end of the elevated freight railroad, already decided upon.

First avenue and Avenue A are the only avenues not now occupied either by an elevated or subway railroad; they are of good width and many manufactories are located on them and in their vicinities; the warehouses, private or municipal, which would certainly accompany this plan, as local distributing agencies of the freight, would draw many more factories and stores to the neighborhood. The erection of such a structure would mean commercial life to this dormant part of the city and an immediate and great increase in real estate values.

Would Make Avenue A an Artery.

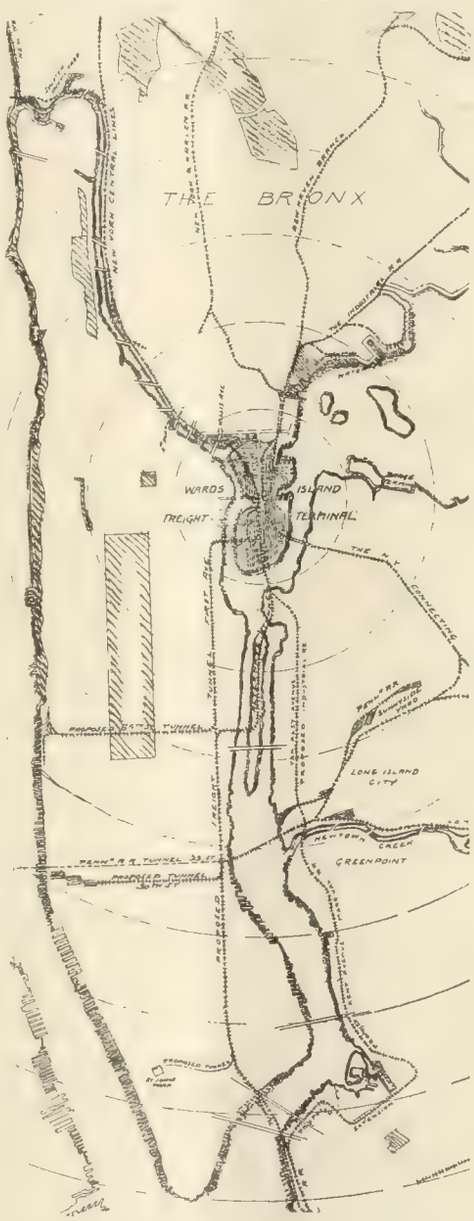
It is self evident what advantage would result to the Brooklyn waterfront if the whole of it—down to the Bush Terminal—were connected by uninterrupted railroad communication with the great central freight yard of Manhattan with all of the East Side of Manhattan, and with the other boroughs, as will be shown below; the reciprocal advantage to the railroads using the central freight depot on Randalls and Wards Islands to the manufacturers on the East Side of Manhattan and to the other boroughs, requires no explanation.



Assuming that the line down First avenue and Avenue A would be the shortest and therefore also the natural line of connecting the proposed central freight depot and the one municipal freight railroad which has already been decided upon, like the Brooklyn elevated, let us next consider how far this line would be desirable for the municipal railroad which is likely to be the next one to be legally adopted. We refer to the proposed elevated or subway freight railroad on Manhattan Island, on the West Side, extending southwardly from the New York Central freight yard at 59th street to the St. John's park freight depot or beyond to the Battery.

"Ls" Could Be Feeders.

It is submitted that three elevated or subway freight railroads might be constructed, from the First avenue and Avenue A line, running westward,—one at 65th street, one at 30th street and one along Canal street. Each of these lines would run into one of the freight yards of the New York Central, on the Hudson river, and through these lines the freight arriving at the proposed central freight depot at Randalls and Wards Islands, could be distributed to the several centers from which merchants have been accustomed to procure their goods in the past.

At first it might be necessary to build only one of these westward lines,—say that through 65th street, and the freight distribution might then be made from the freight yard at 59th street, as practically agreed upon, by the city and the railroad. Or the line to 30th street freight yard might first be built and through it the railroads arriving from the West on the New Jersey side of the Hudson might reach the central freight yard at Randalls and Wards Islands, from their points north of 23d street and freight along the West Side of the city might be distributed, north or southwards, by elevated or subway.

Or it might be found most convenient to build an elevated freight railroad westward through broad Canal street to St. John's park depot, and from that point distribute to the north and south.

Either of these three routes would satisfy the merchants on the West Side and would still preserve the beautiful residential section between 59th street and Spuyten Duyvil, free from the nuisances of which it now complains. It is true that the distance to the West Side from Spuyten Duyvil would be somewhat longer, by way of the proposed central freight yard on Randalls and Wards Islands than by the present shore line on the Hudson river. But the delays which accompany the use of that line, on account of only one train being able to enter the yard at 59th street at one time and be distributed, more than compensates for the slightly greater distance by the way now proposed, through a large freight yard where no delay of hours would accompany the ordinary entrance and exit of freight.

Of course the freight yards of the New York Central on the Hudson river waterfront would be much smaller than those at present in use, as the shifting and storing, loading and unloading of cars would be done mainly at the central freight yard on Randalls and Wards Islands, and only the cars or goods when actually called for by the merchant would be shipped to the West Side freight yards. Much freight would also go direct by water or the other local freight lines to the warehouses in other districts; the "empty" cars, which constitute about one-third of the present West Side traffic of the New York Central, could also be returned by water to the several railroads to which they are consigned. Of course, the three westward crosstown freight lines from First avenue and Avenue A to the Hudson river would also have one or more municipal or private freight warehouses on their course, across the city, where freight could be stored until called for.

May Connect Newtown Creek.

Lack of space prevents the consideration of the location of municipal freight lines in the boroughs other than Brooklyn and Manhattan, where the municipal authorities are definitely committed to the construction of such lines. A glance at the map shows at once the advantage of the location of this central freight depot on Randalls and Wards Islands for the boroughs of the Bronx and Queens. Inquiry at the office of the Board of Trade in the former borough and at the Chamber of Commerce, in the latter borough, will produce maps and pamphlets showing how vitally those boroughs are interested in the question of municipal freight transportation. The connection of the important district around Newtown Creek, by means of the line along Queensboro waterfront, northward to the proposed central freight depot which it would reach by a short tunnel, would be most important. In the course of time, Newtown Creek district might also be connected to the southward, along the waterfront, by a freight line, with the elevated freight municipal railroad, already decided upon, from Brooklyn Bridge to Red Hook. Great stress was laid upon the necessity for such a connection in the recent discussions which led to the adoption of the Brooklyn Bridge and Red Hook line. If it had only been imagined that this line could be connected along the waterfront northward from Newtown Creek with a great central freight yard, such as that herein outlined on Randalls and Wards Islands, doubtless the insistance on the extension from Brooklyn Bridge to Newtown Creek would have been much greater.

In conclusion,—as an excuse for this long communication, let us say that the cost of freight transportation to and from the city of New York is not high; it is the cost of freight transportation within Greater New York which eats up the profits and which must be lessened materially.

There will be no direct State tax this year, Governor Glynn says. The financial tide is surely turning.

Dividends deferred maketh the stockholder sick.—Wall Street Journal. Thus he learneth to invest his surplus in real estate.

New York City six per cent. revenue bonds are in strong demand abroad, according to reports. Coincident with this demand a decline of two cents per pound sterling for sight drafts on London was noted, bringing the rates to the lowest since the middle of August. These facts indicate an improvement in the general condition of affairs.

The State and local real estate bodies should indeed co-operate. They could help each other materially in legislative work at Albany. But as they must have interests in common, in order to work together, the State association would do well to take a stand in favor of the great reforms in the State laws for which the local bodies are contending.

Scientific efficiency methods, so called, without a leaven of common sense and practical knowledge resulted no differently in the experience of the Inter-state Commerce Commission than they do in private affairs. More revenue and less science is what the railroads need, if they are to keep their credit good and raise the funds with which to make the physical betterments that will help to make times good. The investment in American railroads amounts to fifteen billion dollars, and nearly six hundred million of their total bonded debt is in default. They can't keep pace with the demands for higher wages and better service unless they get more revenue, and the country cannot expect general prosperity until the railroads are prosperous.

Let Us Have More Sources of Revenue.

The financial administration of the city, assisted ably and loyally by the local banks, has managed to extricate New York from the precarious condition in which its credit was placed as the result of its obligations to Europe. The immediate cost of this work of extrication has not been heavy. Owing to the good will of the bankers it has, indeed, been unexpectedly light. But the taxpayers should clearly understand that the ultimate cost of dealing with the situation will be very heavy. The bankers who helped the city in its recent emergency insisted as a condition of their help that some means should be taken to reduce the floating obligations of New York, and that adequate measures should be adopted to retire more quickly part of its long-term borrowing. There can be no doubt that the alteration in the financial methods of the city on which the bankers insisted is necessary to the ultimate financial well-being of the New York municipal body, but there is also unfortunately no doubt that it will require a considerable increase in the revenue of the city from taxation. The increase may be postponed for a year, but come it eventually must, and inasmuch as it must come, preparations should be made now in order properly to reduce and distribute the burden of the future expense.

The Record and Guide trusts that the property owners of New York and their organized leadership understands how serious the situation is. The proposed increase in taxation is certain to come, and when it does come it will amount to many millions of dollars a year. If it is collected from real estate it will be large enough to increase the tax roll by seven or eight points, and to make a substantial difference in the earning power of many income-bearing properties. There will be no apparent opportunity of distributing the increased burden among the occupiers of the buildings for some years to come. The additional burden of taxation will be literally crushing to many property owners, who have been suffering severely from the recent shifting of business centers. It might result in a good deal of forced liquidation and in consequently rendering precarious the position of many property owners who at present possess a substantial equity in their holdings.

It is essential, consequently, that a united and successful attempt be made by the property owners of the city to have this increase in taxation derived from some source other than real estate. In making this attempt, the property owners can apparently depend on the assistance of the financial administration of the city. At any rate, the Comptroller, Mr. Prendergast, has declared that new sources of taxation should be tapped. Neither can there be any reasonable doubt as to the kind of property from which the city should derive its increased revenue. An increased increment tax would not be of any use, because at least in the near future there will not be any unearned increment. A renewed attempt to derive an increasing revenue from the personal property tax would be unwise and would meet with vigorous and justifiable opposition. The European practice of levying part of the tax on the tenants of buildings has much to recommend it, but it is politically impossible. Any proposal to tax ordinary business would immediately result in the transfer of a certain amount of business to competing cities and would consequently vitally injure the prosperity of the city.

There remains only one really considerable source of taxation, which is those classes of business which are essentially local and which cannot escape a reasonable burden of taxation. The State of New York has already appropriated the revenue to be devoted from the most lucrative of these kinds of business. It was until recently deriving several millions of dollars a year from its tax on stock and bond sales, but there are other classes of business which would be even more unable to escape direct taxation. The whole amusement, restaurant and hotel trade of New York could be made to produce very considerable revenue without driving any business out of the city. When the new taxes were first imposed some weak theatres, hotels and restaurants might be forced to shut up; but the burden of the new tax could soon be shifted to the consumer. There are no sound moral or fiscal objections to the taxation of the business of providing New Yorkers with amusement. The city should claim at least one-tenth of the price at which all tickets for entertainments are sold to the public. The metropolitan cities of Europe derive large revenues from this source, and the only reason why New York does not and cannot do the same is the political influence of the people who are engaged in this class of business.

Well Worth Considering.

The Commerce Bureau, which has been proposed by Commissioner Hartigan, is well worth serious consideration. He wants the new city charter to provide for a regular department of commerce, whose business it would be to supplant private agencies in promoting the industrial and commercial interests of the city. The work of the proposed bureau, as outlined by the Commissioner, would be very comprehensive. It would, in the first place, systematically collect and disseminate statistical information respecting the commerce of New York. Whenever the interests of the city were affected by proposed legislation or administrative action at Washington and Albany it would send competent negotiators to represent the city's interests. It would furnish wholesale and retail merchants, manufacturers and consumers information in respect to trade opportunities and requirements. It would acquaint dealers with the sources from which they could draw their supplies. It would provide a medium of exchange of information and ideas between the shippers and the railroads. It would encourage farmers to bring their goods to the city and help the producer to find a market. It would act as a clearing-house of information as to the laws in this and other States and in other countries, which affect commerce. It would have a permanent press bureau, which would advertise throughout the country the advantages of New York as a commercial and manufacturing center. In short, it would actively promote New York business in every possible way short of growing subsidies.

The idea is undoubtedly a good one, and it ought to be adopted. But in organizing the new bureau, and in defining its work, care should be taken not to duplicate any existing instrument of the same objects. The Bureau of Commerce should supplement the work of the Merchants' Association and the Chamber of Commerce rather than provide a substitute for their work. Officers of both of these organizations should be consulted as to the scope of the bureau's work and as to the best means of helpful co-operative action. But while these associations should be consulted, it is no less true that they have never performed for New York the work which the local Chambers of Commerce of other cities have proposed for their neighborhoods. It is precisely because their work of promotion, publicity and arrangement has not been sufficiently effective that it will be worth while for the city to appropriate money for the expenses of the proposed new department.

—It is the general opinion in real estate circles that under the present business conditions the Interstate Commerce Commission should re-open the Rate Hearing Case and give the railroads of the country an opportunity to present additional evidence in the matter of granting the railroads an increase in their freight rates.

—In view of the economies forced upon the municipality, the Sixth avenue extension project is one that is not likely to be urged for awhile.

A Lesson from History.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

I thank you for the editorial in your issue of September 12 on the proposed creation of a city building department. It is pleasant to know that we can disagree amicably.

History is valuable only for the lessons it teaches us, so that we may not repeat the mistakes of those who have gone before us. It does not seem to be generally known that the Charter of 1898 provided for a central building department, having as its head a board consisting of three Commissioners appointed by the Mayor. It also provided for local offices in the boroughs under deputies. The results were so bad that the Charter was amended and the present system of local jurisdiction inaugurated.

Now we propose to repeat this mistake.

Street Car Regulation.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Recently a new regulation has been enforced requiring the surface cars to stop at the near, instead of the far, crossings as heretofore. Too short a time has elapsed to test out the merits or demerits of the change, but there are several crossings which should be excepted from the rule. For instance, Broadway, Sixth avenue and 34th street. Those passengers desiring to go East, must go to the west side of Broadway, frequently necessitating a long and dangerous crossing over two important and busy arteries. The cars should always stop on both sides of Herald Square. There are other points, specially affecting crosstown lines, which might be excepted from the ruling. This is only a suggestion and not a criticism.

New York City's Tax Rate.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Now that the city has actually borrowed $100,000,000 at six per cent., it is well to realize to what extent the city has been imposed upon by the transaction and the effect on the city's future tax rate. The city did not need $100,000,000 when it made the loan, because only a small portion of the $80,000,000 borrowed abroad was payable. The bulk of the $80,000,000 does not fall due for several weeks. Why, therefore, did the city accept an exchange rate of $5.035 per pound sterling for the entire $80,000,000 when only a small portion of that sum is now due and when the exchange rate has been much lower since that rate was accepted?

The purchase of exchange at the accepted rate means an additional cost of about three and one-half per cent., or $2,800,000 to the interest cost of 4¼ per cent. on the $80,000,000, or a total cost of $6,200,000 for the $80,000,000 for one year. The cost of this sum for the second year at six per cent is $4,800,000, or a total cost of $11,000,000 for two years. Besides this, the city is paying $1,200,000 interest on $20,000,000, also for one year.

Comptroller Prendergast announced with satisfaction that the bankers who organized the syndicate were rendering their services gratis. Under the terms of the loan, the syndicate managers (J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co.), are allowed a maximum of two per cent. on the difference in exchange, or a total of $1,600,000. They and the other members of the syndicate, are also allowed four per cent. profit on the entire $100,000,000 which will be deposited in their banks, the interest on the bonds being six per cent. and the deposit rate to the city being two per cent. Money is worth more than six per cent. now and the bankers' profit on the $100,000,000 may be more than four per cent.

The tax budget next year must provide full interest on the new loan, and this means an addition of eight points in the tax rate unless a corresponding sum can be cut out of the present budget. Under a resolution passed by the Board of Estimate when the $100,000,000 loan was accepted, new city improvements during the next three years are to be financed as follows: 1915, one-quarter of total cost included in budget, three-quarters paid out of 15-year bonds; 1916, one-half included in budget, balance paid out of 15-year bonds; 1917, three-quarters included in budget, one-quarter paid out of 15-year bonds. In 1918, all new improvements must be paid out of the budget. All 15-year bonds may be of an instalment nature, one-fifteenth being payable annually. The effect of this arrangement will be that the budget for 1915 will be increased at least three million dollars more and that the increase due to new public improvements will grow until the addition to the budget for this purpose in 1918 will be at least ten million dollars. The bonds that will be issued for 15 years to take up the new $100,000,000 loan, will also be paid off serially from the budget at the rate of $6,666,666 a year, plus interest on the outstanding portion, which means an additional total of $10,000,000 to the annual budget for fifteen years after 1917.

The total increase in the annual budget after 1917, therefore, will be at least $20,000,000 over the present budget. This mean an addition of 25 points to the tax rate, which is now 1.81 to 1.91, according to boroughs. The tax rate for 1918 and thereafter will be at least 2.06 and more, according to boroughs, and it must rise during the next three years unless the present budget can be reduced as much as the imperative addition due to the new loan. Under the state constitution, the tax rate can reach two per cent, exclusive of the annual debt service, which is about $53,000,000. On this basis, the tax rate can rise to 2.60 before the constitutional limit is reached.

Taxpayers should remember that the city has been buying in its own tax liens during the past few year and that about one-fourth of all the taxes due during that period is still uncollected. How will the city be able to meet its annual payroll of $90,000,000 and all other expenditures contained in the budget, if taxes cannot be collected? The total unpaid taxes is now about $150,000,000. The city will also find itself overassessed, if the value of real estate continues to decline.

Pincus Lowenfeld.

Pincus Lowenfeld, senior member of the firm of Lowenfeld & Prager, real estate operators, of 149 Broadway, and one of the best known figures in downtown real estate circles, died on Tuesday at his summer home at Long Branch, N. J., as a result of a stroke of apoplexy, last Saturday night. He was born in Krakaw, Austria, in 1855, and was 59 years old on July 6.

He came to this country when a young man and about twenty-five years ago began to buy and sell real estate on a small scale on the lower East Side. For several years he was active in that section, dealing principally in tenement properties. In 1895 he formed a partnership with William Prager and this firm became one of the leading real estate operating concerns of New York City. It has not confined itself to any particular branch of the business and has even undertaken and financed a number of building operations. Practically every section of the city has contributed at one time or other to its activity.

Mr. Lowenfeld will be remembered as an authority on real estate values and one of the shrewdest investors in the market. He was a member of the congregation of the Temple Rodelph Sholem, of the United Krakauer Charity and Aid Society, the Metropolitan Lodge No. 60, I. O. F. S. of I., and of Cheba Rofel Cholim. He is survived by his widow, three sons and six daughters.

The funeral services were conducted on Thursday at the Temple Rodelph Sholem, Lexington avenue and 63d street, and were the most imposing ever held in that temple. He leaves a host of friends.

THE SOMERS SYSTEM.

Will Be Used Here by the Manufacturers' Appraisal Company.

The Manufacturers' Appraisal Company which operates the Somers system is now establishing a commercial appraisal service in New York City for the accurate measurement of judgment of land values. The first territory to be covered by this service is bounded by 38th and 50th streets, Third and Eighth avenues. The unit-foot values upon street frontages within the district named are now undergoing appraisal by an advisory committee of New York City real estate experts of high standing and ability.

The committee consists of Edward H. Gilbert, of J. Edgar Leaycraft & Co.; Herman De Selding, of De Selding Brothers; John L. Parish; Oscar L. Foley, of John R. & Oscar L. Foley, and Watson P. Anderson. This will insure an opinion of street values by men who are entirely familiar with real estate conditions in this city. Their judgment, when completed, will represent a consensus of opinion of the value of one-street accessibility under normal conditions.

This judgment will be computed by the Somers rules so as to show the effect upon value of all elements of accessibility, each lot being computed as to its size, its shape, and the relation of size and shape to the various elements of accessibility. It is anticipated that the result of this service will be to standardize opinion of normal usefulness of lots throughout the district by the adoption of uniform computing methods.

When the value of a unit-foot has been agreed upon on the four sides of a city block, the exercise of judgment of the value of land in that city block is complete. The Somers System provides a method of applying that judgment accurately and scientifically to all the land in that block.

BOARD OF COUNSEL.

Will Try to Get a Change in Income Tax Regulation.

The Legislative and Laws Committee, a sub-committee of the Board of Counsel of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, held its first meeting this week at the office of the council. Walter Linder was elected chairman, and the following lawyers will serve upon the committee for the coming year: Messrs. Everett V. Abbot, Henry R. Chittick, Julius Henry Cohen, John J. Kuhn, Louis Franklin Levy, Harold M. Phillips, William Allaire Shortt, John M. Stoddard, Seth Sprague Terry.

This committee will meet on Monday afternoons, to consider constructive or existing legislation or the repeal of oppressive real estate legislation while during the legislative sessions, attentive and analytic study of proposed legislation will be maintained.

The committee has recommended that the Advisory Council immediately endeavor through the committee to secure a change in the recent income tax decision of the Treasury Department, to the effect that indebtedness secured by mortgage upon property to which the corporation has taken or is taking title or in which it has an equity, is the indebtedness of the corporation, and that interest payments on such indebtedness cannot be deducted except to the extent that the whole amount of interest paid upon bonded or other indebtedness does not exceed an amount paid upon a sum not in excess of the paid-up stock outstanding the close of the year.

The original decision of the Attorney General under the former corporation tax law, permitting deductions from the income tax returns for the interest paid by corporations, upon mortgages covering their property, when not made or assumed by the corporation, has been modified and superceded by this late decision, which the committee believes is not in accordance with the language of the act.

UP-STATERS COMING.

To Attend the Real Estate Convention Here Next Month.

MEMBERS of the steering committee of the Real Estate Association of the State of New York had conferences yesterday with President McGuire of the Real Estate Board, Secretary Helms of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, President Allan Robinson of the Allied Interests, and President Henry Bloch of the United Real Estate Owners in regard to arrangements for the state convention to be held at the Hotel Astor on Wednesday and Thursday, October 14 and 15.

The steering committee comprises President William H. Moffitt, Executive Secretary F. A. Austin, Stewart McKnight, William H. Mills, D. A. Trotta, M. Morgenthau, Jr., E. B. Boynton, C. E. Rickerson and J. Sterling Drake. The State convention is expected to consider the subject of the over-regulation of buildings and to take a stand with the local real estate bodies in favor of amending State laws which bear too heavily upon real estate interests. With the help of the State association the New York City boards could accomplish a great deal at Albany. Arrangements will be further perfected at a general meeting to be held at the Hotel Astor next Monday evening.

Columbus Circle League.

Business men in the vicinity of Columbus Circle met on Tuesday, at a luncheon in Pabst's Grand Circle Restaurant, to effect a permanent organization for the purpose of promoting and protecting the interests of property owners and business men in that vicinity, and also to take part in all movements affecting the general welfare of the city. Among those present were Street Cleaning Commissioner Maurice Featherston, Borough Secretary Ralph Folks and delegations from the Harlem Board of Commerce and the Civic Association of Queens.

A general committee was appointed to manage the affairs of the league, consisting of Paul Henry Zagat, chairman; David Robinson, director; H. C. Copeland, Edward Kellogg Baird, H. H. Bizallion, Jacob Wertheim, A. F. Berry, James V. Iverson, R. F. Spencer, Herman F. Schmidt, Jacob Reisenweber, George H. Robinson, Sol Bloom, Eugene Schliepe and N. L. Ottinger.

A special committee, consisting of Jacob Wertheim, H. C. Copeland, Clarence J. Shearn, Edward Kellogg Baird and Paul Henry Zagat, chairman, was appointed to confer with the Interborough Rapid Transit Company about the establishment of an express station at Columbus Circle to replace the present local stop. Chairman McCall and other members of the Public Service Commission are said to be in favor of the proposed express station and the new committee will work for its installation.

Board of Estimate Meeting.

In the council chamber of City Hall, the first autumn meeting of the Board of Estimate will be held on Monday, September 21, at 10:30 a. m. It was scheduled originally for Friday, the 18th inst., but was postponed on account of the inability of the Mayor to be present on that day.

A number of requests for municipal improvements will be presented for consideration, and in view of the announced policy of members of the Board of Estimate to cut down as much as possible on public improvements for the present, the meeting promises to be one of the most important of the year.

Auction at Norwalk, Conn.

Announcement is made by the M. Morgenthau, Jr., Co., that on Saturday afternoon, September 26, they will offer at auction 17 bungalow plots ranging in size from 50 x 95 feet to 241 x 249 feet, located on West Rocks road and Jarvis streets, Norwalk, Conn.

Rock Ledge Gardens, by which name the property is known, is surrounded by handsome private estates and many artistic, but simpler homes. It is improved with water, electric lights, telephones, charming walks, beautiful drives and apple, chestnut, maple and other trees.

The plots allow ample room for a garden, the rich soil giving the seeds and plants every encouragement necessary for luxurious growth. The trees dotted here and there in front lawns, others well in the back, lend charm and picturesqueness to the gardens, as well as do the cliffs at one end of Rock Ledge, where the last battle of the Revolustionary War, in southern New England, was fought.

David R. Beach Improving.

David R. Beach, the young real estate broker with offices at 76 William street, who accidentally swallowed twenty-one grains of dissolved bichloride of mercury tablets, has been resting comfortably for the last 24 hours, and at Dr. Paul Pilcher's sanitarium, Grand and Gates avenues, it was said yesterday that unless something unexpected occurs, Mr. Beach will recover. The patient lives at 363 Grand avenue.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

At the present time the apartment house leasing market is at its height and all things considered the demand is satisfactory. Brokers report that while there are a number of removals, still in the main these are confined largely to those families which have been occupying the most expensive suites. The cheaper apartments are in demand and comparatively few vacancies exist. Brokers in the Fourth avenue and other mercantile sections report a good demand for space.

There is but little hope that the market can get back into anything like a normal condition until the banking situation is settled and goods can be imported promptly from Europe. To be sure some goods have been coming in from England and Russia, but Germany's products are completely shut off from this port. There is generally a more optimistic feeling prevailing in the real estate market and brokers are free in stating that a betterment must soon take place.

"Is there not every reason to be optimistic?" said a prominent broker this week. "What more can happen to real estate? Money has been withdrawn from the country, merchants, importers and retailers have been put to it to get financial banking on account of the banks pulling in the purse strings, with the resultant condition that investors have held on to their money and refused to extend their lines. Still and all the number of forced sales of realty at auction is only nominal and does not represent any considerable factor. Loans are not being called, except in exceptional cases; in fact, there is a period of 'marking time.' I don't apprehend any further decline, except in isolated cases, but on the other hand the pendulum is about ready to swing in the opposite direction and I am sure that there will be many a prospective investor who will regret that he waited too long before taking advantage of the present golden opportunity."

The number of conveyances recorded this week in the Registrar's office shows a substantial increase as compared with last week's record. Amounts figuring in recorded mortgages also indicate an improvement.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 3 as against 14 last week and 15 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 0, as compared with 1 last week and 5 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 3 as compared with 6 last week and 10 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 99, as against 67 last week, 11 having stated considerations totaling $132,600. Mortgages recorded this week number 60, involving $990,102, as against 45 last week, aggregating $727,681.

From the Bronx, 6 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 4 last week and 6 a vear ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $617,131, compared with $522,419 last week, making a total since January 1 of $30,606,224. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $501,000, and the total from January 1, 1913, to September 20, 1913, was $39,734,170.

$1,200,000 Loan.

Paterno Brothers, Inc., Joseph Paterno, president, obtained from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company a mortgage loan of $1,200,000 on the Sanford and the Rexford, two recently completed twelve-story apartment houses occupying the block front on the east side of Broadway, between 78th and 79th streets. The houses have a frontage of 204.4 feet and each one contains suites for fifty families. The land was acquired from Harry Barnes Newberry and Alfred Barnes in May, 1913, subject to a mortgage of $500,000, of which $200,000 now remains on second mortgage. The City Mortgage Co. financed the operation with a building loan of $1,200,000.

Transfers in East 79th Street.

Another building operation may be indicated by the transfer of title this week by various owners to the 161 East 79th Street Co. of the property 159-165 East 79th street, on plot 62 x 102.2. Last Spring, the plot was reported sold to the Misses Suydam School for Girls, but evidently the grantee in the conveyances this week, was the real buyer. Also, last May, the site of 167 and 169, adjoining, was reported sold to a department store for improvement with a garage. Title to these properties has not passed as yet. A sixty-foot plot, directly opposite, at 156 to 160, was purchased last February by Hyman S. and Sydney Crystal.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

SOMETHING ABOUT TERRAZZO FLOORS

By CHARLES R. MARSH*

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for The American Real Estate Co.

TERRAZZO is defined by Russell Sturgis, in his "Dictionary of Architecture and Building" as: "An inexpensive concrete pavement used for floors in the province of Venetia, even in houses of some pretensions to elegance. Lime mortar made unusually dry is the principal material; in it are inlaid small pieces of marble, usually not too large to pass through a ring an inch and a half in diameter. The whole is beaten hard, rubbed down and polished. Fine examples are given, full size, in Gruner's 'Speciments of Oriental Art.'"

I have been unable to find anything further than the above, regarding the subject. Because of the very limited literature pertaining to terrazzo, and because of the great difference in the appearance of it and the varying ideas held as to how such work should be done, the writer was prompted, in March, 1912, to address the members of the society regarding certain vital details of this subject. The generous response to that postal card inquiry contained many varying and conflicting opinions.

This shows that the subject was an interesting one to most of us. This, in turn, prompted me to go further into the subject, and as a result individual letters were addressed to about ten contractors for terrazzo work; to about fifteen firms of architects and to five professors of architecture in the leading universities having courses in architecture.

The replies from professors of architecture were disappointing, as they contained absolutely nothing of value to a better understanding of the subject.

The Best Practice.

By ascertaining the ideas and opinions of the best architects and contractors for any class of work and supplementing that data by the opinions of superintendents who have seen and noted the results obtained by various methods and designs, we can decide on what is best both from a structural and an economic standpoint.

Superintendents all agree that it is necessary to have the floor slab well cleaned and washed before the base for the terrazzo is placed. Mention is made by very few of one of the most important items, that is, the aggregate. One supervising superintendent states: "Never use cinders, as good cinders are hard to get and expansion in most cinders causes the work to lift. Use stone, gravel, terra cotta and brick, provided they are free from coal, lime or magnesia." Contrast this with the varying opinion of a superintendent who states: "I think the best way to lay terrazzo on a fireproof floor is to use a fill, where necessary, of cinder concrete."

All contractors agree that it is best to mix the chips and cement dry and then add the water. The Fishbach Company state that they do not approve of the old and inefficient method of spreading a sand coat, and on this sprinkling marble and rolling it. When the proportions of chips to cement are mentioned it is usually one cement to two and one-half chips; one contractor thinks that it is best not to specify the proportions of cement, but that enough be added to fill the interstices. This latter method is the requirement in late office specifications. None of the contractors state the exact method of applying the marble chips.

Architects in writing specifications for terrazzo vary in the length and minuteness, but on the whole they require stricter methods than contractors propose.

Methods of Some Architects.

McKim, Mead & White specify that the wearing surface shall be placed before the base has set, and that only enough cement be added to the chips to "firmly unite the pieces."

Peabody & Stearns in their specifications for the new Boston custom house call for terrazzo one inch thick, and "to be rolled and then to have more chips strewn over the surface and rolled again."

F. M. Andrews required in the specifications for the Hotel McAlpin, New York, that there should be a cinder concrete base, and that the terrazzo should be placed two days after the laying of the same.

Carrere & Hastings in their general specifications for terrazzo require:

"Concrete ground work shall be thoroughly swept and washed and lightly sprinkled with dry Portland cement immediately before terrazzo floor mixture is placed in position. Terrazzo shall be composed of hard white marble chips and just sufficient mortar of one part white Portland cement and one and one-half parts white sand to fill the voids. This mixture shall be laid not less than one inch thick and marble chips shall be laid over the surface and rammed in."

Cass Gilbert, quoting from the specifications for the new National State Bank Building, Newark, N. J., specifies for terrazzo, which is all to be placed in corridors, as follows:

"All terrazzo is to be laid in the best manner, consisting of topping and bed; the topping being made of white Italian chips with best White Atlas cement and to be not less than one inch in thickness. The bed to be one inch thick, composed of one part Portland cement, three parts coarse sand, and five parts clean gravel. On top of bed and laid coincident with same lay the terrazzo topping."

In regard to the largest area that may be laid without expansion joints most superintendents favor the size as specified in the present office specifications, 4x4, 5x5 ft., and in some instances 6x6. One superintendent states that an area 20x20 ft. has been laid by him, and can be laid without danger of cracking; this opinion is also held by superintendents who have had large experience in this class of work. Instances of panels 16 x16, and another 20x30, are cited with remarks that they have not cracked after three of four years' wear. Personally, I know of two panels more than 200 feet in area, put in without joints of any kind, and without reinforcement, that have been subject to a great amount of traffic in a hotel lobby, that were put in nine years ago, and which show no signs of failure today.

WHAT IS A MODERN BATHROOM?

OF the two billions of dollars spent annually in this country for building construction of one sort or another about $150,000,000 is spent in providing bathing accommodations to tenants and owners. These facilities may range in individual cases from the modest bathroom appointments of the better class of tenement houses that consist of a tin flush bowl, lavatory and tin tub, either stationary or portable, to the luxurious apartment house bathroom that helps to rent an upper Fifth avenue apartment for $15,000 a year or more. This latter bathroom has every conceivable appointment, including a plunge three to five feet deep in the center of the floor.

The contents of this bathroom are secondary in importance to the furnishings. They are of enameled clay tile, glass tile trim, repressed concrete statuary of mythological sea-nymphs and a stained glass dome ceiling that depicts Old Father Neptune guarding a cluster of mermaids from equally mythological Centaurs. The equipment includes a pedestal lavatory with hot, cold and iced drinking water faucets. A plate glass shaving mirror is next in line, accompanied by an electrical shaving water heater, cut-glass brush receptacle, a sitz needle bath, a needle shower foot bath, a ladies' dressing and manicure table, a steam-heated lounge with facilities for reading in a reclining position and for rubbing as in a Turkish bath and, finally, a face plunge.

Involves Considerable Outlay.

But this sort of a bathroom is not the kind that the owner can afford to put into the average apartment house where which eight rooms bring him only $100 a month's rent, although the house-hunting tenant probably thinks he ought to supply that luxury, besides giving him three months' rent free. As a matter of fact, the owners today are supplying bathrooms in moderate-priced apartments that in the simpler days of our grandparents would have been deemed quite as luxurious as those described in the ultra-modern $15,000 suites.

It is no longer a rarity to find a completely tiled bathroom. It is quite ordinary to find in the bathrooms an inset tub that is practically one unit with the floor. The showers are quite commonplace and even the sitz is provided in many of the more recent Riverside drive apartments. Medicine cabinets are the rule rather than the exception, while such things as the pedestal lavatory, the silent flush-bowl, the manicure table and the shaving mirrors and racks are looked upon by even the tenants of moderate means as things to be expected.

The inset plunge, the face shower, the steam-heated divan and the ice-water tap are still luxuries that may become common-places in the days to come, but that is a good ways off.

Devices for Comfort.

But there are a great many little attachments and devices that go to make the bathroom a comfort for the business wearied man. Looking down a list of bathroom devices in a modern builders' catalogue makes one think that practically all the $150,000,000 spent in this country annually for plumbing fixtures, goes to the manufacturers of non-splashing bibbs, splasherless showers, hot and cold water mixers, foot warmers, tub seats, mats, dryers, hot-water makers, electric nail polishers, mechanical rubbers and vibrators, hair washers, sterilizers, perfume sprayers, powder dashers, paper containers, mirrors, medicine cabinets and receptacles of one sort or another. But it is not so.

All the plumbing in the modern bathroom must be either exposed or concealed; paradoxical to be sure, but nevertheless, a fact. If it is exposed the owner is entitled to feel one little niche nearer the heart of good breeding, because of the contention that it is more sanitary. On the other hand, there are thousands of persons apparently in equally good social standing who want all the house plumbing, bathroom included, concealed.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration

A Shower Bath Control Valve.

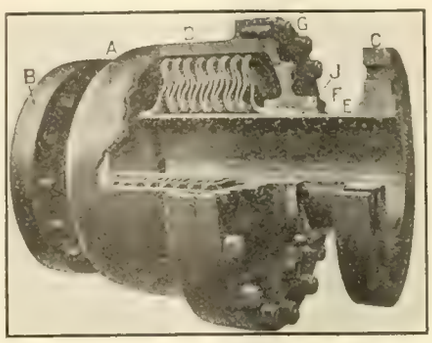
HOUSE hunters are often influenced in the selection of flats, apartments or residences by the equipment in the bath room. Real estate men and building managers have repeatedly stated that a well equipped bath room has rented premises quicker than have hardwood floors, dining-room domes or built-in refrigerators. Consequently, there is always keen interest among managers for new bathroom devices that can be pointed out as a distinctive feature of the new apartment or the one that has been recently renovated.

One of the latest efforts to improve and make comfortable the bath is a device that is being manufactured and introduced to architects, builders and building managers by the Leonard-Rooke Company, of 17 Warren street, Providence, R. I. It is herewith illustrated and shown in indexed detail so that building managers and local architects can see at a glance just what the principle of the device is.

It is ten and a half inches high and nickel-plated. It is designed to guarantee an even temperature of water in the shower bath so that no matter how many water taps are turned on in neighboring apartments the bather cannot be scalded by the sudden withdrawal of the counteracting water. The bather merely lifts up the lever latch and moves the index over to the number corresponding to the temperature desired. He then turns the valve wheel which turns the valve stem screw and lifts the balanced valves from their seats. Thermostatic coils immediately operate valves through gear and balanced yoke on which the valves are hung.



Another feature about this device is that should, for any reason, the wearing parts get out of order, the interior may be easily exposed to view. In such an event the case may be bodily lifted off. The valve wheel is taken off with lock-nut and case-screws and the whole device may be reached without disconnecting the valve from the water pipe.

The device depends upon heat alone for its action, in this respect differing from the types that depend upon pressure, air or electricity for operation. The scientific principle upon which the device is operated is that hot and cold water meeting and mixing within the valve pass through the thermostatic coils. The combined temperatures affect the coils and they force the thermostat automatically to adjust two sets of balanced temperature valves which immediately deliver the required portions of hot and cold water. The ratio of hot and cold water is changed by altering the location of the regulating lever. If cold water only is desired the lever pointer is swung to the extreme left and vice versa if hot water is desired.

High Pressure Expansion Joint.

SOMETHING new in the principle of high pressure steel expansion joints is contained in patents recently acquired by local interests. In this joint use is made of a nest of circular disks stamped from steel plates of high elastic limit, welded together to form a flexible bellows, which absorbs the movement of the pipe line.

The illustration gives some idea of the principle of the device. One end of the nest is welded to the steel tube (E) and the other end to the sleeve (F), the latter being held in place by lock nut (J). Leakage between the sleeve (F) and casing head (G) and the casing (A) is prevented by special gaskets. Only the outside of the bellows is under steam pressure, and therefore no condensation can collect within the disks. The working portion of the joint is protected from outside injury by the cast-iron casing (A) and the casing head (G), which are designed to withstand pressure up to 200 pounds per square inch. To safeguard the expansion joint against excessive movement the flange (C) will strike the lock nut (J) when the maximum lineal movement for which the joint is designed is reached.

Marble Light Screens.

WHILE it has long been known that marble in thin plates is translucent, and that beautiful effects can be obtained with it, says the American Gas Light Journal, the cost of producing thin plates prohibited the employment of marble in lamp casings until a German engineer succeeded in producing marble plates 1/8 inch to 3/8 inch thick, more translucent than ordinary milk glass. The plates are polished on both faces, and are impregnated with oil at high pressures and temperatures.

In order to determine whether the greater translucency of marble is accompanied by loss in diffusive power, as is the case with ground glass, an aperture in an opaque screen placed upon a Nernst lamp was covered successively with marble and various glasses, and the light transmitted in different directions measured. Dotted lines in the figure represent the diffusion curves.

The quantity of light emitted in any direction is proportional to the length of the numbered straight line intercepted by the curve. Each curve is accompanied by the corresponding circle of theoretical diffusion, according to the cosine law, with no loss of light. The close approximation of each curve to its circle shows that the treated marble, like the milk glass, is a good diffusing agent. The curve for ground glass is a long, narrow oval, and little light is diffused more than 20 degrees from the normal.

The translucency was measured by a photometer placed 8 feet in front of a 16x16-inch plate, illuminated by an electric bulb 4 inches behind it. Thus, it was found that the marble plate transmitted nearly 40 per cent., while the milk glass transmitted only 17 per cent. of the indident light.

The radiation from an electric bulb was allowed to fall on a vacuum thermo-element connected with a galvanometer. When plates of marble and light and dark milk glass were successively interposed the deflections were proportioned to 100,650 and 360.

Hence, though milk glass is less translucent than treated marble for visible rays, it is from 3½ to 6½ more translucent for the total radiation of a carbon filament lamp. As the visible rays are but a small part of the total radiation, it follows that the marble must be very opaque to the infra-red rays, which are not present in diffused daylight, and are probably injurious.

The fact that the eyes soon become fatigued when reading or writing by lamp light has been ascribed to the retardation of the flow of retinal pigment by red, yellow and infra-red rays, and Dr. Vogt has found that four-fifths of the radiation that reaches the retina from a carbon filament lamp consists of infra-red rays. Oculists have not yet proved conclusively that infra-red rays actually cause injury or fatigue, but this proof appears from the universal testimony that the "marble light," which is nearly free from these rays, is especially agreeable to the eyes. Treated marble seems the best of all substances now available for this purpose. It is even superior to water. Independently of the injurious effect of infra-red rays on the eyes, the elimination of radiant heat is desirable, especially with gas and oil lamps. The reader's head can be brought, without discomfort, two or three times nearer the light when marble is substituted for milk glass.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Tentative Boundaries for Proposed Suburban Fire Limits—A Zone for Detached Frame Dwellings—How the Plan Is Regarded

THE suggestion for Suburban Limits outside of the Fire Limits within which frame construction will be restricted to detached dwellings is apparently meeting with general favor. Reports to the editor of the Building Code, Rudolph P. Miller, Esq., from the several boroughs affected, so far show that many of the real estate operators as well as the residents approve of the project, and the feeling thus far seems to be that all sections of the city in which development of any kind has started might very properly be included. In view of this general sentiment the outlines for the Suburban Limits have been tentatively drawn as follows:

Proposed Suburban Limits.

In the Borough of Manhattan it is planned to include everything that is now outside of the Fire Limits. In other words, Inwood Hill, Marble Hill and the area west of Broadway between 215th street and the Harlem Ship Canal.

In the Borough of the Bronx the entire area west of Bronx Park to the Bronx River and outside of the present fire limits is included in these new Suburban Limits; besides which it includes the sections of the Borough each side of the White Plains Road known as Williamsbridge, Wakefield, Jacksonville and Washingtonville, from the Bronx River as far east as Bronxwood avenue between the Boston Post road and 234th street, and Barnes avenue above 234th street north to the City Line; a strip connecting the lower end of Williamsbridge with the settlement east of Bronx Park and south of Bear Swamp road. Here the line follows Bear Swamp road to the Harlem Bridge of the New Haven Road, which it follows as far east as Waters avenue, taking in the entire Westchester Village north of Westchester avenue. Then south of Westchester avenue the line goes as far east as Crosby avenue and as far south as Waterbury avenue over to Westchester Creek. Following Westchester Creek it goes down as far as Lafayette avenue, west along Lafayette avenue north along White Plains road and west to the Bronx River along Watson avenue, thus including Unionport. It is also proposed that City Island be included.

In the Borough of Brooklyn everything south of the present Fire Limits as far east as Ocean avenue is to be included; also Sheepshead Bay as far east as Batchelder avenue; the entire Coney Island from Seagate to the east end of the Manhattan Beach Estates. North of Avenue U the easterly boundary will be along Nostrand avenue, then following along Flatlands avenue to Schenectady avenue it runs northerly along Schenectady avenue to Beverly road, follows Beverly road to the east and includes the balance of Brownsville now outside the Fire Limits by following along Vienna avenue to Betts Creek. East of Betts Creek everything above Sutter avenue to the Borough Line of Queens is included.

In the Borough of Queens it is proposed to include the balance of Long Island City not now within the Fire Limits; also Woodside, Winfield, Maspeth, Linden Hill, Newtown, Elmhurst and Corona, the line going as far east as Peartree avenue in Corona. The area south of Metropolitan avenue is also to be included. Forest Hills and the Cord Meyer development and Kew Gardens will form a part. Then a strip each side of Jamaica avenue running as far east as the Nassau County Line, where it meets the Jericho Turnpike, as far north as Forest Park and Union Turnpike out to Holliswood, along the northerly extremity of Holliswood over to the northerly extremity of Queens Court, and as far south as Liberty avenue through Woodhaven and Suwanee avenue through Jamaica. Between the Rockaway road and Merrick road the territory is extended south to include Cedar Manor. East of the Merrick road it keeps close to Jamaica avenue until it reaches the developments along Hollis avenue where it is intended to include the developments known as Bellair Gardens, Hollis Estates, Hollis Gardens and Queens and Queens Court. In the northerly section of the Borough it is intended to include all of College Point, Whitestone, Beechhurst, Flushing practically as far south as Flushing Creek and east of Flushing avenue north of Jackson avenue and Broadway to the Nassau County line. The entire peninsula of Rockaway from the Nassau County line west is also included.

Brooklyn and The Bronx Favor Plan.

Jacob H. Shaffer, chairman of the Committee on the Borough of Brooklyn of the City Club, is outspoken in his approval of the project and said that the principle was a very desirable one to apply and could not but be beneficial to Brooklyn.

W. W. Niles, chairman of the Committee on the Borough of The Bronx of the City Club, approves the proposition most emphatically, as did also Mr. James L. Wells, real estate operator and appraiser of The Bronx. Mr. Wells' experience in the development of Bronx real estate has for years put him in a class by himself as an expert on its needs and values.

Alderman James Hamilton and Jacob Weil, both from The Bronx, are both outspoken in their approval of the establishment of Suburban Limits in their section, and believe it would be a great help to the undeveloped areas in their Borough.

Alderman Bossè of Brooklyn favors the general scope of the proposition, and believed it would be a particularly good thing in its application to Coney Island.

Charles G. Meyer of the Cord Meyer Co., while believing that the principle would work itself out along economic lines, felt that it might be properly applied save in some of the poorer sections where the development thus far had been largely cheap frame construction, such as Corona, Maspeth, Winfield, Woodside and Linden Hill. In some places, such as Elmhurst and Newtown, and along the Jamaica section, the present property restrictions rendered the proposed legislation unnecessary, he thought, but it certainly could do no harm to include those sections in the limits.

Corona and Maspeth Are Exceptions.

In suggesting the omission of Corona, Maspeth, Woodside, Winfield and Linden Hill, Mr. Meyer called attention to the fact that most of the people living there built as soon as possible after becoming property owners without waiting till they could afford the better class of house, and he did not believe that any obstacle should be put in the way of their owning their own home and thus becoming better citizens.

Hon. William M. Calder expressed himself as heartily approving of the suggestion to establish a zone within the frame house limits where only detached frame dwellings can be constructed, and added that he was confident that it would help materially in the proper building of our city.

William H. Milnor, manager of Wood-Harmon & Co., whose developments expressed the belief that the proposition to establish Suburban Limits was not only a proper and reasonable one, but one that would at once commend itself to every resident of the suburban districts of Brooklyn, as well as to the builders and real estate operators as making for a better city.

Opposed to Rows of Frame Houses.

W. H. Goldey, one of the operators on a large scale in Brooklyn, especially in the Flatbush section, said that he was decidedly opposed to rows of frame houses anywhere in New York City because they ruin values, and he is in accord with the principle involved in this proposition.

William J. Schwarz, builder, of Jamaica and Richmond Hill, in generally approving the principle, said "This might seem like discrimination, but it would be a step in the right direction, and would tend to increase the number of one family detached houses which would make for health and better living conditions."

Mr. John K. Turton, president of the Richmond Hill Realty Co., heartily approves of the suggestion as it would "conserve the character and help maintain present sections of a residential character."

Robert D. Kohn, President of the New York Chapter, American Institute of Architects, wrote that he would gladly co-operate with Mr. Miller in the proposition, and said that the suggestion was a very good one.

The Queens-Court Realty Co., J. Mead Briggs, president, while not definitely committing itself, said: "There are, however, several points in your abstract which we feel would greatly benefit the suburban area in the future construction as affecting the fire limits." As this company deals entirely in detached frame residence developments it is quite evident that it approves the principle of the restriction proposed.

Tank Hoisting.

A three-horsepower electric winch, a few hundred feet of rope, a tripod and Edison Service is all that was required to lift a nine and one-half ton pressure tank to the top of a twelve-story building. That feat was accomplished when two such tanks were hoisted to the roof of the building located at 38 to 44 West 21st street, while a crowd of interested men looked on. These two huge tanks are to be used as reservoirs for an automatic sprinkling system soon to be installed in the Twenty-first street structure. The tanks are twenty-six feet long and seven feet in diameter, with a capacity of 7,500 gallons.

Subway Bids Opened.

Bids for the construction of the William street section of the new subway, opened in the office of the Public Service Commission on Tuesday, showed the lowest to be that of the Rapid Transit Construction Company, at $2,268,000. Advertising for bids on the second section of the same work, under the Post-office Building, was authorized. As in the first instance, this contract must be completed within twenty-eight months from the date of its award. Bids will be opened on October 9 at 12:15 o'clock.

Speaking of "Silver Linings"

For the American Building Man the vista is more than encouraging, it is teeming with business possibilities. Cost cutting will still be the big factor for greater progress in building management. Today your building's light and power possibilities have narrowed to one question: "Are you using Central Station Service?"

If you are still continuing to operate that private plant, you are not getting full value for every dollar expended for light and power. Throughout the entire building world, Edison Service stands unchallenged for dependability and economy.

Why not confer with an Edison engineer today? His statements will be of great interest to you."

LOOK into IT!

More Light
Fewer Fixtures
Less Wiring

With or Without Chain

Here is a patented fixture in which the "Initial Cost" as well as the "Ultimate Cost" is lowest. Architects, Builders and Owners are no longer content with exorbitant prices for "Low Maintenance." Both "costs" must be right.

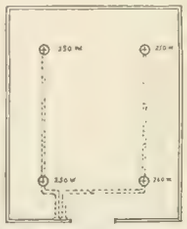
TRADE MARK
BRASCOLITE
DIFFUSION PLUS REFLECTION

COSTS LESS IN THE BEGINNING AND IN THE END

Brascolite reduces the number of fixtures per room 75% and the amount of wiring 50% on an average. Pretty big reduction, but capable of substantiation. So much for "Initial Cost."



As compared with indirect lighting systems, tests prove Brascolite 50% more efficient. The particular installation covered by the diagrams below showed a saving on current of 37%. So much for "Ultimate Cost."

The light is mellow and shadowless. Fixture has its own reflecting surface. No need to calcimine ceiling when replacing other types of fixtures; preserves the harmony of the artistically appointed interior.

The line is on exhibition under illumination at our show rooms.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

MANAGERS ARRANGING FOR RESERVE COAL SUPPLIES—BRICK WEAK ON DEMAND, BUT STEADY AT LOW PRICES—FOREIGN STEEL ORDERS

Some Local Structural Business—Dealers Not Speculating So Far—Hope for Rate Decision

PORTLAND cement and structural steel are the most bouyant factors in the building material market today. So far this month these two commodities have led the others in volume contracted for, according to information given out to the trade this week. Common brick, on the other hand, is slack on demand and on price, although there is not a large quantity of this material in New York and vicinity at present. Lumber is active locally, but hardwood for trim and flooring is said to be in as good demand as last autumn with prices comparable although credits are a little more liberal.

Coal for commercial use has not suffered materially, according to handlers in New York. Shipping demand has fallen off, but this has enabled the distributors here to supply a heavy reserve demand where factories, and some big buildings have been loading up for emergencies at September prices in anticipation of a shortage should the war terminate soon and ships arriving from abroad want heavy supplies to care for the shortage abroad that is expected to develop pending the re-manning of the English and other foreign colleries.

Building construction begins to feel the tightness of the money market, but there is far from being a total cessation of building operations in the metropolitan district. Dealers have only a few weeks to stack with brick and similar commodities before frost begins to compel covering of barges, and they are beginning to feel the market on price and accommodation. Manufacturers are not inclined to encourage long credits just now because their own bank accounts are meagre and the prices at which good brick is being offered is low enough to attract buyers, they think. It has been a long time since good first-hand brick could be bought for $5 to $5.50 a thousand wholesale. This is said to be below cost of manufacture for Hudson common. Raritan brick is holding at $5.25 per thousand.

A comparison of prices for building commodities for September 15 and July, 1896, shows common brick at the identical level, lime twenty-two cents a barrel higher, wire nails out of manufacturer's store $1 a keg less, window glass fifty-nine cents higher, yellow pine $8 higher, eastern spruce random $9 higher and hemlock timber held at an advance of $11 per thousand board feet.

This would seem to indicate that it is cheaper to build fireproof buildings now than it was eighteen years ago, and the fact that Portland cement is on the verge of an upward movement and winter quotations will soon be quoted for brick, emphasizes the present opportunity—when prices are low and contractors, in order to keep their organizations together, are inclined to make the most liberal inducements in the matter of accommodation. The great predominance in building projects is said to be in industrial and commercial expansion, showing that hard-headed business men are preparing for trade expansion which, if it comes, will result in a greater demand for housing, and the investor who is ready for that development will be in a position of reaping his harvest while the other fellow is sowing seed.

COAL.

Analysis of the Situation Shows Independence of Foreign Trade.

ANALYZING the coal situation in view of the shortening of demand through shutting off of foreign orders, the Black Diamond makes the following analysis of interest to the building manager: "The prosperity of the American coal trade does not depend and never has depended upon the sale of any large tonnage in the export market. By far the biggest bulk of American coal exports has gone to Canada and Mexico. We can continue to make sales to Canada and Mexico because those countries are not stagnated by the European situation.

"But even this export trade was but a drop in the bucket compared with the business which we have been doing with United States buyers of steam and domestic coal. There is no reason why the European war should curtail the amount of coal which any American consumer will burn to keep warm this coming winter.

"There is no reason why any factory in America, which does not sell any part of its product in the export markets, should not continue to sell just as much at home as it has sold heretofore. There is, therefore, no reason why it should not continue to burn as much coal as it has done.

"There is no reason why any electric light or gas company, which could not possibly sell any of its product abroad, should not continue to sell as much as it has sold. It should, therefore use as much coal as heretofore.

"In New England there is every reason why the manufacturer of cotton goods should expand rather contract his trade. If his competitor in England is put out of commission by the war, that is no reason why the New England factory should close down. On the contrary, it is a very good reason why the New England factory should increase its production and hence its consumption of coal. There is every reason to expect an expansion of business."

MASONS' SUPPLIES.

Dealers Are Stacking on Non-Speculative Bases.

LEADING mason material dealers asked this week regarding their attitude in the matter of winter stacking gave assurances that as far as was consistent with the conservative business policy they were stacking moderately on cash or short credit bases without view to speculation.

The tendency throughout the district and especially in New Jersey is to carry stocks slightly lower than those of last year rather than lay out money now for stock in the hope of a sharp rise in price. If, however, the Interstate Commerce Commission consents to reopen the railroad rate case they will be inclined to be more liberal in their purchases, if the demands of the road are met. Otherwise the general policy seems to be to stand pat and let the consumer bear the brunt of any advance in the price of material at manufacturing sources.

Some commodities notably Portland cement, represent an exception to this rule. Portland cement has the distinction of being, next to steel, in the most advantageous position with respect to prospective South American trade. Many of the laborers at the cement mills were reservists in foreign armies and labor is scarce. At the same time the manufacturers are not taking on additional hands, while their sales departments are reconnoitering.

PRICE COMPARISONS.

Relation of Standard Commodities Now and 1896.

FURTHER comparisons of prices of standard building materials prevailing in the market to-day compared with those ruling on July 1, 1896, show a decrease in brick, an increase in lime, a drop in nails and increases in glass, yellow pine, spruce and hemlock, as shown by Bradstreet's compilation for the current month: Bradstreet's compilation for the current month which follows:

COMMON BRICK.

Unloading Shows Gains Over Last Week—Jova Agency Moves.

WITH only 2,100,000 common brick left unsold on the wholesale market at the close of the week, which was remarkable, for sales almost doubling the volume of arrivals, and a registered unloading movement more than a million greater than that reported for last week, the brick market closed its week in a contradictory manner. As New York's staple material its barometric significance is that dealers are either beginning to stack, or manufacturers are wearying of shipping brick here to sell below cost of production.

Most of the up-river plant owners have refused to make further shipments at prices running from $5 to $5.50 and under. Such low prices have not prevailed here since May, 1908, when prices dropped as low as $4.50 to $4.75 a thousand wholesale. The general quality of brick up the river this year is said to be better than in years because the yards were not rushed and brick in August and September had good chance to dry without interference from rain. Normally these brick, sold on quality alone, would warrant higher prices than those prevailing now, and, anticipating a heavier demand at home and possibly in foreign fields later on, the manufacturers may decide to cover the barges now, hold them for a rise, if necessary, until just before close of navigation, and then put them in the reserve list on this market. Brick men look for a tight cement market if Portland manufacturers succeed in opening a South American field, said one interest this week, and in that event the demand for brick here will improve.

Announcement is made that the Jova Brick Works have reopened offices in the old brick market and are located at 628 West 52d street. They were formerly at 103 Park avenue.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, Sept. 17, in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson Rivers unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

STEEL AND IRON.

Contracts During the Current Month Steady But Moderate.

INTEREST centers in the building material market on the movement of iron and steel. Early in September it was anticipated that the tonnage for this month would be below that of last month. It is still too early to make prediction, but there is a steady volume of business coming out, calling for structural steel. Pig iron sales, however, are moderate in quantity, indicating that steel makers are not buying in anticipation of exceptionally heavy orders to come in the next few months. Pipe works are running about half time and competition is extremely keen.

The fact that ferro manganese is in better supply and easier in tone should remove some of the doubt among contractors as to whether contracts placed now for steel would result in positive deliveries. Assurances from the steel companies show that this commodity is being arranged for in quantity and it is probable that the steamer Crofton Hall for Chili and Peru and the steamer Bantu for Uruguay and Argentina sailing this week with a miscellaneous cargo of steel, totaling 18,600 tons, and two steamers to follow them closely will bring back South American ferro manganese for the relief of a possible stringency that might arise from hostilities abroad. The fact that the British navy is keeping open the lanes of commerce is keeping the steel market free and rices steady.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 26, 1914

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR REAL ESTATE MEN

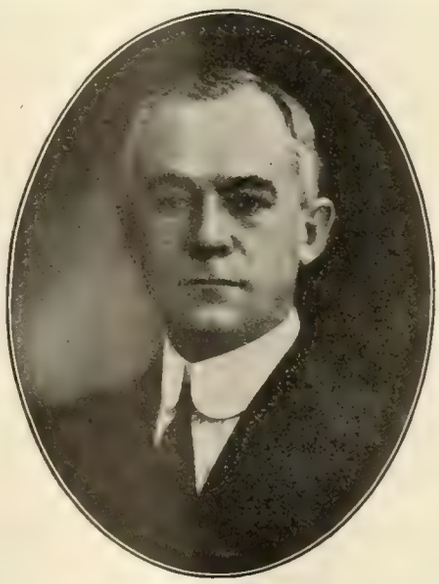
What Should Be Done About the City's Fiscal Condition—How Can Municipal Extravagance Be Stopped—The Unification of City Departments

A STRONG and urgent appeal for co-operation among all the taxpayers' associations during the coming year has been made to each association by the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, which has been formed for the purpose of bringing about harmonious action on the part of the various real estate organizations of Greater New York for the protection of real estate interests.

The council will act as an advisory body and constitute a medium through which property owners' associations can speak as a cohesive and co-ordinate unit. By thus federating the various associations, a consolidation of real estate interests will be consummated which will undoubtedly be for the best interests of every property owner.



It is not purposed in any way to supersede any of the present real estate associations, but on the contrary to strengthen them in their respective fields and to look to them to do the work and accomplish the ends desired. However, when it is found that the interests of property owners are not being carefully conserved, the council will act in their behalf in every such instance.

The Campaign for Unification.

At the October meeting of the council, the unification of the various city departments and the State Department of Labor as proposed by the State Factory Investigating Commission with reference to the inspection of buildings in New York City will be considered. The tentative plan of the State Factory Investigation Commission is the first concrete suggestion to be presented in the nature of a solution of the inspection problem. As to whether it is advisable to unite the various departments now having jurisdiction over structural changes in buildings into one central department, or into several borough departments, has not been as yet determined by the council.

It is understood that all the Borough Presidents favor the latter plan, especially since the central building department under the Charter of 1898 with a directing board of three members appointed by the Mayor with local officers in the borough proved to be unsuccessful. On the other hand, the Real Estate Board, the pioneer real estate organization, in endeavoring to ameliorate the condition of the property owners in regard to oppressive regulations, and which is represented upon the council by its President, L. M. D. McGuire, has appointed a committee to confer with the members of the State Factory Investigating Commission upon the feasibility of one central department.

The various phases of this question must be considered, as well as to what departments should be included in the central building department. In this respect the advice of the members of the Advisory Staff of Experts will be of invaluable assistance. This Staff of Experts consists of Messrs. Louis Harowitz, Otto M. Eidlitz, Henry W. Hodge, Amos L. Schaeffer, John P. Leo, Julius Francke, James A. Henderson and Peter J. McKeon, and to these gentlemen will be referred for consideration the various plans that may arise.

HON. CYRUS C. MILLER.

Stopping Municipal Extravagance.

A plan for eliminating unnecessary and extravagant expense items from the proposed city budget is being carefully worked out by a sub-committee of the council. The preparation of a city budget is very technical, so that the problem of eliminating unnecessary expenses is not one easy of solution. The expenditure of public moneys can be easily criticised in vague and glittering generalities, but sane and sound suggestions for the economical conduct of the city and state governments must be grounded in fact. There is no doubt that the city and State administrations would welcome constructive criticisms and probably would exclude items, where the omission would not entail sacrifice of departmental efficiency. However, the council purposes to examine the city budget as closely as possible although progress in cutting expenses may be made but slowly, but with the certainty that definite results will ultimately be accomplished by painstaking comprehensive examination of the budgets as they are announced.

City's Fiscal Policy.

The final question for the consideration of the council will be the fiscal polity of the city, as to under what conditions it would be advisable for the city to issue corporate stock in the form of fifty-year bonds and under what conditions it would be advisable for the city to issue short term bonds. This is a question of vital importance at the present moment, since it was a salient feature in the recent loan of one hundred million dollars to the city by a local banking syndicate. The fiscal policy of paying city debts as they fall due insisted upon by the banking syndicate as a condition precedent to making the loan is doubtless a good business proposition and based upon good fiscal reasoning, but on the other hand the weight of taxation necessary to meet our obligations as they fall due will press heavily upon real estate taxpayers. Consequently the council believes that since real estate must pay the largest share of this tax levy, such a fiscal policy for New York City should receive thorough study, particularly when the present tax levy is very burdensome.

The Bonded Debt.

The duration of improvements oftentimes makes it possible to extend the bond issue to pay for the improvements over a number of years, but this policy in itself has made the bonded debt of the city rise by leaps and bonds. Under these circumstances, a definite fiscal policy must be carefully worked out on the part of the real estate associations and when finally decided upon as just to the property owner and for the best interests of the city, then the approximately one hundred taxpayers' associations will be requested to endorse the policy and stand as a unit in its defense.

At the October meeting of the Advisory Council, certain phases of the Inheritance Tax Law, and the Secured Debt Law will be examined, inasmuch as it is understood that a plan for their repeal is being initiated and the Council is much interested in the proper conservation of personal property. Also, at this meeting a feasible policy for developing our harbor and terminal facilities, with an examination of the merits of the free port, will be studied; also, the proposed distribution of local assessments for benefit, the constitutional convention, and certain phases of the Workmen's Compensation Law, which are now burdensome to real estate, and in many respects are so vague as to require specific amendments to be made at the next Legislature. Certain provisions of the new war tax bill affecting financial institutions and real estate will also be thoroughly examined. From time to time, announcements will be made of the reports made by the various sub-committees of the council, which it is believed may be of interest and of value to the property owner.

Efficiency Recognized.

During the short existence of the council, its work has received favorable recognition as well as that of the associations which it represents, by the appointment of members of the council to the various city and state commissions having to do with real estate, such as the Committee on Taxation and Committee on City Planning as well as the State Factory Investigating Commission. By being thus placed directly in touch with administrative work, a just recognition has been made of the effective work done in behalf of the individual real estate owners by the council and the original constituent organizations of the council, the Real Estate Board, the Allied Real Estate Interests and the United Real Estate Owners' Associations.

TREND SHOWN BY SUBWAY TICKET SALES

Increase of Nearly 13,000,000 During Last Fiscal Year of Interborough Company—Shifting of Population Indicated by Accompanying Table

EVIDENCE of the new importance of Atlantic avenue as one of the busiest thoroughfares and terminals in Brooklyn may be obtained from the report of the Public Service Commission, completed last week, which gives the statistics of passenger traffic as indicated by the number of tickets sold at each station of the subway for the year ending June 30, 1914. Tickets totaling 22,557,773 were sold at this point, an increase of 1,295,633, as compared to the same period for 1913. Grand Central Station was second, with 19,551,405, an increase of 2,612,167. Brooklyn Bridge was third, with 17,657,248, which indicates a decrease of 431,701, Fulton street is fourth with 16,381,746, an increase of 481,880; Fourteenth street is fifth, with 14,217,527, an increase of 130,839; Times square is sixth, with 13,664,628, an increase of 453,671; 23d street is seventh, with 10,471,387, a decrease of 36,922.

The total number of tickets sold were 340,413,103, an increase over the corresponding period of last year of 12,941,593, the daily average being 1,001,215, as compared to 963,152 for 1913, 891,099 for 1912 and 813,837 for 1911. All the stations in the Bronx north of 149th street show advances indicative of the large recent increases in population of that section of the city. Simpson street leads with an increase of 784,219, with 174th street second, showing an increase of 561,528. On the West Side recent large additions to the apartment house colony are also proved by a greater number of ticket sales. Every station north of 145th street, except 238th street, shows substantial increases. 181st street, which is being heralded as the most important business thoroughfare north of 125th street, shows an increase of 385,352, while 125th street, curiously enough shows a decline of 105,622. Canal street assumes a new importance in an examination of its statistics, which show at that point an increase of 1,408,232. Worth street, the next station south, in contrast, had 78,908 less ticket sales than in 1913. Among other stations showing a decrease are 137th street of the Broadway branch, with 1,318; 135th street of the Lenox avenue branch, 8,457; Mott avenue, 41,645; 72d street, 19,984; 66th street, 25,369, and Nevins street, Brooklyn, 129,745.

That there have been shifts of population from one section of the city to another is indicated by this report, which also shows that those sections apparently have been favored which lie along the lines with transit improvement. Just what districts have contributed to an increase of nearly 13,000,000 tickets sold along the Interborough route cannot, of course, be learned from the report. When the new roads, now in course of construction, are completed there will undoubtedly be further shifts of population.

In anticipation of the early operation of these additional transit lines, building operations have proceeded with marked activity in the affected areas, and these new residential properties, on account of their easy accessibility to the business centers of the city will probably encounter little difficulty in attracting tenants.

An examination of the statistics in this report proves, as have similar compilations in the past, that the growth of the outlying sections of the city has been coincident with the establishment of adequate transit facilities.

A SUCCESSFUL TYPE OF APARTMENT HOUSE

It Has Kitchenettes, As Well As a Central Dining-Hall— Built-in Furniture and Hotel Conveniences at Moderate Rates

By LEWIS L. YOUNG.

A UNIQUE type of improvement that would evidently be a paying proposition in the real estate field is a building designed to provide accommodations somewhat similar to those of an apartment hotel for the price of good board. A house of this kind recently erected in Brooklyn contains two and three-room apartments which rent for the price of a furnished room and a central dining-room where meals may be obtained at table-board rates. The improvement was made for the purpose of obtaining a satisfactory return on the investment and to fill the needs of individual homes for people unable to rent or care for large apartments. Each apartment consists of a living-room and one or two bedrooms, besides a bath, kitchenette and hall. The suites are rented unfurnished and without service. The plan allows occupants to live as in a housekeeping apartment or apartment hotel, as choice dictates. Breakfast may be prepared in the kitchenettes and the care of the rooms attended to by the tenants themselves; or, meals can be taken in the central dining-room and, by engaging a cleaner, housework dispensed with. Hall attendant service is provided, a maid being stationed in the entrance hall to admit and announce callers, answer the telephone and care for parcels called for and delivered in tenants' absence.

The central dining-room is sufficiently large to accommodate all the tenants of the building besides a number of transients. It is provided with small tables, and has a capacity for seating a hundred guests. Intended for the convenience of people who have little time and inclination for preparing dinners themselves, the apartments are rented only to applicants who agree to patronize the dining-room—at least, to the extent of regularly taking dinner there. While many of the occupants prefer to avail themselves of the privilege of light housekeeping and prepare breakfast in the apartments, some of the tenants also take breakfast and luncheon in the dining-room.

The central dining-room and reception-room are the only parts of the building for which the owner has had to provide furnishings. With the exception of the hall attendant and resident janitor, no servants are employed by the owner, the dining-room help being engaged by the caterer.

Built in a conveniently located neighborhood, where sites occupied by antiquated and unprofitable frame dwellings may be had comparatively cheap, and, with its interior arranged with ingenious compactness, the improvement has demonstrated the possibility of providing the conveniences of modern apartment hotel accommodations, minus their luxurious appointments, within the means of the average boarder. The living-rooms of the apartments are the size of a square room, and the bedrooms are equal to a hallroom in a private house. The kitchenettes and bathrooms each occupy hardly more space than that required for a spacious clothes closet.

Small Suites.

The two-room apartments are compacted into an area of approximately 16 by 28 feet, and the three-room suites into 16 by 36 feet. Each apartment having an open fireplace in which coal or wood may be burned; the heating system can be started later and discontinued earlier in the season and a saving in the cost of maintenance effected. The little heat needed during part of the spring and fall in a building where the occupants are away from home much of the day can be obtained from the open fire, the tenants furnishing the fuel themselves.

The improvement was made by one of the largest realty operators in Brooklyn and was designed by an architect who has planned some successful small apartments for the neighborhood of Columbia University, New York. The building, a four-story and basement structure, occupies a plot about 50 by 137 feet, and contains thirty-six apartments. Occupying approximately half the entrance floor are the central dining-room, a small reception room and toilets, the remainder of the floor being occupied by six apartments.

There are ten apartments on each of the three upper floors, reachd by two stairways leading from the entrance hall. On each of the landings of both stairways are five entrances to as many apartments. In the basement are a large modern kitchen and janitor's apartment, besides washtubs and individual storerooms for the use of tenants. Two dumbwaiters serve the entire building opening, like the entrances to the apartments, on the landings of the stairways.

The convenient arrangement of the rooms, useful features and tasteful decorations make these apartments unusually homelike, attractive and complete. There are all outside rooms, including the bathrooms and kitchenettes. From every apartment is a view of the street, a feature made possible by the plot, a corner one, adjoining the spacious grounds of a church occupying the adjacent corner. Communicating with the living-room of each apartment, and arranged somewhat like a kitchen cabinet, the kitchenettes have a built-in cupboard, pan-closets, drawers, and drainboards, besides refrigerator, hot and cold running water and connection for a small gas stove, all of which are within arm's reach.

Compact Conveniences.

Built in the recessed space between clothes closets are bookshelves sufficiently deep to be used as a china closet, if the occupant has a bookcase among his furnishings, or as a clothes chest if it is desired to use the room for sleeping. Ample closet space is provided. Trunk size closets, and wardrobes with overhead storage closets, are built along the connecting passage between rooms. In the tiled and modern equipped bathroom is an unusually convenient built-in cabinet having a mirror door. Hardwood floors in all the rooms and transoms over bedroom doors are provided. The owner installed nickel towel racks, soap and paper holders, put up poles for window and door hangings and furnished shades, screens and awnings.

The showy elegance and cheap finish that characterize some modern building operations are conspicuously absent. The fireplaces, finished with Tapestry brick and having a shelf of simple design, the broad twin windows, the built-in bookcases and living-room doors with small panes of glass, the rough-finished walls tinted with a greenish-gray that tends to lessen the sense of the bounds of the rooms, the plain trim stained with a composition of brown, gray and green, the simple lighting fixtures, glass doorknobs, and other hardware in keeping with the finishings—all combine to give these apartments a quaint and unique finish.

Placed in the entrance hall is a specially constructed hall seat having capacious chests in which tenants may put parcels to be called for and find those delivered in their absence. Here are also the customary individual letter boxes, public telephone and private system communicating with apartments. The hall attendant service is an indispensable convenience, as most of the occupants are seldom at home when department store, laundry and other tradesmen call.

The simple and tasteful treatment of the entrance is typical of the finish of the interior of the building.

Finished and conducted in a manner calculated to appeal to people whose education and tastes unite to make refined surroundings essential, a class of tenants has been obtained that gives the house a high character. The tenants are largely public school teachers and instructors in other educational institutions, and library and office assistants.

Notwithstanding the small size, occupants find these cozy and compact apartments far more suitable than keeping house in rooms of unremodelled dwellings having no facilities for light housekeeping. Designed for people requiring separate sleeping-rooms in addition to a sitting or living-room in which breakfast may be served and visitors received, the two-room suites meet the need of individuals living alone, and the three-room apartments that of couples or companions residing together. Bachelor women living alone, childless couples and single men desiring bachelor quarters find the arrangements admirably suited to their requirements. The small apartment opening only on one side of the building being abnormally warm in the summer, small individual balconies, shaded by a broad awning and communicating with one of the rooms of each apartment—a feature of the newer apartment houses in Washington, D. C.—would contribute to the comfort of the occupants.

Superior to a Rooming House.

The accommodations this unique improvement affords are far superior to those of a rooming house. Few of the private dwellings converted into a boarding or rooming house have running water in the rooms, adequate heat and hot water supply or more than one bathroom, which must be shared sometimes with a dozen or more occupants. While the roomer pays for a comfortably furnished square room in a good neighborhood the amount asked for a minimum-priced modern apartment of four or five rooms in the newer or poorer sections, an unfurnished small suite of two or three rooms cannot be obtained for the rental of the larger lower-priced apartments unless it be a suite having dark, viewless and unattractively finished rooms in a building without a central dining-room and hall attendant service.

The Need for Such Houses.

That the rentals asked for suitable small apartments are prohibitive, and that the moderate-priced suites are objectionable as to features largely accounts for the many vacancies of small apartments and the big boarding and rooming house business. The average salary of teachers and office workers is such that more than one-quarter of their small incomes would be required to pay the rent of a suitable small partment—a proportion that cannot be afforded, because of other necessary expenses. A companion with whom one can share the expense of an apartment beyond one's means is not readily found.

There is no alternative but to rent two or three unfurnished rooms in private dwellings where light housekeeping is allowed. Advertisements appear every day in the papers for accommodations of this sort. The boarding and rooming house business in cities where teachers, office workers and other salaried individuals constitute a large portion of the population is an amazingly large one, advertisements of rooms and board filling anywhere from a half to two full pages of some papers daily.

The room, having tinted walls, do not make as good pictures as rooms having figured paper walls, and for that reason look somewhat bare in the photograph.

The experiment made by the Brooklyn building company of providing kitchenette apartments at rentals equivalent to those paid for a furnished room is apparently fulfilling the expectations of its promoters. Without the aid of renting signboard or other advertising, all the apartments were leased before the building was finished. There have been no vacancies during the three years since its completion and two other apartment houses have since been provided to meet the demand for accommodations of this kind.

WATER-TANK REGULATIONS MODIFIED

Fireproof Buildings No Longer Required to Have Separate Tanks for Sprinkler Systems—An Entente Cordiale Strengthened

OWNERS of apartment houses and buildings equipped with sprinklers will be interested to learn of an important ruling just made by the Board of Standards of the Fire Department modifying the requirements for water tanks.

The present regulation requires that not less than 3,500 gallons be always on the fire lines. When the existing tank has a maximum capacity of 3,500 gallons a new or additional tank has to be supplied, and new pipe connections.

Some time ago the Real Estate Board took up with the Fire Department this question of requirements for water tanks. A communication was forwarded to the department of which the following is part:

"1. With respect to sprinklered buildings, the Fire Department makes the further requirement of separate tank supply of 3,500 gallons capacity for standpipes.

"Where sprinklers have been installed to the satisfaction of the Fire Department and conditions in other respects warrant what is here suggested, could not the requirement for a separate tank supply be waived and connection with the house supply be accepted as sufficient?

"2. In many instances the rigid requirement for a 3,500-gallon tank supply in modern fireproof apartment houses places an unnecessary burden of expense upon owners. Many of these houses now have tanks with a capacity not exceeding 3,500 gallons. The requirement referred to means an additional tank and new connections.

"Might not the department waive this requirement in fireproof houses not exceeding 150 feet in height, accepting as sufficient a reservation for stand-pipe supply of the existing house supply, unless such reservation be obviously inadequate?"

The Real Estate Board has since been informed, through Assistant Corporation Counsel Albert de Roode of the Legal Division of the Fire Department, that at a meeting of the Board of Standards held on September 18, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That in all buildings equipped with an approved automatic sprinkler system, stand-pipes need not be connected to a separate tank, but may be connected to the house supply tank without any separate reservation for the stand-pipe supply; and further,

Resolved, That in fireproof apartment houses, not exceeding 150 feet in height the stand-pipes may be connected to the house supply tank, provided a separate reservation of two-thirds of such supply (not less than 1,800 gallons, however) be made for the standpipe in such a manner as shall be approved by the Fire Department, the house connection being made on the outside of the tank. Where the house supply in such apartment houses is furnished by a satisfactory pump equipment, capable of delivering 350 gallons per minute at a pressure of 50 pounds at the top-most outlet, the connection of a standpipe to the pump supply, provided there is no house supply tank with which the standpipe may be connected, shall be sufficient.

Mr. de Roode adds:

"I hope that this action of the Fire Department may serve to strengthen still further the entente cordiale now existing between the Fire Department and the real estate owners, as so happily represented by your organization."

As a result of this resolution the Real Estate Board is asking its members to send to it, to be forwarded to the Fire Department, lists of such fireproof apartment houses in their charge or owned by them with such necessary information as the capacity of the present tank, the number of fire lines, and the size of the fire lines.

The tank question has always been a bone of contention between owners of apartment houses and sprinklered buildings and the Fire Department, and the conclusion to be drawn from the adoption of this resolution by the Board of Standards is that the Department has concluded that the regulation now superseded was more severe than was necessary and could be modified in buildings of approved type or equipment.

Reduction of Rentals.

Tenants occupying the two hundred and seventy apartments controlled under the ownership of the United Assets Corporation will receive a reduction in rentals amounting to about $3,000 this year, according to notices sent out this week by the company under the direction of William D. Bloodgood, president. In the notice the company sets forth that in consideration of hard times, owing to the war in Europe, a reduction of $1 a month will be made in the rentals. This is not to be considered as a permanent reduction, but will take place Oct. 1 and will remain in force until times are better. The apartments affected are located in the industrial section of Long Island City, and while the reduction of $1 a month appears small, it will, nevertheless, prove of great benefit to those occupying these apartments. In an interview Mr. Bloodgood said that his company believes it good policy to try and help their tenants during hard times.

207th STREET, HUB OF DYCKMAN SECTION

Thoroughfare Has Distinction of Being Most Important East and West Artery in District—Building Activity Continues Unabated

"IN five years, possibly three years, there will not be a vacant lot in the Dyckman section," said John N. Golding this week, and from present indications and the building growth of the district in the last three years his prediction seems to be well on the road to fulfillment. In West 207th street particularly, and also on the intersecting thoroughfares and along the streets within a radius of half a dozen blocks, extensive building operations are under way and the quiet residential blocks resound with the hammering of the carpenters and the lifting of the material hoists. Those buildings in course of construction are in the main apartment houses, without stores, containing suites of four, five and six rooms, as compared to the three, four and five-room apartments typical of the older buildings. In West 207th street the business importance of the thoroughfare demands structures with stores on the ground floor.

The southwest corner of Post avenue and 207th street is being improved by E. A. Cruikshank with two-story buildings with three stores, all of which have been rented from the plans. The Corn Exchange Bank will establish a branch on the corner, a circumstance which in itself indicates the new status of the street. The other stores will be occupied by cigar and stationery concerns. The northeast corner of Sherman avenue and 207th street, a plot 100x100, is being improved by Paul Halpin with a five-story apartment house, with stores. The rest of the block, with 200 feet in 207th street and a depth of 100 feet, is owned by Gustavus L. Lawrence, who acquired 100 feet last November, and the balance, which includes the southeast corner of 207th street and Vermilyea avenue, from the Alliance Realty Company in December. He is said to be preparing plans for its improvement.

The entire block on the opposite side of the street was improved last year by Mr. Lawrence with one-story taxpayers which have been filled with high class establishments, including among others a department store and a general market. There is only one vacancy in this group of twelve stores. In the rear of this block, on a plot 150x150 on the west side of Sherman avenue 100 feet south of 207th street, the same owner has built the Dyckman Theatre, which also has an entrance in the south side of 207th street 125 feet west of Sherman avenue. The combined improvement covers twenty-one city lots.

Foreshadowing another addition to the rapidly growing colony is the sale this week by the Sterling Realty Company to William H. Laird of the vacant plot 39.6x100 in the south side of 207th street, 100 feet east of the southeast corner of Broadway.

Farther north, at the northwest corner of Broadway and 207th street, a large force of laborers are blasting the rock and clearing the plot, 125x105, belonging to J. Allen Townsend. It is evidently the forerunner of another building operation. At the northwest corner of Seaman avenue and 207th street T. G. Galardi & Company and Max Just are building a 50-foot apartment house and two 55-foot buildings which are to be ready for occupancy about March 1, 1915. Although at this time only the third tier of beams has been laid, there have been applications for apartments, indicative of the unusual demand for homes in that locality, which is greatly in excess of the supply. According to Mr. Just, who has charge of many apartments in the neighborhood, he has but one vacancy. In one house which contains eighty-four families only six changes will be made by October 1, in a multi-family structure where rents range as high as $12 a room. "It is not rare," said Mr. Just, "for people to pay in this section as high as $8 a room in walk-up apartment houses."

In the other streets apartment houses are going up rapidly to meet this general demand. The southeast corner of Academy street and Sherman avenue, which the Bendheim Construction Company bought in August, 1912, from Henry Corn, is being improved with two five-story apartment houses. In that deal the Benheim Construction Company gave in exchange the two five-story houses each on plot 50x150 on the west side of Vermilyea avenue, 150 feet south of Academy street, which are fully rented. At the northeast corner of Sherman avenue and Academy street, Jacob Ruppert is expected to begin the improvement shortly along the same lines of the four lots which he bought in January from Max Marx. The plot, 50x150, on the north side of Sherman avenue, 250 feet west of 207th street, was sold in July by Walter S. Logan, Washington, D. C., to a builder who also is said to be contemplating immediate improvement. In Academy street between Broadway and Cooper street, French & Knapp have completed the roofs of the two five-story apartment houses which they are building on the plot 100x137.

"About two years ago this whole section was vacant," said John N. Golding, "today there are only a few unimproved corners in 207th street; the rest have already been built upon or improvements contemplated. The structure at the corner of 206th street and Tenth avenue is not yet finished, yet out of twenty apartments, twelve are already rented and probably in the next ten days the building will be filed. As fast as houses are completed they are immediately rented. The rents range from $6 to $15 a room. This whole section is worthy of the attention of all builders."

Interest in 207th street apparently began early in 1911, when the Charles Hensle Construction Company improved the block front in the west side, between Sherman and Vermilyea avenue, with high class six-story apartment houses, with stores. There has not been a store vacancy in that block since the buildings were completed. The rentals, according to local agents, in store properties, average about $5 a front foot. In nearly every instance leases contain clauses which increase the rent ten per cent. each year where the terms are of five years' duration.

The fact that apartment houses in the immediate neighborhood are not supplied with stores has resulted in the almost exclusive patronage of the various business in 207th street. Practically every kind of household commodity can be obtained in the high class establishments which are located along the thoroughfare. It is not unusual to see lines of automobiles carrying Bronx residents over the University Bridge which connects Fordham road in the Bronx with the Dyckman section of Manhattan at this point. The 207th street crosstown line runs from Broadway in Manhattan south into the Bronx and a liberal transfer system puts the residents of the Dyckman section in touch with all sections of the other borough for a single fare. Local opinion predicts a great future for the rapidly-growing section.

The public will gladly pay a premium for the new city notes. There is some satisfaction, when a city must borrow heavily, that there are plenty willing to buy the securities. Aqueducts and subways come high.

It is the wiser plan to follow the President's advice and be neutral in speech and behavior during the wars, rather than wound a friend, or kill off a customer, by an unnecessary expression of opinion of no value.

Trees ought to be planted in the residential streets where by any possibility they will flourish. The Park Department will plant a tree in Brooklyn for any citizen who wants one or more and will pay the actual cost of the work.

The Advisory Council has started upon a line of activities of high importance to everybody who has a share in the city. The policy of harmonious and concurrent effort with public officials sincerely endeavoring to play fair is certain to turn out well.

Millions of dollars' worth of city property is lying unused while the authorities are borrowing capital at high rates. Is it possible that none of the land should be disposed of in order to raise funds to meet interest charges and lessen the taxpayers' load?

The Deeper Waterways Association wants the main channel of the Hudson River cleared of shoals, notably the one in Haverstraw Bay, which blocks the way for large sea-going craft that otherwise could sail up as far as Hudson. At Newburgh, Poughkeepsie and Hudson there were notable public demonstrations this week in favor of river improvements, which in all fairness should be made by the national government, seeing that it assumes control over navigable waters.

The O'Neil-Adams Liquidation.

A recent piece of news, which may have an important influence on the distribution of the retail trade and the course of real estate values in certain parts of the city, is the announcement of the proposed liquidation of the O'Neil-Adams stores. It must be remembered that the decision to close these stores follows by only a few months the failure of the stores operated by the Siegel company in the same neighborhood, and that after the liquidation is complete there will remain out of the seven large retail businesses, each of them occupying almost a whole block front, only the stores operated by the Greenhut company. There can be no doubt about the effect of this announcement. Unless further developments of a contrary nature take place, it means that lower Sixth avenue will cease to be an important center of the retail trade. Like lower Broadway, it will have to yield to some other and better situated streets or avenues farther north. It does not necessarily follow that the department stores which still carry on business in the neighborhood may not be able to survive and do a profitable trade. Wanamaker's has continued to do an apparently profitable business on lower Broadway. A neighborhood such as that of lower Broadway or Sixth avenue will frequently support one department store, even though it cannot support several. It does mean, however, that the streets on Sixth avenue south of 23d street which formerly accommodated a large proportion of the large-scale retail trade of the city will become comparatively unimportant as locations for this class of business.

It has been evident, of course, for some time that Sixth avenue and Broadway south of 23d street were suffering from the competition of more favorably situated neighborhoods. The first break came thirteen years ago when R. H. Macy & Co. moved up to Greeley Square. B. Altman & Co. soon followed this example, and after that the stream of removals gradually gathered in volume. It looked for a while as if the cheaper stores on Sixth avenue would not have to follow the example of the more expensive shops on 23d street and Broadway. If the subway system, which is now under construction, had been actually in operation, it is probable that lower Sixth avenue might have held its retail business. But transit conditions were working against this particular locality. While Sixth avenue did not suffer as did 23d street and Broadway from the encroachments of the wholesale trade, it did suffer from comparative inaccessibility. It was selected in the beginning by the owners of department stores, because at that time the Sixth avenue elevated road was relatively a popular travel route. It brought the department stores into close connection with the thrifty population on the growing West Side, and when the Subway superseded the elevated roads as the great avenue of transit, lower Sixth avenue naturally suffered. The business of the city was still continuing to push farther north. Sixth avenue was a narrow street which was made unattractive and noisy by the elevated structures, and it needed exceptionally favorable transit conditions in order to hold its own, rather than the exceptionally unfavorable conditions which have actually come to pass. The favorable conditions were not provided and it is no wonder that business has been leaving it.

There remains to be considered the interesting question of the probable future locations of the cheaper grade of dry goods and department stores. At present the large-scale retail trade of Manhattan is less concentrated in location than it used to be. A number of important stores are situated on Greeley Square, in 34th street and in the nearby parts of Fifth avenue. Others occupy sites on 42d and 59th streets and on upper Fifth avenue. Real estate in this whole neighborhood is held at very high prices, and the business of a large store situated thereabouts is charged with an enormous rent. In the interest of cheaper retail prices it is essential that a certain part of the department store business should be relieved of such heavy overhead charges. Perhaps part of it will be distributed among the larger stores, now doing business in the Bronx and Brooklyn, but as soon as the new subway system gets into operation any movement of that nature will certainly be checked. The effect of the new subways will assuredly be to distribute population but to concentrate business. It will be so much cheaper and more convenient for the residents of the other boroughs to make their purchases in Manhattan that a much larger proportion of the total retail business of the city will be transacted in the central borough. The number of department stores, particularly of the cheaper grade, should consequently increase and their probable future location is a matter of great interest to property owners. Broadway and Fifth avenue are too high in price. Sixth avenue is disqualified by the elevated structure, Fourth avenue has already been pre-empted by the wholesale trade; and the same is true of Madison avenue south of 34th street. Property on Madison avenue north of 34th street is strongly held for other purposes. Its owners may eventually yield to what looks like an inevitable encroachment of business, but only after a prolonged resistance. There remains Seventh and Lexington avenues and of the two Seventh avenue seems to have the better chance. It will enjoy the advantages of greater width, of much better means of communication and a more central location. When the recovery begins in New York real estate the neighborhood of Seventh avenue will be one of the first to be benefited.

An Unsuspected Cause.

American financiers now realize that business in this country has been suffering from a cause hitherto unsuspected, a cause which had its origin in Europe and not in America. It is plain enough now that moneyed interests abroad had foreknowledge of the war in which the powers are now engaged. During the long period when the oracles of politics and finance in this country were blaming one thing after another for the money stringency, European money centers were quietly liquidating securities and draining gold from manufacturing and commerce, while their governments were borrowing vast sums to equip their armies for the coming struggle. Long before the Balkan war this was going on. Every morning American financiers took their cue for the day's transactions from London and Paris, and as money became dearer and securities cheaper they poured out execrations without suspecting the real source of the trouble.

The story is related that the Kaiser, near the close of the year 1912, called the governor of the Imperial Bank of Germany before him and asked if the bank was prepared for the strain of a war. On being answered in the negative, he is reported to have replied, "When I ask that question again I want a different answer." When the royal house of Austria-Hungary sent its ultimatum to Servia the Imperial Bank of Germany had husbanded $336,000,000 in gold, the Bank of Austria-Hungary $254,000,000, the State Bank of Russia $819,000,000 and the Bank of France $792,000,000. During the first half of this year the United States was called upon to contribute no less than $84,000,000 to these hoardings. The American market was indifferent up to the very eve of the war, but the inevitability of the conflict was well understood abroad, at least since the Morocco affair, in 1911, when France recalled her German loans.

Legitimate business the world over was under the same spell. Things had come to the breaking point when the war was declared. This country, for one, was depending solely upon its agricultural interests for support. If the harvests of 1913 and 1914 had not produced bumper crops, the American people would have been in distressed circumstances. Investors, having long ago taken advantage of the bargain prices for securities, had nothing more to invest.

They could not sell what they had of one thing in order to buy something else without making a sacrifice which they did not feel called upon to make. Speculative business affairs were actually deadlocked. Everybody was waiting for values to come back, and there was nothing but bumper crops in sight to start them on the way back until this war broke out. Something of the sort was inevitable. Whatever the consequences may be for Europe, it means, for one thing, exceptionally good prices to our farming classes for their crops, and prosperity to the majority of American citizens for some time to come. With wheat bringing $1.12@$1.15 a bushel at Minneapolis, corn 76 cents and oats 48 cents a bushel at Chicago, and with every prospect of their going higher, the farmers and all depending on them will have plenty to do with this fall and winter. With this foundation to build upon, Manufacturing and Commerce can look for greatly improved times, and Real Estate will come in for its share in due time.

Rising prices not only for food stuffs but also for steel and other commodities will soon be releasing speculative investments in corporation securities, and once this train of speculation is resumed a marked improvement will be observed in real estate departments. The ills now being borne are the consequence of what preceded the war rather than what has followed since its outbreak. The vacancies in high-class apartment houses of Manhattan, the over-supply of office buildings, the dullness of the sales market, are all conditions which were existing when the war came. The cessation of construction in central sections gives empty offices, lofts and apartments a better chance to be filled. In anticipation of the operation of the new subways now under construction there is marked activity already in Brooklyn and Queens.

"Uncollected Taxes."

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

You published in the Record and Guide of September 19 some resolutions of the Real Estate Board in which appeared the following statements:

"The fact that on July 1, 1914, there were uncollected taxes amounting to $154,000,000, besides many millions of uncollected assessments, is conclusive evidence that the present sources of city income can bear no further burden; and,

"Whereas, This great amount of uncollected tax exists notwithstanding the fact that there have been sales of tax liens in every borough of the city during the past five years."

The statement that there were $154,000,000 of "uncollected" taxes July 1, is incorrect and misleading, especially in view of the context which says that this amount exists in spite of the sales of tax liens.

It is peculiarly unfortunate that such an erroneous statement, calculated to affect the credit of the city, should be circulated at this time, when the city has just borrowed $100,000,000 and the underwriting bankers are trying to have the public generally buy the bonds.

The facts are that for a number of years the city ran from January 1 to October on borrowed money, and all of the taxes needed for the current year's expenses remained "uncollected" June 30. Some years ago the policy of making one-half of the real estate taxes fall due May 1 was adopted, but the remaining half is not due under the law until November. The amount which is not due until November on real estate and special franchises, and is therefor, of course, "uncollected," because not due, is about $73,000,000.

Of the remaining $80,000,000, $47,000,000 is for unpaid personal property taxes accrued prior to this year. The larger part of this sum is uncollectible, though it has been carried as a fictitious asset for a number of years. This condition resulted from the now abandoned practice of making mythical assessments amounting to hundreds of millions annually against persons and corporations who had no taxable property, and carrying the unpaid taxes based thereon as an asset when, as a matter of fact, they were never at any time collectible. This matter was thoroughly discussed by a commission on city finances six years ago, of which the late Edgar J. Levey was chairman. Some of this sum has been provided for by bonds and some by additions to the tax levy in recent years.

The only part of the "uncollected" taxes which are properly an asset and which should cause any concern because of non-payment, are those on real estate, consisting of about $10,000,000 of the taxes due May 1, of this year and remaining unpaid, and $23,000,000 reported as outstanding January 1, for prior years (though some of this is fictitious also); an aggregate of about $33,000,000 instead of the $154,000,000 which has been discussed. The smaller sum is quite large enough without creating undue alarm based on a misaporehension of the real situation.

THE GROWING BUDGET.

An Increase of 22 Per Cent in Four Years—New Budget Now Being Made.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment is now considering the requests of the various departments for appropriations for the year 1915. These appropriations, when finally passed by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and approved by the Board of Aldermen and the Mayor, will constitute the 1915 Budget. These appropriations are merely estimates of the amounts required, and do not reflect the actual expenditures, as the appropriations in many cases are not entirely exhausted.

In addition to the expenditures from tax budget appropriations, other expenses for maintenance and operation of city functions are paid from the proceeds of the sale of special revenue bonds. These latter expenditures are, to a large degree, really supplementary appropriations or allowances made after the budget is adopted, and they are used for purposes not embraced therein. The administrative expenses of the Public Service Commission are also funded by the issue of special revenue bonds. In addition to such expenditures, there are also those from revenues of some of the departments, notably the revenues from the sale of water in Brooklyn and from the East River bridges. In order to show the actual expenditures from all sources, tables have been prepared under the Comptroller's directions, which show the following facts:

Expenditures for the maintenance and operation of city and county governments for the year 1913, from all sources, brought down to June 30, 1914.

|---|---|
| City government | $125,616,492.16 |
| Debt service | 47,465,373.54 |
| Deficiencies in taxes | 2,300,000.00 |
| State taxes | 7,947,024.00 |
| Total City | $183,328,889.70 |
| Counties: | |
| New York | 3,961,520.63 |
| Kings | 1,827,119.84 |
| Queens | 444,935.26 |
| Richmond | 143,303.07 |
| Bronx | 14,501.45 |
| | $180,720,269.95 |

Of the amount appropriated for liquidation of claims, practically $1,000,000 was still available June 30, 1914.

The following tables have been prepared showing the comparison of total expenditures for the year 1913 against 1900 and 1909 against 1905:

| | 1900. | 1913 |
|---|---|---|
| City government | $108,331,896 | $125,616,492 |
| Debt service | 37,783,906 | 47,465,373 |
| Deficiency in taxes | 2,922,447 | 2,300,000 |
| State taxes | ..... | 7,947,024 |
| Total city | $149,038,249 | $183,328,889 |
| Counties | 5,359,409 | 6,391,380 |
| Grand total | $154,397,658 | $189,720,269 |

The increase in city government 1913 over 1909 is $17,284,596.09 or 13.76 per cent.; the increase in debt service, $9,681,467.21, or 20.69 per cent. The total increase for all purposes for the city, exclusive of counties, is $34,290,640.22, or 23 per cent.; the increase for all counties is $1,031,970.87, or 19.25 per cent., a total increase for the entire city and county government of $35,322,611.09, or 22.87 per cent. This is an average yearly increase for the four-year period for the city, exclusive of counties, of 5.72 per cent.

The increase in city government, 1909 over 1905, is $26,497,476.36, or 32.38 per cent. The total increase for all purposes for the city, exclusive of counties, is $42,698,889.65, or 40.15 per cent.

NEW PLUMBING ORDINANCE.

Alderman Hamilton, chairman of the Building Committee, introduced at this week's meeting of the board an ordinance relating to plumbing, drainage, gas-piping and other systems of piping in buildings, as a part of the revision of the Building Code. The new ordinance authorizes the formulation of rules and regulations on gas piping and other forms of piping, the same as now authorized for plumbing and drainage.

Such rules must be published in the City Record on eight successive Mondays before they become operative. Provision is made, however, that they shall not apply to existing work, except where it is reconstructed to the extent of more than 50 per cent., or where new vertical lines or house drains are installed.

The cut-off valves required by the present law for factories, hotels, churches, theatres, schoolhouses and other buildings of a public character will hereafter be required on all new buildings and on all existing buildings except residences for one or two families or those having not more than fifteen sleeping rooms.

Another section of the ordinance makes it unlawful to use any new system of plumbing and drainage until the same has been properly tested and inspected under the supervision of the Bureau of Buildings and in acordance with its rules. This is no change from existing requirements, it being now one of the rules, but it is hereby made an integral part of the law.

Provision is made for separate toilet facilities in buildings where both sexes are employed or congregate for any purpose. This, of course, does not apply to the toilet facilities for separate families in apartments and tenements or to the private toilets attached to individual rooms or suites of rooms.

Gas Piping.

It is also made unlawful to use any new system of gas-piping or an extension of an existing system until the same has been inspected and tested under the supervision of the Bureau of Buildings. The provision does not apply to existing systems unless there is reason to believe that defects exist which are dangerous to life or property.

The registration of master or employing plumbers now required by law is continued.

The enforcement of the ordinance is put under the jurisdiction of the Superintendents of Buildings of the several boroughs, except that when any of the systems after being put into use become a fire hazard they come under the supervision of the Fire Commissioner as now provided by the old law.

Section 141 of the present Building Code and a part of Section 8 of the same ordinance are repealed, together with such rules as may be in conflict with the provisions of the ordinance. The ordinance is to take effect immediately.

It is said that the proposed ordinance has the approval and endorsement of several associations and individuals who are particularly interested. A public hearing will be given by the committee on October first.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Chester District.

The mid-summer vacation, so far as the Bronx local boards are concerned, came to an end on Tuesday with a meeting of the Local Board of Chester, President Mathewson occupying the chair.

The following resolutions were adopted:

1172. Acquiring title to the lands necessary for an easement fifty (50) feet wide in continuation of White Plains Road, extending from the bulkhead line to the pierhead line of the East River.

990. Constructing a sewer and appurtenances in Public Square (north side), between Hutchinson River and Hutchinson avenue, and in Conner street, between Hutchinson avenue and Givan avenue; and in Givan avenue, between Conner street and East 222nd street, together with all work incidental thereto.

Total estimated cost, $250,000; assessed value of the real estate included within the probable area of assessment is $7,240,000.

All resolutions except the two that were adopted were laid over indefinitely, and no date was fixed for the next meeting.

Harlem Property Owners.

Dr. Abraham Korn was elected presidinet of the Harlem Property Owners' Association, to serve for the thirteenth year, at the annual meeting of the organization held on Thursday evening in its rooms at 147 East 125th street.

All the officers who served during the last year were re-elected for another term, including Morton H. C. Foster, first vice-president; John Scully, second vice-president; Dr. Benjamin Gordon, treasurer; Harry Bierhoff, secretary, and S. L. Kahn, financial secretary.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

CONSIDERABLE improvement in both the selling and leasing branches of the real estate market was shown this week, a number of interesting transactions involving various kinds of property in different sections of the city being closed. Several important deals are now being negotiated and the situation has brightened and is being more optimistically regarded. While the week's sales cannot compare in number with some other weeks in the early part of the year, the record, however, shows a broadening tendency which merits recognition when it is compared with the business reported for other corresponding periods within the last few months.

The more important transactions concerned a plot in East 25th street, which is to be improved with an eight-story building to be occupied exclusively by nurses, also Dyckman apartment houses and upper West Side apartment houses. Numerous sales were reported in the Eastern Parkway section of Brooklyn and a new development company shows a confidence in suburban property by the purchase of acreage in Long Island for the establishment of another home community.

Large leases consummated this week concerned property in Washington street, which is part of the old Smith and McNell's restaurant, and space in the new building to be erected on the site of the Sun Building, on Park Row.

A deal which is well advanced concerns a block front on lower Hudson street which, if closed, will mean an important building operation. Persistent rumors have come up during the week affecting Frederick W. Vanderbilt's property at the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and 40th street, which, according to unconfirmed reports, will shortly be taken over by trade. Many new improvements have been undertaken along Fifth avenue between 34th and 42d streets in the last few years, the latest being the Rogers, Peet Building at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 41st street.

The Vanderbilt holdings form one of the choicest sites in the newer Fifth avenue retail section available for a large building operation. The property involves the old mansion on the immediate corner and a four-story structure to the south adjoining the Union League Club, the two houses comprising a frontage of about 113 feet on Fifth avenue. In 40th street is the old stable and adjoining is a four-story structure which, together with 5 East 39th street, abutting, was purchased by Mr. Vanderbilt from J. Pierpont Morgan about three years ago. The 40th street frontage comprises 175 feet, while the L to 39th street has a frontage of 25 feet.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 15 as against 3 last week and 12 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 4 as compared with 0 last week and 5 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 11 as compared with 3 last week and 7 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 107 as against 99 last week, 17 having stated considerations totaling $242,200. Mortgages recorded this week number 38, involving $419,791, as against 60 last week, aggregating $990,000.

From the Bronx, 11 sales at private contract were recorded, as again 6 last week and 8 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $324,464, compared with $617,131 last week, making a total since January 1 of $30,930,688. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $776,626, and the total from January 1, 1913, to September 27, 1913, was $40,510,796.

Eastern Parkway Section Active.

That the Interborough subway extension now being built through Eastern Parkway to Nostrand avenue is creating considerable interest in real estate circles is evident by the recent sales of "Easy Housekeeping Homes" in the Eastern Parkway section. The Realty Associates reports the following: 1164 Union street to Lena Von Bussum; 1166 Union street to William A. Elliott; 1168 Union street to Mary A. Nolan; 1170 Union street to Bella Lyon; 1172 Union street to Anna G. Doherty; 1174 Union street to Kate Muller; 1184 Union street to Lillian Heise; 1186 Union street to Mathilde Brassler; 1190 Union street to Henry Freirich.

The fact that the Public Service Commission has condemned and taken possession of the block front on the west side of Nostrand avenue from Eastern Parkway to Union street is sufficient assurance to buyers that a subway station will be located there. A sign bearing this notice: "Property of the City of New York," which stands on this property, is still further evidence. The Realty Associates further report that they have sold all of their vacant houses in the Prospect Park East or Flatbush section, having recently sold 275 Fenimore street, corner Rogers avenue, to Rafael B. Lopez and 202 Midwood street to Charles Wissman.

Lower West Side Deal Pending.

Negotiations are pending for the sale of extensive holdings of the James M. Pyle estate and the Arthur B. Kelly estate, comprising the block front in the east side of Hudson street, between Watts and Broome streets, with large frontages in the two latter streets.

On this block the Pyle estate owns twenty-five parcels, at 216 to 228 Hudson street, 90 to 108 Watts street, 575 to 579 and 583 to 589 Broome street. The intervening property in Broome street is owned by the Kelly estate.

The Pyle holdings, which consist of antiquated structures of from one to three stories in height, have a frontage of 168.3 feet in Hudson street and 195 feet in Watts street. In Broome street there are two frontages of 135.2 and 66 feet. With the Kelly property this frontage is increased to 245.2 feet. The broker is Floyd S. Corbin. The prospective buyer, whose name has not been disclosed, will raze the present structures, if the deal is closed and erect a tall building, for part occupancy.

Morris Hall in Trade.

The Brown-Weiss Realties resold Morris Hall, a ten-story apartment house, 96x125, at the northwest corner of Amsterdam avenue and Cathedral Parkway, to Marion E. Ireland and the No. 160 Broadway Realties Corporation. In part payment the purchasers gave six properties, including the Rosemere, a six-story elevator apartment house, 50x90.11, at 145 and 147 West 127th street; the northeast corner of Washington avenue and 167th street, a six-story flat, 29x127; 584 East 137th street, a six-story flat, 50x100; 1820 Clinton avenue, a six-story building, leased to Klaw & Erlanger; a dwelling at Grand and Linden avenues, Morsemere, N. J., and a factory building, 450x450, at Kenilworth, N. J.

Morris Hall was purchased by the Brown-Weiss Realties last April from Eva C. Hawkes and Newbold Morris.

Dyckman Apartments in Trade.

Arnold, Byrne & Baumann and S. Osgood Pell & Co., have sold for the Halpin Building Corporation, Paul Halpin, president, to the Hurry estate 59 to 67 Nagle avenue, two five-story apartment houses, on plot 100x125. In exchange the Hurry estate gave two plots, one at the northwest corner of Wadsworth avenue and 190th street, through to Wadsworth terrace, 72x182x63.6; also the northwest corner of Wadsworth terrace and 190th street, 81x158.

The Halpin Building Corporation contemplates the erection of a high-class apartment house on the Wadsworth avenue plot.

Mr. Halpin bought the Nagle avenue property in September, 1913, and erected the present buildings on the plot.

Y. W. C. A. in East 45th Street.

The Board of Trustees of the Y. W. C. A. of the city of New York has purchased from the Akron Building Co., Leo. S. Bing, president, through Horace S. Ely & Co. and Worthington Whitehouse, the four old buildings, on plot 75x100.5, at 132-138 East 45th street. It is understood the property will be improved with an eight-story fireproof building, to be used exclusively for the Central Club for Nurses, whose interests in the transaction were represented by Miss Louise Bower.

Amityville Acreage Deal.

Charles P. Starke sold to Peter A. Baldwin and Richard Thackray the plot of five acres on the west side of Bayview avenue, Amityville, L. I., adjoining the properties of Mrs. Esther W. Knapp and P. A. Baldwin on the south. The plot also has an extensive frontage on Ireland's Pond. The house that stood on the property was destroyed by fire last winter. Messrs. Baldwin and Thackray will develop the plot into a home colony by laying it out and building houses.

It is Economical and Sanitary to Burn Garbage and Refuse

One ton of Garbage contains as much potential heat as 400 pounds of coal. And a Kewanee Water Heating Garbage Burner uses the fuel matter in garbage and refuse for heating water.

Furthermore, sanitary engineers agree that the only really sanitary way of disposing of garbage is to burn it on the premises where it originates—before it has a chance to decay.

Bustanoby's Restaurant, 110 W. 39th St., New York City. A Kewanee Water Heating Garbage Burner is used to burn garbage and refuse and provide the hot water supply.

KEWANEE
Water Heating Garbage Burners

by using garbage and rubbish as part of the necessary fuel are cutting hot water costs to practically nothing.

If you own, or are interested in, an apartment building, restaurant, hospital or hotel, you cannot afford to have its garbage hauled away.

And a Kewanee Water Heating Garbage Burner makes no odor of any kind. It is so constructed that the garbage is entirely burned — not merely cooked—and that prevents any odors.

Our latest booklet—"Turn Your Garbage Into Fuel" will go to you upon request. It contains interesting facts and figures.

Modern Improvements

Isn't it true that ofttimes some small modern improvement goes a long way towards selling and renting your houses?

Take for example the plan that has recently been adopted by some builders of placing in newly built apartment houses electric washing machines and outlets in the kitchen for electric ironing and cooking.

Does any one doubt, all other things being equal, that these apartments are the ones that will be sold or rented first?

Families of today are educated to demand the comforts and conveniences of electric service, and they are quick to see the advantage of living in an apartment that will minimize the drudgery of housekeeping.

We have other ideas along these same lines. Drop us a line and we will talk them over with you.

LU-CO-FLAT

To Apartment House Agents, Painters and Contractors

LU-CO-FLAT is a modern preparation for Interior Decorating. It produces a surface without gloss that is soft to the eyes and pleasing to artistic tastes.

LU-CO-FLAT is hygienic and is not affected by vapor, moisture or dampness. When soiled it can be washed. It is easily applied and the cost is moderate.

LU-CO-FLAT is made in all colors and many shades. As a background for stencil detail it is incomparable.

LU-CO-FLAT holds its color—the most permanent flat coat offered. Many change bedroom walls from the unsanitary paper to paint because LU-CO-FLAT is so generally pleasing, affording sanitation along with richness of color and beauty.

Try it on your next job and you will use no other.

Write for color card, showing combination of harmonious colors.

LOFT STRUCTURES ON A NET RENTAL BASIS

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for The American Real Estate Co.

INVESTMENT purchases of properties under a net rental basis for a term of years have decided advantages, and form an attractive class of investment. During the last few years there has been a growing tendency on the part of the purchasing public to invest money in this class of security, and there is much to recommend it. In the first place, only from one individual or concern does the income on the property have to be collected, and, in addition, the owner of the fee does not have the personal worry of dealing with the municipal departments regarding taxes and other charges. To offset this, the net income received is less than it would be otherwise, should the owner actually manage the property or employ an agent.

Has Many Advantages.

From the tenants' standpoint the arrangement also has its advantages. In the case where the tenant only wants to occupy a portion of the structure and yet feels that his business will expand, he is in the position to rent the surplus parts of the building; yet, when the time comes that it is necessary to expand, he can reclaim the space and use it for his own purposes. Again, by the employment of a practical building manager the tenant can, in many cases, save money, the annual outlay being less than it would be had he leased for a short term of years on the usual basis. Looking at the situation in one way, he is virtually the owner of the property, without having expended a considerable amount of capital.

Care Must Be Exercised.

To be sure, at the expiration of the lease the building and land revert to the owner of the fee; but, as a usual thing, the value of the building at that time is a negligible quantity. As an example, if the lease is for twenty-one years, with two renewals of like periods each, the building is likely to have outlived its usefulness by that time.

The ideal way of arranging a deal of this character is first to find the tenant and then erect the building to order in the district most desired. If this is not possible, then great care and judgment must be exercised that the wrong kind of structure be not erected, otherwise the operation will spell failure.

Greenwich Village Operations.

Projects along these lines have been undertaken in the Greenwich village section and have met with success. The prime reason lies in the fact that low rentals can be obtained, largely due to the cheapness of the land. There are a large number of concerns who require considerable floor area in a well constructed and up-to-date building and yet cannot afford, or are unwilling, to expend a large amount in rentals. Of course, some concessions must be made, and the leasing firms have gone into a less populated district. In a measure they are pioneers, for, while the section is today somewhat isolated, still there is existing rapid transit, and when the new systems are put in operation the part of the city will once more come into its own.

James H. Cruikshank and William D. Kilpatrick, operating under the name of the St. John's Realty Company, and other concerns, have been active for several years in the Greenwich village section and have undertaken several large operations along the lines already laid out. In speaking to a representative of the Record and Guide Mr. Kilpatrick said:

JAMES H. CRUIKSHANK.

"Every builder builds to make a profit on his operation. Every builder in so doing follows what he conceives to be the line of least resistance. The various classes of new buildings in New York show how divergent are the ideas of builders as to what constitutes the 'best seller.'

New Motto Followed.

"In building mercantile buildings in old and all but forgotten Greenwich village we turned our backs on the motto, 'Cheap land, cheap buildings,' and broke away from tradition and precedent by erecting costly, high-grade buildings on low-priced land.

"Our object was to cater to large business houses to whom location was no particular factor but to whom a low rent and a high-class building were absolutely essential. The low-priced land of Greenwich village enabled us to quote rents which were forty to sixty per cent. lower than the rent of duplicate buildings in central, high-priced locations. We found tenants with comparative ease, in spite of the fact that we would rent the buildings only as a whole and on a strictly net basis. When so leased, we found selling a comparatively easy task, the low rent being a prime selling asset, and the net lease, which practically makes the tenant the landlord, being most inviting to investors.

Appeals to the Buyer.

"A net lease, under which the tenant pays city and water taxes, assessments, insurance of all kinds, complies with orders of any and every department, keeps the building and sidewalk in repair, and under which the landlord is relieved of any and all obligations, is the type of investment which appeals strongly to a buyer; for, although the amount of net income cannot be increased, it cannot, by the same token, be decreased.

"Judging the future by the past, the acme of construction in loft buildings and factories has been reached. With the exception of the sprinkler system, the difference in construction between the fireproof loft building of 1894 and that of 1914 is very slight, this difference consisting chiefly of comparatively inexpensive, but important, changes and additions relating to fire protection, such as hollow metal windows, tin-clad doors and other requirements of the Fire Underwriters, as well as additional concrete protection for steel, fire towers, etc. These features (except the sprinkler system) add but slightly to the cost of production, but are extremely beneficial in reducing insurance on building and contents and in the protection to human life.

"Hence, when a building of the very best type of modern construction, containing every improvement necessary to the economical conduct of business, which obtains minimum rates of insurance, and which affords the maximum of protection to employees, can be produced on low-priced land to lease at a rental half of that necessarily entailed in the production of a duplicate building on expensive land, such a building forms a splendid renting and selling operation, if our experience has been a fair criterion."

Naco Soil Pipe.

A matter that is becoming of more and more importance in the eyes of the building manager and operator is the permanency and satisfactory service rendered by the buildings which may be involved. In this respect they are largely dependent on the architects who originally design the buildings and who are actually the ones responsible. That the architect is coming to an even more certain appreciation of his position is evident by the greater care which he is nowadays exercising in the selection of equipment constituting the house drainage and sewage systems.

For many years the conditions existing in the manufacture of soil pipe and soil pipe fittings were chaotic, in that no standards existed which would insure sanitary design, adequate strength and proper weight of fittings. The plumbing codes that are and have been in force in the various cities in the country merely designate that the soil pipe used shall be of a certain weight per foot, or that it shall be what is commonly known to the trade as "extra heavy."

Slip-shod Methods.

Also under the lax manufacturing condition in vogue, foundry practice was allowed to become very slip-shod so that poor grades of iron were introduced, containing a large percentage of scrap iron and the resultant castings were porous and brittle. They were also scant in weight and size and varied greatly in wall thickness.

To overcome these dangerous conditions the American Society of Inspectors of Plumbing and the Confederated Supply Associations joined forces for the establishment of standard specifications which should be as perfect in their construction and sanitary features as modern engineering could make them. The result has been a set of specifications known as "Naco," named after the National Committee appointed by the Confederated Supply Associations, and these specifications insure a line of soil pipe fittings carefully designed solely from the point of view of the Sanitary Engineer and combining all the views and opinions of value of the manufacturers, foundrymen, practical plumbers, and State Inspectors.

The Central Foundry Company, one of the largest manufacturers of soil pipe and fittings in the country, has actively taken up the manufacture of soil pipe and fittings in accordance with the Naco specifications and has put a complete line of them upon the market. The architect is, therefore, now in a position to specify these fittings for his houses and the fact that he is nowadays being held responsible for the satisfactory functioning of every portion of the building, insures even more careful consideration of these matters of house drainage and his ultimate specifying of Naco soil pipe and fittings.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

Telephone Booth Ventilator.

TO insure greater comfort while telephoning a new booth ventilator has recently been put on the market. It is generally the case that where there is no ventilating set the booth is hot, stuffy, and uncomfortable. When the door of the telephone booth is closed to obtain privacy, the supply of fresh air is shut out.

Telephone companies, during the last few years, have found a ventilator to be a real commercial asset. Comfortable booths in which there is a constant circulation of fresh air prove an incentive for longer talks over toll lines as well as additional local calls. The increased revenue made possible in this way prompts the prophecy that the near future will see all telephone booths with ventilators.

The Western Electric-Sturtevant telephone booth ventilating set is the outcome of several years of experimenting to develop a ventilator that will not interfere with conversations nor destroy the soundproof quality of the telephone booth. The set consists of a motor-driven multi-vane fan and extended air and felt pad for insulation purposes. To install the set it is only necessary to cut a round hole in the top of the booth and two slots for outlet gates.

The fresh air is supplied quietly and without any draught. The foul air escapes through the vents that are specially devised to prevent any sound from being heard outside. By flooding the booth with cool, fresh air the set gives comfort to the occupant even on the warmest days.

Eliminating Electrolysis.

SYSTEMS of return feeders, designed to take care of the current which is now causing the electrolysis of the water pipes in Canton, O., says the Engineering News, has been agreed upon by Professor A. F. Ganz, who was employed as the city's electric expert to investigate the matter, and J. G. Swain, superintendent and engineer of the Northern Ohio Traction Company, whose circuits were causing the trouble. The company will enter into a written agreement with the city for the installation of the return feeders, which will be placed at various points where electrolysis has been noted and run back to the power house. Meters will be so placed as to allow periodic tests in order to see whether the system is working properly, and it is believed that by this means the city's water pipes can be fully protected.

Professor Ganz has spent the past four months in Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he was retained by the Public Utilities Commission of the province to assist in an investigation of the electrolysis situation.

Apartment Bulletin for Trade People.

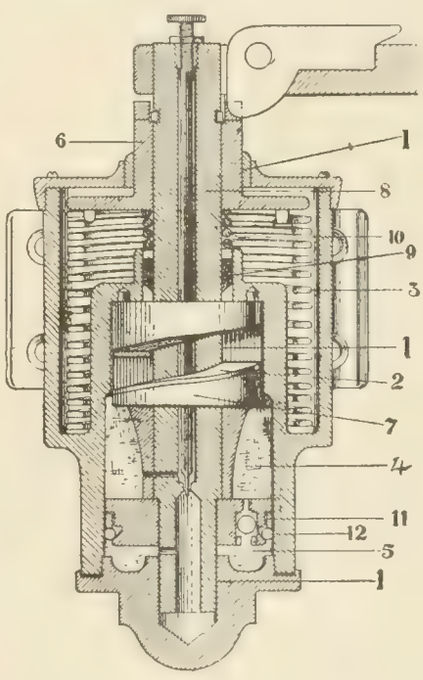
ANNOYANCE caused by unnecessary ringing of call bells in apartments because the management has not had the foresight to have a plain and easily read directory of tenants in basement of apartment buildings, may be eliminated by the use of a device that extends the usefulness of the Tablet and Ticket Company's system of unit letters.

The accompanying illustration shows the device as it appears in some of the largest apartment houses in New York. The bulletin contains not only the name and the floor on which the customer lives, but also the number of the apartment so that time may be saved both for the tenant and the tradesman by preventing useless calls. The Tablet & Ticket Company, of 381 Broadway, has perfected this bulletin board a little further by providing unit metal letters, white on a black background, so formed as to give uniform and proper spacing so that house announcements may be neatly printed, and even out-door advertising signs announcing size, location and other features of vacant apartments may be attractively presented at all times.



By the use of these letters and figures on an exterior sign, near the entrance of the building, an agent's renting talk can be presented to be read constantly by the passerby on the street. When the advertised apartment is rented the same sign board may be used by merely transforming the lettering and the figures so that the advantages of any particular suite of rooms may be constantly before the public. Some apartments are using this system on a smaller scale in elevators, to indicate that packages, telegrams or letters are awaiting tenants. These boards are placed in elevators or in the halls.

A novel use for the Wilson system of paper letter bulletins is in the form of a code letter sign distinctive for each tenant in the building. To insure privacy Mr. Smith will have the letter code "CY," while Mr. Brown, in the same building, will have a letter code "ED." If a telegram comes for Mr. Smith, the bulletin board announces: "CY, telegram."

This system eliminates a feature of the tipping evil and it also keeps the tenant in more direct touch with the central office in the apartments.

Door Check of Novel Design.

ILLUSTRATED herewith is a sketch of a new door check operating on a novel principle that is being introduced by the Modern Door Check Company, 134 South Clinton street, Chicago, Ill., the two conspicuous features of which are the torsion type of spring on which the strain is quickly divided under all conditions, thereby minimizing the possibility of breakage and the vertical liquid chamber which is kept constantly full by the extra feed chamber provided to prevent the door jerking or pounding. The check is also securely packed to prevent leakage, and the automatic take-up and phosphor-bronze bearings are additional improvements in its strength and constructive simplicity. The shaft is supported at the top and bottom and in the center, thus assuring perfect alignment. The phosphor-bronze bearing on the cams carries the load when the door is checked. In this connection the wear is taken up by the spring having a lifting tension, the lower cam being pinned to the shaft, and the spring winder keyed to the shaft, assuring the bearings of pulling together. This prevents jerking or pounding and the door is always controlled smoothly from the time of release until closed. When the turnbuckle arm is lengthened it will allow the main arm to extend beyond right angles and the liquid release becomes operative and gives full spring length just at the closing point and snaps the latch. The piston ring retainer automatically takes up any wear that may develop on the piston rod. The provision made for packing is a feature especially adapted for the prevention of leakage during transportation. The illustration shows the packing far above the liquid, so that when the check is on the door there is no possibility of the liquid coming in contact with the packing. The door checks are made in three sizes, with reversible corner, hanging, or flush brackets. The component parts have been numbered: 1 being the main shaft; 2 phosphor-bronze bearing on the cams; 3, fifteen coil torsion type flat wire spring; 4, extra feed chamber; 5, liquid chamber; 6, spring winder; 7, lower cam; 8, shaft; 9, packing; 10, compression spring; 11, piston ring, and 12, piston ring retainer.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

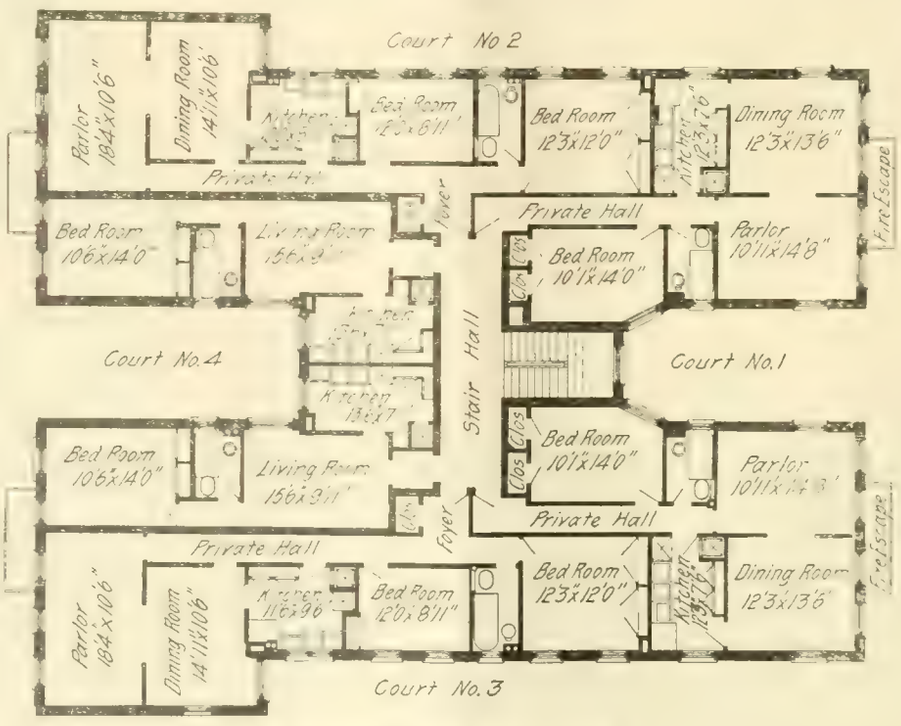
New Apartment House on Washington Heights Which Combines Many New Features for Convenience of Tenants

RENTING a new apartment house in its entirety before completion is a difficult problem in these days, particularly when so much is heard on every side about the overproduction and the great number of "to let" signs to be seen upon houses of this type in all section of the city. Still this has been accomplished, and without a single rental concession. An apartment to be rented in this manner must, of course, contain distinctive features, and have much to commend it, or it would not have proved so attractive to prospective tenants. These facts are quite true of the apartment house which is now nearing completion at 556 West 180th street, Manhattan.

Schwartz and Gross, of 347 Fifth avenue, are the architects who prepared the plans and specifications for this building, and it has been erected under their supervision. They have given much thought and study to apartment house design in general, from the view point of permanent rentals and satisfied tenants, and the result of their study, particularly in this case, has proved that their ideas in regard to the requirements of strictly modern apartments are feasible and advantageous to both owners and tenant.



Schwartz & Gross, Architects.
NO. 556 WEST 180TH STREET.

This new structure, which is five stories and basement in height, occupies a plot 75x100 feet in the north side of West 180th street, near St. Nicholas avenue. It is a neighborhood of new apartments for which comparatively high rentals are obtained, many times for apartments poorly planned and which in another section of the city would have rented for much less money.

The exterior of the building is designed in a simple style, and without excess of ornamentation. The front is of light buff brick with a granite base, and sills, lintels and pilasters of buff Indiana limestone. Cornices are well designed of galvanized iron, painted to match the stone trim. The five floors are arranged in separate suites or apartments of three, four, and five rooms and bath, six apartments to a floor.

Probably the prime reason for the immediate success in renting this apartment house lies in the fact that all rooms are considerably larger than are usually to be found in apartments of this class. In many cases an extra room could have been squeezed into the suite, but this has been omitted in order to obtain larger and better proportioned rooms. This seeming sacrifice has proved advantageous, however, as a renting proposition, for as a consequence to the increased size of these rooms, they are much better lighted, and better ventilated than would have been possible had the rooms been made smaller. Four large courts, two side, one front, and one rear, assure the best possible light and proper ventilation to all rooms. Another reason for the popularity of this building can be traced to the fact that only the best workmanship and the highest type of materials were used throughout. Alexander McDowell, the owner and builder of this apartment house, has had a long experience in the building trade, with an enviable reputation for honest building.

A WELL ARRANGED FLOOR PLAN.

Interior woodwork and trim throughout is of chestnut and white pine. The finish in all rooms with the exception of the kitchen is in white enamel. All floors are of hardwood, or parquet with waxed finish. The bathrooms have tiled wainscot and floors, and the plumbing fixtures are of white porcelain of a better quality than is usually to be found in apartments except of the very highest class. Showers have also been installed, and the bathrooms are complete as to toilet accessories, which are of brass, nickel plated.

Particular attention has been given to the kitchens in this building. These rooms are large enough to allow the proper placing of fixtures and are so arranged as to provide for the maximum efficiency in the preparation of meals, and the necessary kitchen work. The equipment of all kitchens consists of a gas range with elevated oven, white porcelain sink and wash trays, refrigerator, dumbwaiter, dish and broom closets. Each apartment has an ample number of commodious "built in" closets and wardrobes, well placed in relation to the rooms they serve.

Still another reason why this building has proved so easy to rent is the fact that much thought and study has been expended upon the decorative scheme of the various suites, for it is here that care and good taste on the part of the owner and architect is most apparent to the tenant. Wall papers have been selected and hung with due regard to the use of the separate rooms, and in colors that will not detract from the natural light. The trim throughout, in design, is quite plain, without elaborate moldings. The lighting fixtures have been well placed, and were selected for their modest, yet dignified, lines. It has proved an easy proposition to obtain tenants for a building which is designed and built properly, and the tenants, as a class, are sure to be better in character and more permanent than is usually the case in most apartments.

Excellent rapid transit facilities have no doubt been an influencing factor which decided a number of tenants to lease apartments in this building, as accommodations are provided for travel in all directions. One block north is 181st street, the main east and west artery of the Washington Heights section. Direct communication with all parts of the Bronx is afforded by way of the trolleys which operate over Washington Bridge. These cars have their Manhattan terminal at the subway station at St. Nicholas avenue and 181st street. The subway provides the best method of travel southward to lower Manhattan and Brooklyn and northward to Van Cortlandt Park.

Contract for Brooklyn Playground.

T. J. Buckley Construction Co., 303 Fifth avenue, Manhattan, has received the general contract for the construction of the Betsy Head Memorial Playground and Recreation Center in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn. The work is being done under the jurisdiction of the Public Recreation Commission of the City of New York. Henry B. Hertz, architect, 32 West 31st street, has prepared the plans. The project includes a field 310x410 feet, with a quarter mile running track, open-air swimming pool, 50x100 feet; open-air and indoor gymnasium for men, a field house and four shelter houses. The cost will be over $100,000.

Building for Furniture House.

John McKeefrey, 1416 Broadway, Manhattan, has received the general contract to erect a store and loft building at 33-35 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn. The building will be of brick, limestone and terra cotta. It will be seven stories in height and will be strictly fireproof. The plot covered will be 50x100x25 feet, and runs through the block to 72 Rockwell place. The plans were prepared by Frederick Putnam Platt, architect, 1123 Broadway, and Henry L. Norris, 32 Liberty street, is the owner. The new building has been leased to B. G. Lattimer & Sons Co., dealers in furniture and carpets, who will occupy it as a warehouse and salesrooms.

Contract Awarded for Factory.

J. Odell Whitenack, 231 West 18th street, New York City, has received the general contract for the erection of a factory building in Long Island City. The building will be located at Williams street and Harris avenue and will be five stories in height, of brick and reinforced concrete. Construction will be fireproof throughout. It will cover a plot 90x161 feet. The building is owned by Frederick Ayer, of Boston, and has been leased for a long term to the Sterling Gum Co., 111 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Contract for Fourth Avenue Loft.

A general contract was awarded this week to R. H. Casey, 246 West 16th street, New York City, for the erection of a three-story store and loft building at 451-453 Fourth avenue. The building is to be erected for the Ogden Goelet Estate, 9 West 17th street, owners, from plans and specifications prepared by John H. Duncan, architect, 347 Fifth avenue. The building will cover a plot 50x100 feet.

K. of C. Contemplate Building.

New York Chapter, Knights of Columbus, is raising funds to be used for the purchase of a site and the erection of a modern clubhouse which will cost about $150,000. At the present time no definite details have been decided upon nor has an architect or site been selected. Action will probably not be taken until after January 1, 1915. Wm. P. Myhan, 120 Franklin street, N. Y. C., is chairman of the committee in charge.

New Dormitory for Jones Institute.

John D. Cosgrove, Glen Cove, L. I., was awarded the general contract to build a dormitory building near Hicksville, L. I., for the Jones Institute, Hicksville; Charles Berner, Sea Cliff, L. I., president. The structure will be of brick, two stories in height, 40x100 feet, with two wings 30x72 feet each. S. J. Stammers, 500 Fifth avenue, New York City, and Frederick Briggs, Plandome, L. I., associated architects, prepared the plans. The operation will cost about $65,000.

Contemplated Apartment.

I. Randolph Jacobs, 30 East 42d street, who recently purchased the property at 159-165 East 79th street, will probably erect a modern apartment house there in the near future. No plans have been prepared, nor have details been definitely decided upon.

Architect May Build Apartments.

John P. Boyland, architect, 2526 Westchester avenue, the Bronx, who recently purchased the block front on the west side of River street, Field place to 184th street, and contemplates improving the same with two five-story apartment houses. No details have been decided as yet. Owner will prepare the plans and take all estimates.

South Norwalk Contemplates Hospital.

The Norwalk Hospital Association, Christian Schwartz, president, contemplates the erection of a modern hospital building on Connecticut avenue, South Norwalk, to cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. The architect for the building will probably be decided upon by a competition which will possibly be announced next month. Definite details have not been decided upon.

Improvement for Sun Site.

Frederick Putnam Platt, architect, 1123 Broadway, has been retained by the Sun Printing & Publishing Co. to prepare plans and specifications for the building to replace the one occupied by the New York Sun publication for a number of years at the southeast corner of Nassau and Frankfort streets. While the improvement will mean virtually a new structure, technically speaking, it must be classed as an alteration, as it is planned to utilize one and possibly part of another of the present interior walls. The rest of the building will be newly constructed and it will be built to a height of three, five or seven stories, as will be determined later. The basement, sub-basement and first floor stores have been leased for a long term to David A. Schulte, as announced in another column of this issue.

BROOKLYN BUILDING FAST.

A Big Movement Thought to Have Started.

This has been, so far, the biggest building year in Brooklyn since 1909; and the year 1909 was one of the four most prolific of plans filed that Brooklyn has ever known. So great have been the disparity between the amount of construction in hand in recent years, when compared with the records of certain preceding years, no one has cared to be particularly reminded of it. But the times have so improved that Brooklyn can again compare the current record of building activity with the records of other years with composure and even with some satisfaction.

Since the first of the year and up to the middle of this month Brooklyn has filed plans for new buildings estimated to cost about $32,000,000, or about $10,000,000 more than for the corresponding portion of last year. The year 1909 produced altogether (in twelve months) over $56,000,000 worth of work for new buildings, a record that has been exceeded only by the $62,000,000 of the year 1907, the $63,000,000 of 1906 and the unprecedented record of 1905, which was $75,000,000.

In 1909 Brooklyn had filed plans up to the middle of September for $56,000,000 worth of new construction, which was the largest amount of work ever planned during a similar period, except in the phenomenal year of 1905. Builders and material men have always said that 1906 was really the best year that Brooklyn ever had, although more plans were filed in 1905 than in 1906. The seed was sown in '05, but the harvest was gathered in '06. In Queens this has been the biggest year for building projects since 1911.

From all appearances another great building movement similar to the one which, beginning in 1904, culminated in 1907, is gathering force in Brooklyn at the present time. The inspiration for current construction comes from the subway extension, just as the boom of ten years ago did. Ten years ago frame construction in Flatbush and brick dwellings east and west of Prospect Park claimed the most attention, while now the operations are scattered, and much the larger number consist of brick apartment houses and brick two-family dwellings. It is believed that the proportion of apartment house construction will steadily increase and also that business buildings are going to multiply faster than in the past.

CONTRACTS THOUGHT INDEFINITELY DEFERRED AWARDED THIS WEEK—PLAN FILINGS INDICATE MONEY IS STILL PROCURABLE

Steel Companies Making Concessions—
Plate Glass Going Up—Brick Dull

ABSENCE of banking connections between South America and New York continues to be a retardant factor in the establishment of basic building material trade between the two continents. Despite reports to the contrary, ships suitable for carrying building materials, like lime and cement, into South America are not yet sufficiently available. In the meantime, however, sales managers are pushing into South America and some material is actually going down there, especially cement.

As far as the temperament of the building material market in the Metropolitan district is concerned, a better tone is noted among the staples. Hardware is especially optimistic regarding the future. Steel and iron are depressed, the big companies standing ready to offer concessions to make up for the slump in finished steel orders which followed the temporary stimulus resulting from the rise in the price of rolled steel which came when the foreign competition was first removed by war abroad.

Common brick continues weak. Wire nails out of store are quoted at $1.85 to $1.90 cents base per keg. Cut nails out of store are quoted at the same level. Business is slow, indicating a slacking up in commerce as well as in building construction. Crucibles and all lubricants and paints based on graphite are reported to be active and some of the mills in New Jersey are working night forces on packing goods for shipment. Some in East Jersey are increasing capacity. Linseed oil dropped a cent.

In window glass business is quiet in the Eastern market, but glass producing points in the interior report that foreign orders are beginning to come in. Prices in the New York districts show practically no change from the level quoted prior to the disturbance of building conditions. Trade quotations are still ruling at 90-10 to 90-15 per cent. on single thick and 90-10 to 90-20 per cent. on double thick. On the better grade of double thick the trade is having little difficulty in getting 90-10 per cent. Lumber is holding fairly close to list, although there is considerable competition and here and there shading is reported. The meagre supply now available serves as a check against price concessions.

Several contracts which the building material trade had considered as likely to be indefinitely deferred were awarded this week, notably, the $200,000 factory at Williams street and Ely avenue, for the Sterling Gum Company, Long Island City, to J. Odell Whitenack; the Jones Institute, first reported in October last year, costing $65,000 for building alone, at Hicksville, L. I., to J. D. Cosgrove, Glen Cove, L. I.; an $85,000 store and loft operation, awarded to John McKeefrey, to be erected in Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn; a $150,000 store and loft building for the Goelet Estate, at 451 Fourth avenue, which was awarded to R. H. Casey, and the Ford factory extension, costing $750,000, in Brooklyn, which contract went to the W. L. Crow Construction Company. Excluding the Jones Institute these contracts represent a total of $1,185,000 involved in industrial or commercial construction.

Plan filings for the week show in both volume and value that money is still available for building operations here in the city. There is a notable absence of speculators in the building as in the building material market, indicating that whatever money is being engaged for construction is obtained at liberal premium on good first class business projects, principally industrial and institutional, the former, however, predominating. Official reports of plan filings in the five boroughs for the week ending Friday noon follow:

| | Week Ending Sept 18 | | Sept 25 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|

PLATE GLASS.

Jobbers Announce an Advance Effective October 1.

INTIMATION was received by the plate-glass trade this week that on October 1 there would be a sharp advance in current quotations for that commodity. Just what proportions the advance will take was not divulged, although there were some who expected it to be between 10 and 25 per cent.

Reasons for the advance given inquirers involved the stagnating of the potash trade with Germany and the stifling of the imported plate glass business owing to the war. Imported plate glass now comes from Australia and other distant places. Marine insurance rates are extremely high and those who want foreign plate glass must pay the extra burdens. This has thrown back upon American glass manufacturers an unexpected demand, and the mills are being taxed to their capacity, whereas two months ago some of them were shutting down, because they could not compete with the foreign trade under the lower import rates. To-day they not only have to meet the current demand but also that from jobbers, who are anticipating the development of a great exporting trade to Europe, South America and Canada.

LUMBER.

Dealers Report Average Volume of Business Moving to Jobs for Lean Orders.

NO large difference is reported in the hardwood department of the building material market. Ash is the strongest item of the list with poplar close second. Small lots predominate. Price cutting has almost entirely ceased, although competition is keen, business being sought largely on the basis of accommodation. In the retail trade there is little difference in the volume of hardwoods moving out this month as compared with the corresponding month last year.

Ordinary building grades of lumber have shown little improvement, but they have not shown, on the other hand, any marked decline. Timber is reported to be in strong demand.

BIG GAIN IN PLAN FILING.

Despite Tightness of Money Volume and Value Have Increased.

PLAN filing figures compiled from the Record and Guides weekly reports as taken from the official records of the Bureaus of Buildings of the five boroughs from January 1 to September 19 give rather surprising information considering the general state of finances. Official figures show that there have been plans filed for 1,016 more buildings this year than in a corresponding period in 1913, with an actual gain in estimated value of $898,713.

The two active boroughs are Brooklyn and Queens. Brooklyn shows a gain in volume of 812 buildings with a current gain in value of $9,884,676, while Queens shows a gain of 290 buildings this year, with an increase in value of $4,067,436. Manhattan's loss this year, as against the same period last year, is 113 buildings, with a decrease in value of $9,007,675. Bronx drops back 112 buildings from last year's totals in the same period as last year, and loses $3,904,259 from last year's value. Richmond gains 139 new building operations so far this year, but loses $141,465. Tabulations follow:

| | January 1, 1914, to September 19, | | January 1, 1913, to September 18. | |

COMMON BRICK.

No Change in Left Over Barges—Reserve Supply Low.

COMMON brick sales and arrivals on the wholesale dock this week were evenly balanced, leaving the total reserve unsold yesterday at exactly the same position as last week. Registered unloading was practically the same as last week, there being a difference in volume of only half a barge load.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, Sept. 24, in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson Rivers unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

IRON AND STEEL.

Big Companies Ready to Make Concessions on Some Lines.

SEVERAL small contracts were announced this week for local and nearby steel corporations, indicating some improvement in the structural trade, especially in factory extension. The Victor Talking Machine Company's plant at Camden is to be extended, the American Bridge Company taking the contract for 300 tons. The Passaic Steel Company is to supply 800 tons for an apartment house at 54th street and Park avenue, and the Hay Foundry and Iron Company will supply 400 tons for the Hyman & Oppenheim loft building. Coupled with a total of 3,000 tons reported for factory and commercial buildings in New York and vicinity last week, this is considered by the steel trade as being a fair showing considering the general state of things.

The mail service building in this city will take an additional 6,500 tons, 3,800 is estimated for a new power station of the Public Service Corporation in New Jersey, 1,800 tons for the Colony Club of New York, while the filter building of the American Sugar Refining Company in Brooklyn will require 1,500 tons more. Government work pending calls for about 6,000 additional tons.

The big steel companies are said to be making concessions to move finished steel products in order to keep their present capacity of 50 to 60 per cent. occupied during the slump pending the development of foreign business in Europe and South America. Only the United States Steel Corporation and one or two merchants having strong foreign connections are taking any European or South American orders at present, so far as known, owing to the absence of banking connections at this time.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS ADVOCATED

Seventh Annual Waterways Convention Held and Tour of Empire State Made—State and City Officials Enlisted in Cause

By WILLARD REED MESSENGER

MAYOR MITCHEL, of New York, visited the army of delegates attending the Seventh Annual Convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association at their headquarters in the Hotel Majestic on Tuesday of last week and opened the battle for river and harbor improvements. He fired some pretty big guns and sounded the keynote of the convention, a vigorous protest against delay or abandonment of waterway improvements. Throughout the convention (which on Wednesday was continued aboard the steamboat Berkshire, accommodating eight hundred passengers, which, after an inspection of New York Harbor, proceeded up the Hudson on a three-day trip to Albany and Troy, stopping at eight cities) there were no kid gloves or velvet lining used regarding the statement of facts or demands for waterway improvements.

Governors, Mayors and Congressmen forsook oratory and generalities, abandoned formal requests and appeals and emphatically uttered the demand of the people of the Atlantic Seaboard, New York and the Hudson Valley for their just and fair share of Federal appropriations for river and harbor improvements. Mayor Mitchel delighted the hundreds of already enthusiastic delegates assembled from Maine to Florida, when he declared that the European war was a reason for hastening Atlantic seaboard improvements rather than an excuse for delay, and confided to the delegates that he had that day written President Wilson earnestly urging that the policy of economy and retrenchment should not be permitted to delay the important improvements in the East River, for which thirteen million dollars had been provided in the River and Harbor bill, but which was being filibustered in the United States Senate, and which action was denounced throughout the Convention.

WILLARD REED MESSENGER.

Mayor Mitchel declared that if the River and Harbor appropriation was to be lessened at all that it should be reduced proportionately for all localities, but that the proposed East River improvements should not be entirely delayed. He also pointed out the danger and difficulty of blasting in the East River after the new subway tunnel was in operation, which would be necessary if the Federal appropriation was held up. He pointed out also that the strategic naval advantage of the East River Improvement was important, as it would permit naval vessels in case of necessity to enter or leave New York Harbor by way of Long Island Sound.

The New York delegates also added a new argument in favor of the intra-coastal canal from Maine to Florida and the Gulf based upon the proposed establishment of a free port in New York Harbor, declaring that a free port would increase the importance of New York, both as a manufacturing and distributing centre, and that the intra-coastal canal would be of great advantage in this new commerce which a free port, as now proposed, would develop.

J. Hampton Moore, President of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, in his address at Albany said that $63,000,000 had been expended by the Federal Government on the Ohio River, while only $5,000 had been spent on the Arthur Kills between New Jersey and Staten Island, and only $5,000 on the Hudson River under the same provision; and the walls of the beautiful auditorium in the State Educational Building, considered the finest in the world, echoed the cheers of approval, when he declared that the people of New York State should no longer tolerate such self-evident injustice.

Governor Glynn made his words of welcome cordial but brief, and almost at once began to fire out facts about waterways. He showed that the Federal Government spent a total of only five million dollars on the Hudson River, while the State of New York had expended more than $200,000,000 on the Erie Canal, or about one-third as much as the CONVENTION OF THE ATLANTIC DEEP WATERWAYS ASSOCIATION ON THE STEPS OF THE CAPITOL AT ALBANY.

Federal Government has expended on the improvement of all waterways in the United States. He said that the State would gladly expend the comparative paltry seven million dollars needed for the improvement of the Upper Hudson River, except that both the Federal and State Constitutions prohibit such improvement on the part of the State, and that although the Federal Government reserved to itself the exclusive right to make the improvement, nevertheless failed to do so, leaving the Upper Hudson with less depth than the State has provided through the canal all the way from the lakes to the river.

He showed that Canada was more farsighted and was capturing our trade because of the indifference of the Federal Government and that the Government has spent seven million dollars on a canal in Illinois and made expenditures on the shoals of Chattanooga, amounting to $11.90 per ton of freight carried, and an improvement on the Arkansas River, amounting to $56 per ton of freight carried, and in other localities running as high as $183 per ton of freight carried, and that on the same basis of expenditure, New York ought to have an appropriation of seven billion dollars, and that the seven million dollars needed for the improvement of the Hudson to Albany and Troy was not requested but was demanded.

No such determination and enthusiasm for waterway improvements has been witnessed in the United States. When the steamship Berkshire left Pier 32 on the Hudson River and rounded the Battery, every river craft in the harbor with a whistle, blew it and even the factories up the East River blew salutes of welcome, and on up through Hell Gate where the delegates viewed the New York connecting railway bridge, and the great terminals in Brooklyn and Queens, and the construction work on the new thousand-foot piers of the Bronx Terminal Corporation, and then back down the East River and through Raritan Bay to Perth Amboy. On the following days the delegates visited West Point, Newburgh, Poughkeepsie, Kingston, Hudson, Albany, Troy, and by means of two hundred automobiles, proceeded to Waterford and Cohoes and the great locks, the largest in the world, connecting the Hudson River with the Mohawk River above the Falls, where boats are lifted through an elevation of 169 feet by a series of five locks which are located within a distance of about a mile and a half.

Probably Thursday was the most strenuous day of the convention, when the Berkshire steamed up the Hudson at daybreak, and the delegates visited five different cities in a single day, all decorated, with flags flying, bells ringing, and whistles blowing, concluding the day at Hudson, where, long after midnight, owing to late arrival, Mayors and Congressmen, State and Army Engineers, were still talking on waterway improvements to the delegates and townspeople in the spacious but crowded opera house. To add to the welcome everywhere extended on both banks of the Hudson, the Dolphin, the Government yacht of the Secretary of War, convoyed by a torpedo boat destroyer, proceeded up the river as an escort to the Berkshire, and on at least two occasions the engines of New York Central trains blew three hearty whistles in salutation to the hundreds of delegates and reception committees sailing up the river.

The following are some of the resolutions adopted by the delegates at the 7th Annual Convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterway Association:

"The cheapest method of transportation is by water, and the cheapest form of water transportation is by unrigged craft or barge. Government statistics show that as the coastwise fleet declines, the barge fleet grows, and it is evident that the barge can reach and serve great areas which cannot be served by other forms of water conveyance. The intelligent expansion of barge traffic on comprehensive lines is an important factor in reducing the costs of all commodities, and in lowering the cost of living.

THE HARM DONE BY HIGH BUILDINGS

They Depreciate the Value of Neighboring Buildings—A New Yorker's Advice to the City of Denver

PRESIDENT PURDY of the Board of Tax Commissioners of the City of New York has had his attention directed strongly, during the last few years, to the evil effect produced by the failure to regulate the height and bulk of buildings. He was so much impressed by the beauty of the City of Denver that he expressed the hope to the Chamber of Commerce of that city recently, that while there is yet time, they would obtain the power and adopt suitable regulations for restricting the height and bulk of buildings, so that the beauty of Denver would be preserved unimpaired and, more important still, may conserve the value of the buildings that now exist and enhance the economic value of the land of the City of Denver.

While Commissioner Purdy was in attendance at the National Conference on Taxation, at Denver, he was invited to address the members of the Denver Chamber of Commerce and, in the course of his remarks, he further said:

High Buildings Dim Neighbors' Light.

"In my official capacity during the last eight years I have probably examined in the neighborhood of fifty thousand applications for the reduction of the assessed value of real estate. In a surprisingly large number of cases these applications have been based upon a depreciation in value caused by the erection of neighboring buildings which have cut off light and air and even impaired facilities of access. These conditions led to the appointment by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of a committee to consider the subject of regulation.

"The committee appointed a commission, of which I was a member. The commission after nine months' work recommended amendments to the New York Charter, which will confer power upon the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to divide the city into districts and to impose suitable regulations upon height and bulk of buildings within each district; also to divide the city into districts and to prescribe that no building hereafter erected shall be erected within certain districts for specified uses regarded by the Board as detrimental to that district. The legislation proposed by the commission was enacted by the Legislature of 1914, and a new commission has been appointed by the Board of Estimate to advise them concerning the proper regulations.

"You may think that there is yet ample time and that Denver stands in no need of such regulation. May I suggest to you that the time to impose your regulations is in advance of their apparent need? When once you need them it is too late; you have permitted the erection of unsuitable buildings which will cause loss and damage, and which, by reason of the stimulation of land values in certain sections will prevent the adoption of suitable regulations in those sections for a long time to come.

Stealing Light and Air.

"The general rule which I think must appeal to the sense of fairness of everyone is that no building should be permitted which would not be suitable as a type for all the buildings within a territory suitable for such buildings. This statement means that each man should depend upon his own lot for his own light and air and should not be allowed to steal his neighbors' light and air. It must be quite obvious that it would not be suitable to cover half a dozen of your blocks with buildings thirty stories high; there would not be adequate light, air and access for any of them. To a degree that is what we have done in New York.

"In downtown Manhattan we have erected so many high office buildings that on certain blocks the light and air is far from adequate, and the streets are not one-third sufficient to accommodate the traffic. Every city owes to its inhabitants protection from the ill-advised aggressions of their neighbors; a man should be able to build a dwelling or a business building with certainty that no building will be allowed in the future which will interfere with his enjoyment of all the light, air and access necessary and proper for the lot upon which his building is erected.

"The idea that intelligent self-interest is a sufficient safeguard without city regulation must be abandoned in the light of the New York experience. Many, many buildings have been erected in New York which do not pay and which caused damage to innocent neighbors as well as to their own owners.

"You, here, have a splendid opportunity; to a remarkable degree your houses are built of brick or stone and generally are low; they are most attractive. You can preserve the health and safety of this community by timely and appropriate regulation."

Book on Mechanics' Liens.

Among the recent publications which should prove of great value to all those interested in real estate, whether from the brokers' standpoint or that of the property owner, contractor, architect or builder, is a Treatise on the Law of Mechanics' Liens and General Contracting, with forms as appled to the State of New York. Thomas H. Ray, the author, has gone into the subject exhaustively, but the work is so compiled that ready reference can be had to any of the branches of the subject. Matthew Bender & Co., of Albany, N. Y., are the publishers.

The work is divided into two sections, the first dealing with the contracting feature and the other with the lien law. In the former the following subjects are dealt with in detail:—Formation of Contracts, Performance in General, Security for Performance, Time of Performance, Certificates and Arbitration, Extra Work and Specifications, Payment and Damages and Miscellaneous Provisions. As applied to the Mechanics' Lien Law, the subjects treated are Definitions and Construction, Acquisition of Lien, Proceedings to Perfect Lien, Operation and Effect of Lien, Liens on Public Improvements and Railroads, Enforcement of Liens, Pleading and Practice and Assignment of Liens and Contracts.

In order to facilitate the reader a table of cases cited throughout the book has been compiled for ready reference; also a table of statutes cited and quoted. The volume contains upwards of 700 pages, and is substantially bound.

—Public hearings will be held on Monday, Oct. 26, and Tuesday, Oct. 27, in Room 16, City Hall, at 10.30 a. m., in regard to the budget for 1915, as tentatively prepared, and the taxpayers of the city will be heard relative to appropriations to be made or included in the budget.

—In 1790, the first sidewalks in Manhattan were laid. They extended along Broadway, from Vesey to Murray street and were narrow pavements of brick.

WHAT THE CITY CAN DO FOR REAL ESTATE

Charles S. Brown Discusses Important Public Questions—The City's Surplus Property—Restrict Building Height and Get New Revenues

THE leading men in real estate affairs are taking a marked interest in municipal policies at the present time, in view of the many important questions pressing for solution. The expectation of a higher tax rate, the great need for economy in expenditures, the menace of excessively high buildings, and the over-inspection of buildings are only a few of the questions of first importance. Something must be done for the general welfare and to ease the load on real estate.

A representative of the Record and Guide was privileged to hear Mr. Charles S. Brown, of the firm of Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, give expression to his views on some of these matters at his office in Wall street this week. In substance Mr. Brown said:

"In bad times such as we are now experiencing everyone who is interested in the welfare of New York City, and its real estate, endeavors to think wherein conditions might be bettered, and among the thoughts occurring to me are:

"That it is essential that the business of the city be administered with the greatest economy. This is no new question, and it is very easy for one who is not in touch with the affairs of the various departments to make suggestions, but it seems to me that the city can work on general lines in the way of economy, the first of which should be to omit new improvements.

"This means that perhaps the city cannot progress as rapidly as we should like in general improvements, but as all of these have to be paid for by the taxpayers it would seem a fit time to cease activity in them, and only commence and work on those which would bring in a return to the city, when finished.

Should Abandoned Real Estate Be Sold?

"Another suggestion is that the city government should seriously consider what land it owns which is not now in use, or likely to be used in the near future, and then sell that land at auction some time this winter. In these times things can be sold if they are cheap enough. This is shown by the large demand for the city revenue bonds, which are on a 6 per cent. basis, and have sold very well.

"I think if the city offered its unused land at public sale, and did not protect the property, a sale could be made at what may be considered a very low price, but low prices exist nowadays, and the money received therefrom could earn interest, as against carrying vacant land and losing both the use of the principal or the interest return.

Why Should Real Estate Pay All?

"On account of the increasing expenses of the city, it is believed by most people that the taxes will be higher every year, and, in this connection, there seems to me no good reason why real estate should pay practically all of the taxes. Why should not other things besides real estate pay their share? This is an old subject and has been discussed a great deal, but in view of the fact of probably increasing taxes, as against decreasing returns from real estate, it seems that this would be a good time to bring this question to an issue.

The High Building Menace.

"Another thought concerning the welfare of the city is in regard to the height of buildings. I realize that this question is being discussed and that people are beginning to believe that high buildings are a menace to the city and the public. I think the city should be very active in trying to have a law enacted to limit the height of buildings, and then enforce this law most rigidly. In my opinion these very high buildings are a great damage to the city at large, and before long we will all realize the fact.

Unnecessary Violation Orders.

"As a help to real estate, I think the city departments should exercise greater care and judgment in orders given for improvements to property made necessary by defective buildings which do not comply with the various regulations. While I think everything within reason should be done to safeguard the life and health of the occupants of buildings, I am of the opinion that many orders now given could be omitted, or, in most cases, modified.

"Real estate, as everyone knows, is about as dull as it can be. It has been declining pretty steadily since 1907, and no one can tell what is going to happen to it. People who bought property at about that time and mortgaged it are realizing that a mortgage is a debt and not an asset, and are having a hard time trying to keep their property and to meet calls for payment on account of the principal.

"The thought which this brings out is that if New Yorkers had ten years ago established the custom of making semi-annual or annual payments on account of principal of mortgages, gradually decreasing the mortgages and increasing the interest of the owner in the fee of his property, this distress, which is so universal among borrowers, would not be felt, because the mortgages by this time would have been reduced down to such a level that comparatively few payments would have been called on them. It would seem that this custom of requiring payments on a mortgage, which is quite universal in the Western States, should be adopted here.

Lenders Should Have Patience.

"Along this line, it is my opinion that lenders should have great patience with the borrowers, and not force property to a sale, unless impossible to prevent it. I think lenders should take pains to discover what security their mortgage has, and should try, if the security is not good, to have it made good, but when a borrower is unable to pay and asks for time, I think, under these circumstances, it would help affairs very much if all lenders were lenient.

"It looks as though the high prices which were paid for New York real estate for a long time before 1907, and which some people thought were consistent with the growth of New York City, have fallen, and it would seem as though real estate, with other securities like stocks and bonds, will be on a very much lower level than it has been. When that lower level is reached and the prices paid show that owners can receive a good return from their property it is quite probable that there will be activity in buying and selling, but I do not look for much activity until prices of real estate have gone down to the level of other commodities, and until the financial affairs of the large lenders, such as savings banks, trust companies, life insurance companies and others, have settled down to a normal basis. When that has taken place it will be possible to borrow on real estate at attractive rates, and in the nature of things activity will be resumed."

New Building in West 44th Street.

THE 15 West 44th Street Company, Frank Slater, president, is erecting a twelve-story fireproof building on a plot 50x100 on the north side of West 44th street, 200 feet west of Fifth avenue, opposite Sherry's.

It will have the advantage of southern exposure and light on all four sides above the fourth floor, and will contain all the latest improvements in office building, such as hot water, vacuum, ventilation, gas for power, etc., making it adaptable to all fine trades or professions.

Geo. & Edward Blum, Architects.
15-17 WEST 44TH STREET.

The floor plan shows a minimum amount of columns, as in the whole building there are only three interior columns, an unusual feature in a building of this width, giving great elasticity as to possible sub-division.

The facade, of rich marble, terra cotta and brick, is of rich and simple design, whilst the color scheme is light. A number of offices have already been rented on plans.

Bronx Corporations.

James Ganley, County Clerk of Bronx County, has issued a warning to all people doing business in the Bronx under a corporate name, that they must register with the Bronx County Clerk. Many of those required to register have done so in New York County, but since the creation of Bronx County the law requires that the concerns must register there.

SPECIFIC CASES OF CITY EXTRAVAGANCE

The Real Estate Board Makes Helpful Suggestions to the Budget Committee—A General Protest Entered Against Salary Increases

TAXPAYERS in the past have been criticised on the score that their own objections to city expenditures have been in the nature of vague criticisms of alleged extravagances, rather than constructive suggestions that would be helpful to city officials.

On September 16 the Real Estate Board of New York forwarded a resolution to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment asking in general terms that in making up the 1915 budget the necessity for economy and retrenchment be given due weight. The Board of Estimate was asked to permit the Real Estate Board to aid in securing the object. The request was placed on the calendar and later referred to the Committee on Tax Budget, of which the Comptroller is chairman. On September 25 the Real Estate Board was notified that under the program adopted by the Committee on Tax Budget of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, a sub-committee has been appointed to hold daily and nightly hearings (except Saturday) in Room 710, Municipal Building, to consider the departmental estimates and that the meetings would be open to civic associations and the public.

Helpful Criticisms.

The Real Estate Board, carrying out the idea that it had in mind when the resolution was passed, has submitted at these daily hearings on the budget, criticisms and suggestions which are meant to be helpful to the Board of Estimate in any serious effort it may wish to make in holding the 1915 budget within reasonable limits, without hampering the necessary activities of the city.

The nature of the board's suggestions on the various departmental estimates can be inferred from the following excerpts:

County Clerks' Offices.

"In Richmond and Queens the real estate records are kept up by the County Clerk. In the other counties making up Greater New York the records are not in their charge.

"The work in a County Clerk's office is perfunctory and routine, and with the exception of the administrative head, requires no special ability. There is no work in such offices that could not be done competently by any ordinary commercial clerk after the short period required to gain local experience. These offices are closed as a rule at two o'clock and at twelve o'clock on Saturdays. They are protected by civil service, have certainty of employment, prospective pensions, liberal vacations, holidays and easy and congenial employment. By taking the required civil service examinations there is constant prospect of advancement. The hours are so short that frequently employees of this character engage in other occupations for which they have abundant leisure.

"The County Clerk of Queens County asks for 94 incumbents with a total salary expense of $142,770. Last year he had 76 employes and his expense for salaries was $120,030. In his office there are ten clerks receiving $2,000 and upwards per year. One clerk at $4,500, two at $3,000, two at $2,500.

"It should be incumbent upon the County Clerk in this present state of the city's finances to show why these men receive higher salaries than are received by clerks doing equally important work in commercial houses in the Borough of Queens.

"It should also be incumbent upon him to show why his clerks should receive more than the clerks in the County Clerk's office in the Borough of Richmond, who, although fewer in number, do exactly similar work.

"In the Borough of Richmond only one clerk, the deputy County Clerk, receives over $1,800 yearly. Careful investigation in the Borough of Queens shows the average clerk receiving from $800 to $1,200 per year, and only in special instances when exceptional ability is required are they paid $1,500 or $1,800 a year. The average wages in Queens of stenographers is $15 per week. The County Clerk asks for $1,350 a year for his stenographer, an increase of $150 over last year.

High Salaries.

"The statements made above apply with equal force to the request of the County Clerk of New York County who asks for $199,628 as against $198,865 for 1914. He has a Deputy County Clerk at $6,000 a year, a second deputy at $4,000, a third deputy at $2,500, a counsel at $5,000, a secretary at $3,000, and a number of general clerks from $2,500 down to $2,000.

"In New York County, Kings and the Bronx there is a Register's office, and in New York and Kings, Commissioners of Records who largely relieve the County Clerk.

"If the methods in vogue in the Comptroller's office and many other city departments whereby employees are kept steadily at work from 9 to 5 were applied to County offices there could easily be a reduction of 30 per cent. in the number of employees.

"The County Clerk in the Bronx asks for $76,080 for salaries as against $66,580 in 1914. He also has a large number of clerks receiving $2,000 and upwards.

"All County Clerks except the County Clerk of Richmond ask for a counsel. This must be purely honorary office and the salaries paid a clear waste of public money. The County Clerk should be competent to perform the duties of his office without outside advice when it is remembered that he receives from $5,000 a year in Richmond where he has no counsel, to $15,000 a year in Manhattan.

"The Clerk of Richmond asks for $26,225 as against $23,035 and without doubt bases his demand for increases of salaries not on the ground that his men are receiving too little, but that they are not paid in proportion to clerks in the other counties of the city.

"The Real Estate Board would like to call the attention of the Budget Committee to the salaries paid employees doing similar work in the other County Clerk's offices throughout the State or throughout the country. It has been unfortunate that salaries of city employees in Greater New York have been based not upon the value of such services but upon a false idea of ability of the city to pay.

"The County Clerk of Kings asks for $107,067.55 as against $106,243.75 allowed in 1914. Here again we find 16 clerks receiving $2,000 and over, and counsel at $3,500.

"The Budget Committee upon whom the serious responsibility rests of preventing a calamitous increase in the tax rate should consider very carefully these applications of the County Clerks and should make these offices effective working parts of the great machine of city government rather than quasi-elemosynary institutions for the relief of political friends of their administrative heads."

The Courts.

In regard to the courts, the brief of the Real Estate Board says:

"Chapter 490 of the laws of 1900 should be so amended as to take from the Justices of the Supreme Court the power to fix salaries and create positions. These powers should be entirely in the province of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

"A patrolman who is practically always on duty, frequently at the risk of his life, receives $1,400 after several years of probation. In contrast to this a court attendant working five days a week, with practically three months' vacation in the summer, receives $1,800.

"The amount asked for the First Judicial Department is $1,052,400. We desire to call your attention to the allowance for official referees, for which we believe there is no warrant, certainly no justification. This amounts to $46,000 and is in the nature of a pension paid superannuated judges. We also call your attention to the number of clerks receiving more than $2,000 a year, and to the obsolete and unnecessary offices of crier and assistant crier. The duties of these two would be performed easily by the presiding judge.

"The foregoing objections apply with equal force to the appropriation requested for the Supreme Court, 2nd Judicial Department.

"The salaries paid the employes in the various Supreme Court libraries are also clearly excessive and, we believe, beyond those paid in similar libraries and in other parts of the State. The Trustees of the Law Library in Brooklyn ask for $4,200 for a Librarian, and $2,500 for an assistant Librarian. We call your attention to the salary paid the Supervisor of Branches of the New York Public Library, $1,720.

Street Cleaning Department.

"The Commissioner of Street Cleaning asks for salary increases amounting to $247,372.12, and for an amount for new activities of $96,900, and for the extension of present activities $158,766.90.

"It seems unnecessary, in the present condition of the city's finances, and of the community generally, to urge the Budget Committee not to grant any of the increases asked for. This is no time to make new experiments or to try new methods, and certainly no time to increase salaries. The drivers, for whom the Commissioner asks an increase, receive $17.30 plus for every week in the year, eight hours a day work, summer vacation and a prospective pension. The ordinary truck driver in New York City would be glad to change places with them. The city now pays the District Superintendents and Foremen more than is paid for similar work by other large employers of labor. The men are not over-worked, and the cost of the uniform is not more than the cost of ordinary working clothes.

Law Department.

"The sum asked for by the Law Department is very large, but it is impossible in the limited time at our disposal for this hearing to analyze the work accomplished during the past year and the salaries paid, for the reason that the required estimates are not yet available

"Our general criticism, however, is again applicable. There is a tendency in all departments to pay more for services than is paid for similar service in commercial life, and more than is paid for similar service in other communities.

"The fact that New York is a great city is often given as an excuse for great expenditures, but the character of the work done is the same as in smaller communities, and while the volume of work is greater there are more people to do it, so that such an argument cannot apply.

NEWARK, BUSIEST CITY IN NEW JERSEY

Wonderful Increase in Manufactories During Recent Years—City Is in Centre of Nest of Thriving Communities

NEWARK, ranking fourteenth in population and eleventh in manufactures in the United States, with 252 distinct lines of industry, is being heralded as the manufacturing center of New Jersey. The forward increase in manufactures within recent years is indicated by the increase in the capital of manufacturers, which has increased from $103,191,000 in 1900 to $154,233,000 in 1912, the value of finished products having increased from $126,954,000 to $202,512,000, advances of 78 per cent. and 52 per cent. respectively. Newark's remarkable expansion is best shown by the rise in tax valuations between 1900 and 1912 from $148,834,000 to $383,864,000, an increase of 158 per cent. and by the comparative resources within the same period of time of the national bank and trust companies which grew from $29,322,000 to $121,188,000, an increase of 313 per cent. The resources of trust companies, building and loan institutions, savings banks, and life and fire insurance companies also show large advances.

Urban Newark has a population of about 400,000, suburban Newark about 250,000, drawn from Elizabeth, the Oranges, Montclair, Caldwell, Belleville, Nutley and a number of other towns within accessibility to the larger city. Most of these people do their shopping at the junction of Broad and Market streets, where all trolley lines and railroads converge. From this point the various classes of businesses radiate. Traffic is heaviest in the west side of Broad street and the north side of Market street, beginning with L. Bamberger & Company's department store property in Market street and extending along Broad street to the big department store of Hahne & Company at West Park place. Between these two points are located leading retail businesses, taking equal rank with many similar ones in New York City. The east side of Broad street and Market street north, is occupied principally by the leading financial institutions, including the banks and insurance companies. In this district are also to be found the hotels, theatres and restaurants comprising the amusement center.

Rentals in this district have doubled in the last seven or eight years, according to local agents. There is so much congestion at various points in this section that the same conditions have resulted which exist in many parts of New York City. With the new $5,500,000 terminal opposite Military Park, described in detail in the Record and Guide of July 25, the city authorities hope to relieve this congestion in some measure by providing a new terminal.

The adjacent streets, such as Clinton, Academy and Cedar and others running east and west from Broad street, have greatly appreciated in value on account of their proximity to these important thoroughfares.

"Rentals in the central district run from $500 to $600 net, a front foot," said Abe Feist, of Feist & Feist, "and at this time there are no stores to be obtained until after the expiration of existing leases. This rental value is created largely by reason of the enormous pedestrian traffic, with purchasing power, which passes along the thoroughfares. The entire length of Broad street considered to be about four miles, has a width of 132 feet. It has recently been repaved with wooden blocks and as a result is handling a greater vehicular traffic, principally in automobiles."

In discussing the centrally located section of Newark, Louis Schlesinger said: "Up to a quarter of a century ago the advance in Newark real estate values was steady but slow. Within the last twenty-five years, however, there has been a rapid and significant increase, particularly in the central or business section where the financial and high grade commercial establishments are located. In Newark, however, in contrast to other cities where these districts change, such sections seem to be permanently fixed for many years to come.

"Broad and Market streets and the immediate vicinity of the Four Corners still offer an unusual field for investment. That section of Market street west of Broad street and that section of Broad street north from Central avenue and south to Hill street appeals especially to such a class of buyers.

"Newark's real estate values have been created from a natural growth of the city and not as a result of real estate booms. As a result Newark has not had a real estate slump because its values have not been inflated. Consequently and more particularly because of the promise of the future the real estate market continues to be active and in it the most pessimistic of observers cannot see anything that indicates either a falling off in the volume of the business or a depression of prices."

Newark's great claim to distinction, however, among Atlantic seaboard cities lies in its industrial concerns. Here is to be found one of the largest of the jewelry manufacturing centers, also the makers of a large variety and fine grade of leather for shoes, carriages and upholstering, and chemicals, varnishes, lacquers, paints, cutlery and edged tools. Industrial concerns are to be found in nearly every part of Newark, although they are principally located in the eastern and southern sections of the city. There continues to be a substantial demand for factory sites and a number of lots have sold in the last six months to be utilized for the construction of ten new factories.

No particular new kind of manufacture is destined to be introduced, but typical of Newark's industrial development, the new additions consist of varied and diversified elements. Mr. Feist outlined the many advantages which make Newark desirable as a manufacturing center. Summed up they are, no labor troubles, reasonable taxation, an abundance of all kinds of labor, accessibility of factories to homes of laborers and accessibility to New York for those firms doing a metropolitan business, five railroads, reasonable insurance rates on account of the efficiency of the Fire Department, which has high water pressure, and ability to get power from the Public Service Corporation at reasonable rates.

Some big work is coming out in Manhattan this fall, and, notwithstanding all the talk about tight money, some people seem able to borrow all they need.

Long Island real estate operators report a very satisfactory state of business affairs. Sales and collections exceed expectations. The suburbs usually lead off when a revival is on the way.

Renting agents report a larger number of changes among apartment house dwellers than last October, and that the cheaper apartments are getting the preference. Not an unusual development.

No deeper waterways for New York this year. The Hudson River shoals, the East River reefs and the rocks in Bronx Kills must remain to obstruct navigation until more influential cities get their improvements. New York City does not seem to be popular with Congress.

Those money lending institutions upon which real estate operators and investors depend for building loans and permanent mortgages should not be over-conservative at a time when a little business courage is all that is needed to drive away dismal days. Courage is the one thing lacking in New York business circles today.

An old habit of Brooklyn brokers is to keep back reports of sales until they have a bunch to give out. This prevents market observers from making as close an estimate of current business in Brooklyn real estate as is possible in Manhattan and the Bronx, where it is the custom to report individual sales as soon as they are made. But, taking the Brooklyn reports as they have come in for a considerable period, it is apparent that there is a market there for low-priced houses, especially small tenements that bring their owners an income to help pay off the mortgage and the taxes.

Broadway Between 34th and 42d Streets.

One of the very interesting announcements of building operations made during the week concerned a twenty-story office building which is to be erected on Broadway between Herald and Times Squares. This part of Broadway is slowly making an advance. Its development has been delayed partly because of the lack of enterprise on the part of the holders of certain large blocks of property and partly because it contained a number of old hotels, which are too valuable to "scrap," but are not modern enough to contribute to the importance of the thoroughfare. What this part of Broadway needs is new buildings devoted to substantial business purposes. A large department store would help it more than anything else. If, for instance, Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, had, as was once rumored, built a store on the site of the Metropolitan Opera House, it would have been of enormous benefit to property interests on both Broadway and Seventh avenue. But that was not to be. The Metropolitan Opera House has decided to remain where it is. As soon as good times return, it is to be embellished with a new front, which will add to the architectural attractiveness of the neighborhood. As long as it remains where it is this part of Broadway will be occupied primarily by places of amusement and restaurants, but little by little some of the corners will be improved with office buildings.

This is happening to the corner of 37th street, and in the course of time it will happen to other corners as well. The neighborhood will be exceptionally available as a site for office buildings. The triangle bounded by 33rd street, Seventh avenue and Broadway, with the apex at 42d street and Broadway, will be better served with means of communication with all parts of the metropolitan district than any other one neighborhood. It will have the benefit of the express stations on both the Brooklyn and the Interboro subways. It will be served by the Belmont tunnel to Long Island, by the tunnels to New Jersey, and by the Long Island railroad system. The only important instruments of transit with which it will not be brought into close contact are the trunk line railroads terminating at the Grand Central Station, and this defect will be measurably cured as soon as the New Jersey trolley company builds its extension to 42d street and Park avenue. Thus, Broadway between 34th and 42d streets will be extraordinarily accessible and will more than ever be available for any kind of business improvements which can afford to pay the rent.

Future of Fifth Avenue.

More interesting and important than the Broadway improvement referred to above is the announcement that Arnold, Constable & Co. have leased the large plot owned by F. W. Vanderbilt at 40th street and Fifth avenue. There is nothing surprising in the announcement, because it has been known for a long time that Arnold, Constable & Co. had decided to move, and that it would be difficult for them to find any other parcel of real estate so well adapted to the needs of a high-class dry-goods store as the Vanderbilt property. The firm might have tried to find a cheaper site on Madison avenue, but such a step would have been attended with grave risks. It has secured a large plot with an abundant frontage on Fifth avenue and with an outlet in two streets in the very best part of the avenue, and it should be able in such an advantageous location to repair some of the losses which it has incurred as a consequence of having remained too long in a neighborhood which was badly adapted to the needs of a high-class dry-goods store.

Arnold, Constable & Co. are one of the last important firms to remove from the district south of 23d street. Its action adds the completing touch to a process which began in the spring of 1901, with the announcement of the removal of Tiffany & Co. Those firms which moved most promptly and secured their sites most cheaply have profited considerably from the change of base, while those firms which delayed or attempted to stem the tide, have suffered even more severely. At any rate, the movement of the better class of retail stores from south of 23d street to north of 34th street, is now over, because they have all removed. There is no reason to suppose that this branch of the retail trade will not remain where it is for an indefinitely prolonged period. It will expand partly along the line of Fifth avenue as far north as 59th street, partly on Madison avenue and partly on 57th street. It is an interesting fact that this part of Fifth avenue on which such an enormous retail business is transacted has been almost entirely neglected by the new subway system. The Broadway subway will cross Fifth avenue at 23d street, but 23d street is no longer in the retail district, and in any event the intersection will be served, not by an express, but by a local station. Apart from this and one other intersection Fifth avenue will not be directly benefited. While the neighborhood of 34th street receives some assistance from the express station in and near Greeley Square, this assistance will diminish the further north one travels. The best street intersecting between 34th and 50th streets, will be divided from any subway by two or three long blocks. Still farther north the avenue is again intersected by the Broadway-Seventh avenue subway at 59th street, a fact which will contribute to the business development of the upper end of the thoroughfare.

On the whole, no part of central Manhattan will be as inaccessible from the outlying boroughs as the avenue which contains the best retail shops. Of course, the reason is that the customers of these shops use carriages and motor cars to a very considerable extent, and doubtless Fifth avenue has been preferred largely because it was devoid of the trolley noises and the subway crowds. Nevertheless the absence of a Fifth avenue subway will constitute in the long run a severe drawback to the business of Fifth avenue, and after the new system is in operation a vigorous demand will probably be made for the construction of a Fifth avenue subway. But such a subway, unless it can be built as a feeder to some existing route, is an improbability. No additional trunk lines through Manhattan will be needed or can be afforded for many years—not until the new system has begun to pay its fixed charges. The city may build a few additional lines into neglected parts of the outlying boroughs, which will have the effect of opening up new territory for settlement, but it certainly cannot afford during many years to invest any more money in Manhattan rapid transit.

Land Value Maps for 1915.

The Record and Guide to-day sends to all its subscribers as a supplement to the paper a copy of the Land Value maps prepared by the Department of Taxes and Assessments for 1915. Three years ago the Record and Guide made an arrangement with the Tax Department for the publication of these maps primarily for the benefit of the real estate owners of the city who are subscribers to this paper; secondly, as a public service to the City of New York. The Tax Department desired to secure for this publication the greatest possible publicity, but was hampered by its inability to advertise the maps. These maps show the front foot values fixed by the Deputy Tax Commissioners for the assessment of 1915 on every side of every square throughout the city, and the assessed value per acre of large parcels of unplotted land. The units are not designed to be influenced by the proximity to the corner. The assessment of corner lots is determined with reference to the value of inside lots, and the special corner advantages which each corner lot enjoys. The units are not modified by the presence of rock on a vacant lot, but the assessment of a particular lot is reduced by an allowance for the cost of bringing the lot to grade.

In the front of the publication is an index page on which is displayed an outline map of the whole city, showing all the sections and wards, and beside that the number of the page on which the particular territory is exhibited. This year the maps have been materially improved by carrying the block numbers throughout East Bronx and certain wards in Queens. In other wards of Queens and of Richmond the plot numbers are set down so that it will be easier to locate particular blocks than it has been heretofore.

No method has yet been devised which is equal to this publication of land value units for the purpose of comparing assessments and preserving equality of assessment between parcels similarly situated. It must be admitted that it is an extraordinary achievement to present the people of New York a volume containing 142 maps, and showing the unit value of every parcel of land throughout a territory of 320 square miles.

The Appraisal of Property.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Your recent articles on page 422 of the issue of September 12 and page 465 of the issue of September 19 regarding the matter of appraisals have interested me greatly, and I am very glad to see that your progressive paper has taken the lead in bringing this matter to the attention of the public.

It has occurred to me however that in both of these articles too much emphasis is placed upon the records accumulated in real estate offices, and not sufficient upon the personal element of judgment involved in any careful valuation.

In reading some of these articles which have appeared in these issues, the novice might imagine that appraising has now been reduced to an exact science. One would imagine that these large offices have accumulated information regarding almost every parcel of real estate in the city from which they could sit down and figure out key lot values and from these, and an actual inspection of the building, arrive at an accurate valuation of the property today.

I venture to say that not one operator in a hundred would be seriously influenced when purchasing, by the valuation placed on the property by anyone of these so-called experts. The reason for this is not hard to find. Instead of being based on the future which is, after all, the only thing that interests the real estate speculator or investor, these values are entirely based upon "past performances." Real estate is subject to many influences, such for instance as the influences of fashion, the changing transit conditions, and the money market.

Take as an example of the matter of fashions, the change in the demand for private dwellings; whereas a few years ago these private houses were in great demand; today they are practically a drug on the market. As a result, appraisals which we based on past sales of such houses are entirely out of the way today. Where money was loaned on such appraisals, the result has been foreclosure and taking over of the property by the lender. All this might have been avoided if the lender had consulted an appraiser who had carefully considered the future, rather than the past.

So too, appraisals based on existing transit facilities, which do not take into consideration the new subway system now being built, will be entirely without foundation when that system is completed and in operation. Appraisals which are based on the money market, of say 5 per cent. return, are naturally out of joint when that money market becomes disturbed and goes to a 6 or 8 per cent. basis. Take a piece of property today which is leased for a term of years on a 4½ per cent. basis; it is naturally worth considerably less today on account of the tremendous increase in interest rates all over the world on account of the war.

An appraiser to be worthy of the name, must be—in addition to having command of all the records which fortunately are now at the command of practically every real estate man through the work of the Realty Records Company—a man with a natural aptitude for valuing real estate, plus actual selling experience covering a long term of years.

A proper appraisal must not only be based on an exact knowledge of the past, but a fairly accurate forecast as to future developments in the neighborhood and to be of real value, must be made by a man of sufficiently broad experience, to be in touch with the investment conditions and other markets than real estate. The best appraisal in my opinion is one such as the Real Estate Board of New York has advocated, which is, the joint opinion of three men arrived at after careful calculation and inspection. The only fault with these appraisals is that not sufficient emphasis is given to the future development of the section. In my opinion, no appraisal is of great value unless coupled with an opinion of the appraiser as to the future. I would gladly discuss several points in connection with this important subject, such as the importance of a careful inspection of the building by one, who is not only an expert in building construction, but also in the matter of the suitability of the particular improvements to the particular neighborhood. Time, however, does not permit. I sincerely trust that your series of articles will result in further talks by experts and will bring out this and other points. It seems to me that it is an excellent time to insist upon the distinction between the ordinary so-called appraiser and the real estate valuation of an expert. M. MORGENTHAU, JR.

"South Seventh Avenue."

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

This is a vital plea to you and the readers of your valuable paper. Isolated as we have been in what is known as the Greenwich Village section of the Borough of Manhattan, there has been since 1853 a cry for a Seventh avenue extension. For all these years we have suffered economically because of our narrow and short streets, beginning nowhere and ending nowhere. Though our house fronts were blest with city fronts (streets), they follow the lanes and the cow paths of one hundred years ago. Our further progress for development, as you can well see, has been throttled for the past decade.

All praise is due to the present city officials, who, like the good and true men they are, saw our plight, and when we presented our claims they became students of our needs, and with one single vote struck the shackles from us that had bound us so long, and gave us the Seventh avenue extension. Our welfare depends upon designating our unnumbered streets. Seventh avenue, with its subway, is going to be the greatest artery of communication in the city's history, interlinking the five boroughs as no other could. Now that this has been all accomplished to the good and benefit of all, we appeal through the Record and Guide (which has so faithfully in the past helped the cause of the extension of Seventh avenue) that this extension be called Seventh Avenue South, from West Eleventh street to Leonard street and West Broadway.

EDWIN ZIMMERMAN, M.D.

297 West Eleventh street.

[Copies of a petition are being circulated through the Greenwich section by the Greenwich Public Service Committee, of which Dr. Zimmerman is president, asking the Board of Estimate to designate the new avenue "Seventh avenue South," as aforesaid. This action has been taken because of certain influences having been brought to bear upon the members of the Board of Estimate to bestow the name of "Varick" upon the new avenue. All the accessible owners and business men in the remaining half of the former Varick street (the houses and buildings on the east side having been removed) have already signed the petition in favor of Seventh Avenue South. The petition is addressed to the Board of Estimate rather than to the Board of Aldermen, which ordinarily names new streets, because the aldermen have in this instance deferred to the Board of Estimate, which will have the honor of christening the new thoroughfare. Dr. Zimmerman, the writer of the foregoing letter, has been president of the neighborhood citizens' association for many years, and has devoted a great deal of his time and much of his means to furthering the movement for the extension of Seventh avenue and the liberation of the Greenwich section from obscurity. He wears two gold medals which his neighbors have given him.]

An Objective for Property Owners' Associations.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Many thanks for the generous amount of space which you have allowed Mr. Bolton and myself to occupy in your columns in our attempts to set forth the advantages of Randalls Island as the proper site for the municipal freight depot of Greater New York. The immense importance of a proper decision as to this location, for all commercial, real estate and workingmen's interests will, it is hoped, serve as an excuse for these epistles.

Permit me further to add only one more suggestion, namely, that the railroads which come to the western bank of the Hudson, and which are planning to cross the Huson at a point many miles north of New York and reach New England without touching the city, might be induced to unite in building a tunnel for common use under the Hudson, emerging at 155th street on the west side of the Harlem River, and then, after crossing the Harlem River by bridge, pass on to Randalls Island, along the north shore of the Harlem River to the union municipal freight yard, as indicated in our former articles.

If some such plan is not devised it is folly to suppose that Newark will not ask for a cheaper freight rate from the west than Queensboro, Bronx, Brooklyn and Manhattan—all of which require an additional time-and-money-consuming freight transport by water. Our only hope is that by providing direct tunnel connection under the Hudson to the union municipal freight yard the few extra miles of freight transfer may be overlooked and the freight charges remain the same.

May I add the earnest wish that the property owners' organizations which are now springing into such prominence in this city may take up this question and with the facilities at their command sift this question thoroughly and determine whether there is any better remedy than the one which Mr. Bolton and I have suggested for this great acknowledged evil; i. e., the utter lack of system and co-operation in the receipt and handling of freight. It seems to me that these property owners' associations could find no better text to impress upon individual property owners, outside of their organizations, the necessity for such property owners joining their associations, than this question of the proper receipt, handling and transportation of freight; the individual property owner is necessarily utterly unable to solve a problem involving, as it does, a thousand points of business, law and finance; but the question remains, demanding an answer from every merchant and manufacturer, as menacingly as did the Sphinx, at the gates of Thebes, in days of old.

Only by enrolling all property owners in these organizations and unions of organizations, can it be hoped to raise up such an aggregate of wisdom, experience and power as will enable the city to solve these questions with due observance of her own interests, even when the party on the other side is a railroad with a gross income of a million dollars per day, for every working day.

All power then to these property owners' organizations and unions of organizations and to their officers who should be working zealously, in season and out of season, by every legitimate means to make a daily increase of their membership. If those officers would display only one half of the energy and ingenuity displayed by the men who started our title companies, New York City property owners organizations, and unions of organizations would not recognize themselves in six months, and the consequent benefit to the city could not well be over-estimated.

CITY'S FINANCIAL STANDING.

Municipality Saved from Imminent Bankruptcy, but Piper Must Be Paid.

By HENRY H. KLEIN.

THE patriotism of Wall street is so pronounced that the details of the new $100,000,000 loan to the city of New York should be fully understood.

The City of New York has been spending $250,000,000 a year for routine administration, interest and redemption on the public debt, and so-called permanent improvements. In addition to this, the city has been borrowing an average of $100,000,000 a year on revenue notes in anticipation of taxes, incurring an added obligation of about $4,000,000 a year interest. The eighty million dollars due abroad were borrowed mainly for this purpose.

The City of New York has a permanent interest bearing debt of more than one billion dollars, the interest being about $44,000,000 a year. This sum is more than one-quarter of the total amount raised by taxation each year ($150,000,000), the remainder of the annual budget ($193,000,000 in 1914), being made up by income on public property. On the temporary yearly loan in anticipation of taxes, the city receives two per cent. and pays from four to six per cent. interest and the bankers use the money which remains in their vaults. Their profits on city deposits are sometimes abnormal.

The war in Europe has emphasized the utter helplessness of cities which depend on bankers for their financing. New York City for example, with an annual income of $193,000,000, is unable to meet its routine expenses without borrowing, and the city must now pay six per cent. on a temporary loan of $100,000,000. The failure of other large cities recently to dispose of their bonds proves that the aid of the bankers is no longer adequate.

New York City is in peril financially because of its excessive bonded debt, extravagant government and the inability of its taxpayers to pay taxes. The value of real estate has greatly depreciated in recent years and the city's borrowing margin is disappearing. The city's borrowing capacity is ten per cent. of the assessed value of its taxable property. It has more than $150,000,000 taxes and assessments uncollected and the plight of the taxpayer is plain when it is known that the city has been compelled to buy in its own tax liens in the past few years.

New York City was under no compulsion from the bankers to accept the rate of $5 035 per pound sterling and 20 cents a franc for the $80,000,000 foreign gold debt. The exchange premium means an addition of $2,800,000 to the interest cost of 4¼ per cent., or a total cost of $6,200,000 for the use of $80,000 000 for one year; equivalent to 7¾ per cent. The cost of the $80,000,000 for the second year at six per cent. is $4,800,000, or a total of $11,000,000 interest and premium for two years. In addition the city is paying $1,200,000 for the use of $20,000,000 for one year, or a total interest and premium of $12,200,000 in two years.

The City of New York was not justified in accepting an exorbitant exchange rate on $80,000,000, because not more than one-sixth of this debt was due and payable within thirty days. The balance falls due during the next three months. Since the excessive premium was accepted the exchange rate has fallen to nearly normal. The difference up to two per cent. between the rate accepted by the city and the rate that will actually be paid, goes to those interests who organized the syndicate to take up the new $100,000,000 loan. Their potential profit is $1,600,000, equivalent to two points in the tax rate.

The extravagant cost of the new loan must be met by taxation. The principal will be converted into fifteen-year instalment bonds or notes, instalment and interest being included in the annual budget. This means an addition of $10,000,000 a year to the budget after the full conversion of the loan which begins in 1918, after the retirement of the present city officials. The budgets for 1915, 1916 and 1917 will be increased from six to ten million dollars each unless corresponding cuts are made.

The budget for 1914 was $193,000,000 exclusive of corporate stock issues. The budget for 1918 will be at least $213,000,000 unless twenty million dollars are cut out of the present budget. This can be done only by wholesale dismissal of city employes or by a general reduction in salaries. The addition of twenty million dollars to the 1918 budget allows only $10,000,000 for new improvements after a dearth of improvements for four preceding years.

The tax rate for 1914 is from 1.81 to 1.91, according to boroughs. The tax rate for 1918 will be from 2.06 to 2.16 unless the budget is reduced to offset the increase. The constitutional limit of taxation in New York State is two per cent., exclusive of the debt service which in New York City is about $53,000,000 a year. The tax rate can rise to 2.60 including the debt service before the legal limit is reached. Before that time New York City will be bankrupt. The steady increase in the tax rate and in the city's annual expenses due to the new loan and the financing of new improvements out of the budget, will cause further depreciation in real estate values. The city's borrowing margin will disappear and bankers will be unwilling to lend money on yearly revenue notes except at exorbitant interest, when taxes are uncollectible. There is but one way that the city can be saved from financial exhaustion, and that is by the discovery of new revenue to relieve the burden on real estate. It is either confiscation of private property through excessive taxation, or new wealth to provide for the city's needs.

UNJUST WAR TAXES.

Advisory Council Opposes Taxes on Conveyances and Mortgages.

The Law and Legislative Committee of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, at its regular weekly meeting, thoroughly considered those provisions of the National War Tax bill which affect real estate. The committee was of the opinion that to condemn the bill in formal resolutions, or even to discuss the general proposition, as to whether an emergency tax measure is now necessary, would be entirely fruitless, in as much as many provisions of this bill are almost identical with those of the Stamp Tax of 1898.

The committee, however, has got in touch with the sub-committee of the Democratic Senate Finance Committee, which is now examining those provisions of the law that are of vital importance to property owners. It has suggested a change in two points of the bill, namely, the tax on conveyances and the tax on mortgages and assignments of real estate. As under the 1898 law, this bill levies a tax of one dollar per thousand on the consideration or value of the property conveyed.

Under the 1898 law this was held to mean that the amount of stamps was required to represent the entire value of the property, including the amount represented by mortgages, and that it was not to be measured by the amount of equity for interests conveyed. It needs no argument to show that this is not equitable, for all that is either conveyed or paid for is the equity over and above mortgage indebtedness.

The committee has suggested a change so that the amount of the tax will be measured by the consideration which actually passes between the parties, and the thing conveyed.

The second change suggested was relative to the tax on mortgages which is, in form, similar to the tax on mortgages in the 1898 law. The rate is fifteen cents per thousand on each one thousand dollars of mortgage, over and above the first one thousand dollars. The committee believes that, if there must be a tax on mortgages, that in addition to taxing mortgages when made, and first transfer or renewal thereon, it is improper to also tax other subsequent assignments or renewals, in as much as other taxes upon indebtedness fall upon the debtor. To require every mortgage which has once paid a tax to pay it again on each transfer or renewal seems to be increasing the burden upon the needy members of the community.

The committee feels that it is advisable for all property owners in New York to communicate with the Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee and the Senate proper, calling their attention to this injustice. Republicans will vote solidly against the entire bill. Simultaneously, the Advisory Council is endeavoring to have the real estate owners of other large cities co-operate in an attempt to get these amendments.

Historic Hempstead.

The southern half of Nassau County, Long Island, which is now undergoing steady growth in population as a suburban area of New York, is closely identified with the making of real estate laws for the entire commonwealth; for it was in Hempstead, in 1665, that the Duke of York caused to be drawn and promulgated the terms upon which lands within the colony of New York could be purchased and held by citizens. It was the first Colonial real estate law, the first assertion of property rights by the white man intent on conquering the colony from the Indians.

Colonial Governor Nicolls visited Hempstead about on June 11, 1666, and made a treaty with Tackapausha, chief sachem of the Indian tribe that inhabited Nassau County, by which the Indians agreed to submit to Colonial government by England and to recognize the "pale face's" rights to property in the territory. Numerous deeds are in existence whereby Indian tribes on Long Island deeded large tracts of land to white men. And the white real estate man has been busy ever since buying and selling acreage in Nassau County.

As New York City has grown from a Dutch stockade against Indian invasion to a mighty municipality constantly reaching out for residential area, the level or southern part of Nassau County has been brought within the zone of residential contact by the fact of adjacency and the annihilation of distance by electric train service.

The Duke of York began the first era of real estate values on Long Island by his edict at Hempstead in 1665; and the American real estate developer and builder have supplemented his work steadily ever since; and the end of growth of fee values in Nassau County is far distant if at all possible. The growth of the city of New York is making larger real estate values for the suburbs as it is making stronger values in the city proper.

On the North Shore.

General reports from the West indicate a decided improvement in business, and advanced reports of activity here in the East suggest a rapid return to conditions of a year ago. Real estate usually feels early the pinch of depressed business, and it is the last to get out from under pressure; but this year in spite of the war scare suburban transactions on the north shore of Long Island have gone ahead of the average of most lines of barter. Several operators who met on Tuesday last at the Hotel McAlpin to discuss ways and means of increasing the public interest in suburban sections of the North Shore agreed that, all things being considered, sales and collections from previous sales made, had held up beyond all expectations and that the autumn months were looked forward to with much promise.

"At Douglaston Park", said J. W. Doolittle, "there has been a slight reduction in the number of sales during the summer, as compared with last year, but the total figures have been relatively larger and the reduction of mortgage loans has been remarkable. Not in one single instance has a Douglaston Park purchaser failed to live up to his contract or failed to take title at the prescribed date."

The nearness of these North Shore communities such as Bayside, Little Neck, Douglaston and Great Neck, together with the recently installed electric service and the substantial character of the development, naturally are factors that hold the values and desirability of these properties up to a high standard. With an early return of business activity, there is every reason to expect these conditions to develop into what might be termed real estate prosperity, and this is not very far off, judging from recent movements in these matters.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

THAT the scare occasioned by the outbreak of the European war, which resulted in the tightening of purse strings of lenders on real estate is being replaced by a feeling of confidence was evident this week in a canvass of the offices of leading mortgage brokers, who discussed the market in its various phases. The consensus of opinion reflected an improvement in the condition of the money situation. While in several instances brokers were not particularly enthusiastic, in other cases betterment was reported along definite lines. It was found that the savings banks, which had been forced to let down on loans on account of the possibility that the depositors would withdraw funds, in order to avail themselves of the high rates obtainable in first-class bond investments, were coming back into the market, and that this fact alone was a significant development. Contrary to the general belief, the depositors were not drawing as heavily as expected and were content to have their savings deposited. There was also a tendency reported on the part of private investors to return to mortgages as a form of investment.

The life insurance companies, however, were obviously inactive because of the uncertainty of their European positions and also because they were of necessity compelled to be prepared for a possible borrowing from their policy holders in accordance with the terms of their policies. It was learned also that there is a tendency on the part of present owners of mortgages to be lenient in the matter of forcing payments and in the opinion of many brokers real estate owners have every reason to look at the future with hopefulness.

The selling and leasing branches of the market were not without interesting features and the improvement noted last week continued, stimulated by several important transactions. The desirability of Fifth avenue locations for high class retail establishments was again demonstrated by the taking over of the Frederick W. Vanderbilt property, at the corner of 40th street, by Arnold, Constable & Co., who have been located for about 44 years at Broadway and 18th street. Another important lease, which should have a beneficial effect upon the Union Square section, was closed. The deal involved the old Tiffany property, at the south corner of Union Square and 15th street, the E. I. Horsman Company, dealers in toys, being the lessees. The section has been gradually coming into its own since the exodus of several prominent concerns several

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 18 as against 15 last week and 17 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 7 as compared with 4 last week and 5 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 11 as compared with 11 last week and 12 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 136 as against 107 last week, 18 having stated considerations totaling $769,650. Mortgages recorded this week number 59, involving $1,187,663, as against 38 last week, $419,791.

From the Bronx, 8 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 11 last week and 7 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $369,966, compared with $324,464 last week, making a total since January 1 of $31,300,654. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $646,031, and the total from January 1, 1913, to October 4, 1913, was $41,156,827.

Reported Church Sale.

According to a current report, contracts are about to be signed for the sale of the new edifice of the old South Church at the southwest corner of Park avenue and 85th street, on plot 97.2x133.4, to the Church Extension Committee of the Presbytery of New York. If the deal goes through, it is likely that a merger of congregations will be effected between the sellers and the First Union Presbyterian Church of Lexington avenue and 86th street. The new home of the Old South Church, which was formerly situated at the southeast corner of Madison avenue and 38th street, was completed about two years ago from plans by Cram, Goodhue & Ferguson, and represents an investment of about $600,000. At the offices of the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, which is said to be negotiating the deal, nothing definite could be learned regarding the transaction.

Shuberts Re-Purchase Flats.

Lee and Jacob Shubert, represented by Edward Margolies, have re-purchased the six five-story flats, 5-15 West 63d street, on plot 150x100.5, opposite the Century Opera House, from the 63d Street Realty Co., James F. Meehan. The property has been held at $350,000.

Mr. Meehan acquired the property last April from the Shuberts in an exchange for the Cecil Spooner Theatre, which forms one of the group of community buildings which he erected at the Southern Boulevard and 161st street, in the Bronx. In the present transaction, the purchase involves only a majority of the stock in the 63d Street Co. and there will be no change of title.

Fifth Avenue Home Buyer.

Hubert F. Parsons, secretary of the F. W. Woolworth Co., has purchased through Edward J. Hogan, from Bing & Bing, the 5-story dwelling, 1071 Fifth avenue, on plot 30x127.8, with a 25-foot "L" to 88th street. Mr. Livingston acquired the property a few years ago from the Pennington estate for a stated consideration of $220,000. The city at that time assessed it at $275,000. The house is on the block to the north of the site belonging to the Trask estate, for which plans were recently filed calling for its improvement with a 12-story apartment house.

Lenox Clubs to Merge.

Mrs. Adeline Greenleaf has sold through the Payson McL. Merrill Co., her property on Yokum avenue and Cliffwood street, Lenox, Mass., consisting of about 125 acres, with a dwelling and numerous outbuildings. Over 100 acres of the property are under lease to the Lenox Golf and Tennis Club, of which William D. Sloane is president, and are improved with a clubhouse, a golf course and tennis courts. The purchaser is the Lenox Club, George W. Folsom, president, now situated in the village near the Curtis Hotel. The two clubs will be merged and the main dwelling, remodelled for club purposes.

Jeweler Buys Westchester Estate.

David Kraus, James M. Woods and Joseph P. Day sold for Earle C. Baker to John W. Charlton, a Fifth avenue jeweler, the country estate known as The Hobby, at North Salem, Westchester County. The property is located on the main highway between New York and Connecticut, and comprises 55 acres, with a 20-room mansion and various outbuildings, and was held at $80,000. In part payment the seller took 475 West 140th street, a 3-story dwelling on lot 18x99.11, opposite City College.

Washington Heights Block Sold.

The Heslock Realty Co., William E. Wheelock, president, sold through Sharp & Co., the Bolton apartments, occupying the block front on the west side of Amsterdam avenue, between 176th and 177th streets. The structures are six stories high, with elevators, and are on a plot fronting 200 feet on the avenue and 100 feet in each street. They are arranged for 120 families and have thirteen stores on the avenue front. They have been held at $450,000.

Heights-Long Island Trade.

John T. Schramme sold through Dubois & Taylor and Matthew Briggs, the five and six-story apartment house, "Leonia," at the southeast corner of St. Nicholas avenue and West 153d street, through to and taking in the southwest corner of St. Nicholas place. The buyer is the Northport Realty Corporation, which gave in part payment a 45-acre tract at Farmingdale, L. I.

Furniture Concern Buys Leasehold.

W. W. & T. M. Hall have sold to the Grand Rapids Furniture Co., the leasehold property, 18-20 East 50th street, on plot 56.2x100.5. The Messrs. AND MANAGEMENT OF ESTATES

UNITED REAL ESTATE OWNERS' ASSOCIATIONS have requested the Mayor and the Board of Estimate that adequate notice be given taxpayers of important matters to be taken up for consideration at the weekly board meetings. The organization contends that the publication of the calendar on Wednesday afternoon does not give a sufficient opportunity to make a proper study or investigation of the many resolutions which come before the Board on Fridays for adoption. The Legislative and Taxation Committee of the Real Estate Board is taking up departmental budgets filed each day and is making objections thereto wherever necessary.

The Auction Market.

Trustees of the Presbyterian Hospital took over this week the three tenements at 304 to 308 East 107th street, in foreclosure proceedings against V. Garofalo. Each house was bid in $10,000, the encumbrances aggregating $48,398.

For the coming week the principal offerings will include the St. Louis Hotel at 34 East 32nd street, which is to be sold on Tuesday at the stand of Joseph P. Day. It is a nine-story family apartment hotel containing fifty apartments of two rooms and bath.

Samuel J. Wagstaff has been appointed receiver by Justice Bartow S. Weeks for for the five-story residence of Otto P. On June 4 it was scheduled to be sold by Herbert A. Sherman, but a stay was obtained. Mr. Heinze is said to have paid $205,000 for the property ten years ago.

RENTING LOFTS WITH LIVE STEAM AND POWER

By WILLIAM J. SHORE

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

For Rent—Loft with live steam and power for manufacturing purposes: 8,000 square feet; rent reasonable. Apply engineer, on premises.

THE above advertisement appeared in one of the leading newspapers of the day and was inserted by one of the largest real estate firms in the city. This particular advertisement caught my attention because I have had business relations with this firm, which have enabled me to ascertain that they are losing money on property rented in just the above manner—"with live steam and power for manufacturing." And the probabilities are they will continue to lose money on this sort of proposition, because, while they are thoroughly conversant with the real estate problems involved, they are not at all familiar with the power question.

Four Classes of Tenants.

There are four classes into which tenants may be divided who use power for manufacturing purposes: First, those who obtain it directly from the central station. They do not concern us. Second, those who obtain it from the owner who buys it at wholesale rate from the central station and redistributes it at retail to tenants. There is no risk here, as power is accurately metered. Third, those who obtain it fro mthe owner, who has his own electric plant and furnishes electric power, and fourth, those who obtain power from the landlord who operates a steam engine and transmits power through belts and shafting.

My first advice to the owner who intends to furnish power and steam is to employ the services of a reputable consulting engineer; firstly to supervise the installation, operation and maintenance of his power equipment; and secondly, to advise him in the matter of drawing up his leases.

In regard to the first of these the average owner depends almost entirely upon the advice of the engineer who operates his plant and fires his boilers, and who is merely a high-class mechanic and by no means equipped with the general technical knowledge necessary to handle higher engineering questions. As for the second, he relies on his lawyer, who, no matter how well versed he be in his own profession, cannot be expected to have any acquaintance with engineering.

Tenant Specifies Horse Power.

In that class of buildings in which power is supplied direct to tenants from steam engines by means of belts and shafting, the tenant specifies the amount of H. P. he will require. A charge of fifty dollars per H. P. per annum is usually added to his rent for this service. It occasionally happens that the tenant under-rates his requirements. Sometimes he states his requirements in good faith, and they increase through an increase in business. When the owner receives a complaint that tenant is not receiving H. P. contracted for, he is in a quandary. It is impossible to ascertain with accuracy the exact amount of H. P. provided. To avoid an argument he is compelled to order his engineer to put on a larger belt. The tenant is now enabled to use twice as much power as formerly and pays no more for it. This is such a common occurrence that I run across instances of it constantly. The owner has no redress, because there is no method sufficiently exact to determine just how much power is used.

WILLIAM J. SHORE.

One case came to my attention where in one building a certain tenant was using twenty H. P. and paying for ten, and another twenty-five instead of fifteen, causing the engine to drop twenty-five per cent. in speed, thus not only putting the owner to direct monetary loss, but seriously inconveniencing other tenants.

In order to overcome this very frequent difficulty I would suggest a change of method in specifying power requirements in the lease, whereby the element of possible uncertainty would be completely obliterated. Tenant receiving power by means of a leather belt, which transmits it from the main line shaft to tenant's shaft. A leather belt will transmit a certain amount of power depending upon (a) thickness of belt, (b) width of belt, (c) diameter of driving pulley, (d) revolutions per minute of driving pulley.

Formula Fairly Accurate.

The following formula, derived from many experiments, is fairly accurate and available for ordinary purposes:

$$\text{H. P.} = \frac{w \times d \times n}{2000}$$

Where a belt is used 5-16-inch thick w = width of belt in inches, d = diameter of driving pulley in inches, and n = revolutions per minute.

Example: Assume a leather belt 5-16-inch thick and 5 inches in width, fairly tight about two pulleys, where diameter of driving pulley is 20 inches and revolutions per minute 200. Then

$$\text{H. P} = \frac{5 \times 20 \times 200}{2000} = 10, \text{ H. P. per inch}$$

$$\text{Width of belt} = \frac{10}{5} = 2$$

Now in a case where it is necessary to specify the delivery of say 16 H. P., the lease should be drawn up somewhat as follows: "Power will be furnished tenant's main line shaft by means of a leather belt not less that 3-16-inch thick and 8 inches wide from a pulley 20 inches in diameter operating at a speed of not less than 200 R. P. M." There should be no mention of any definite H. P. whatever. In this way no dispute can arise. If the customer's requirements are more than 16 H. P. the belt will slip, indicating that it is of insufficient width. A wider belt can be installed and tenant required to pay an additional charge for increased H. P. dependent upon the increase in inches of width of belt.

Note that the expression "steam power" is purposely omitted from this form of contract. In this way, should the owner deem it advisable to change over to electric drive he is free to do so.

Chance of Loss Minimized.

Tenants who receive power from an electric drive operated by owner I have called the third class. Here the chance of such loss as described above is minimized. The owner installs a complete electric plant, consisting of generator, switchboard and wiring. Each tenant is supplied with one motor of whatever H. P. is stated in his requirements. With the electric drive there is no chance for any tenant to use more than his rated amount of H. P., as there are automatic devices such as fuses and circuit breakers by means of which the power can be disconnected at a predetermined point. I should recommend circuit breakers in preference to fuses, as there is no renewal cost involved. They may be placed in an iron box and sealed to prevent damage or change of calibration. If the owner is able to supply this power on a kilowatt hour basis, he is still safer, as each tenant pays in exact proportion to the amount of power he consumes.

The charge of $50 per H. P. per annum is usually adopted by owners for power supplied from line shafts, because it is customary, and very few know how they arrive at this figure. But every owner should know how to figure what charge is adequate in his own case, as this rate of $50 does not always insure a profit in every case. Let us examine some of the considerations which are involved in the matter of making the proper price:

The cost of manufacturing power is divided into (1) fixed charges and (2) operating charges. The first are items of expense which continue whether power is generated or not. The second class are variable and within limits are proportional to the power developed.

The fixed charges are: (a) Interest on investment of power plant, consisting of engine, boilers, pumps, etc., usually computed at 6% per annum; (b) depreciation on plant, assuming that machinery will eventually have to be replaced, usually computed at 5% per annum; (c) 1 insurance, 2 cost of supervision, and 3 value of space occupied, if used for rental purposes, and the operation charges are (a) labor, (b) coal, (c) water, (d) oil, and (e) repairs and sundries.

Costs Vary Largely.

These costs vary largely, and it is difficult to give definite figures unless conditions are clearly known. However, in determining rates for H. P., there are still more factors to be taken into account than the fixed and operating charges. The class of goods manufactured and efficiency of power transmission system must also be reckoned with.

For example, let us consider two tenants who may be regarded as typical occupants of this class of buildings, and each requiring 10-H. P., (A) manufacturing pearl buttons, (B) manufacturing iron railings and fire-escapes. A's machinery will consist of one or two exhaust fans and a number of button machines, each using approximately ¼-H. P. B., has one or two punch presses and power shears. A has all his machines operating continuously from the time he opens shop until he shuts down, and uses 10-H. P. all the time. B, from the nature of his work, operates his machines intermittently and is only using 10-H. P. when all his machines are running; therefore he may average 10-H. P. for only one hour during the day. A uses 10-H. P. for ten hours, B uses 10-H. P. for one hour. It is evident that it costs more to supply A than B. Here the fixed charges are the same, but the operating charges are almost ten times as great in the one case as in the other.

Power in Transmission.

There is much to be said in regard to loss of power in transmission. A certain amount of power is necessarily consumed in operating shafting, pulleys and belts before power is delivered to tenants. This power is, to all intents and purposes, wasted, as it does no productive work and the loss must be distributed among all the consumers. It varies from 15% to 50% of the total power generated. A case came to my attention where the loss was as great as 75%. A 100-H. P. plant, generating 80-H. P., required 60-H. P. merely to drive the line shafting which transmitted power to tenants. Needless to say the owner was losing money on this proposition. Such a condition could have been avoided had a competent engineer been employed in the first instance. However, the condition existing, radical alterations are necessary to overcome it. But the expense undergone is often repaid in one year by the saving in cost of operation.

I do not think that the flat rate of $50 per H. P. per year is entirely safe. The rate should be variable, depending upon the nature of the industry in which tenant is employed. Some owners derive a profit at this rate, and some a loss, and very few of them know how to figure what power actually does cost. One owner who rented lofts with power in a building which he had received in trade, discovered that if he subtracted from the rent the cost of power at the rate of $50 per H. P. per year, the tenants would be obtaining space for nothing. Another owner was paying $3,000 per annum under contract for the operation of his plant, and in return received $2,400 per year from his tenants in payment for power.

Continuous Power.

Few plants are able to supply power continuously—a belt may break, an engine cylinder may have to be rebored, or any one of a number of things may occur to interfere with steady operation. Owners should remember this when drawing up leases and specify distinctly that the continuous supply of power is not guaranteed, and that in case of shutdown, allowance will be made to tenants based on length of interruption and in proportion to rate at which tenant was purchasing power and amount of H. P. supplied.

In addition to the supply of power, tenants frequently require the use of steam for heating purposes in connection with the manufacture of their products. This is the so-called "live steam," because supplied direct from the boilers. For this there is often no charge at all, and hardly ever an adequate one. In many cases the steam used in this manner exceeds in amount that used to run the engine. In such cases the lease should state at what pressure steam is to be supplied. By the use of the steam meter the quantity of steam used can be definitely measured. The rate of fifty cents per thousand pounds of steam is reasonable and still covers cost of production.

Keen Competition.

So many large manufacturing concerns have left New York City for the suburbs, that there is keen competition among the owners of loft buildings to obtain tenants. Hence many landlords have been compelled to take in tenants who required power, and as they know nothing of this new line of business, they have often discovered that they would have been better off had they left their lofts vacant.

THE UNSUCCESSFUL BUILDING

Whose Fault Is It?—Too Often It Is the Owner's, Because He Has Not Relied More Upon His Architect

WHEN a building fails to accomplish in full measure what was expected of it, whose fault is it? There are various reasons why a building may prove unsuccessful, but architects say that it is to the lack of perception of the architect's function by the man in the street, the real estate operator and the average investor that much of the misconstruction in New York is due.

"There may be buildings quite commonplace in appearance with a successful plan," remarked Electus D. Litchfield, "but a really successful building in any particular is hardly possible with an unsuccessful plan.

"For that reason the study of plan has become the great study of the modern architect. There are some who go so far as to say, 'Study the plan until it is perfectly adequate in all particulars, and your elevations will take care of themselves.' Whether that is altogether true or not, the really competent man of today does not think of working up his elevations until he has at least subconsciously determined all of the main elements of his plan.

"With the study of plan as the great thing, it follows naturally that simplicity is the one thing above all others sought—simplicity and directness—and it is the habit of this search inculcated from the outset in the training of the architect which sets him head and shoulders ahead of the engineer, in the study and solution of great and complicated building operations. I speak advisedly—the training of the engineer is in the line of detail, the solution of the detailed problems of construction, not the elimination, reduction and simplification of the problems themselves.

Planning a Factory Building.

"For this reason great manufacturing corporations do well to consult their architect, with or in advance of their engineers, when they contemplate enlargement or the erection of new factories or manufacturing plants. How many factories have we seen where the complication of the general plan or the disposition of the various units of the plant was such as to multiply the costs of production. Most conspicuously is this true of manufacturing plants which have grown up little by little, and from time to time. Having originally no well thought out plan which permitted of logical and practical growth, so often are they an ugly and inefficient mess—a pile of bones, if you will—and not an orderly articulated skeleton.

"Not long ago my office had the opportunity of assisting in the rebuilding and enlargement of such a plant, devoted to the manufacture of hardware. As originally erected, the plant consisted of some twenty or thirty isolated buildings, the majority of them of two or more stories, and each of them devoted to one or more different processes to which the material was subjected in its translation from raw stock to the finished product.

Loft Buildings and Apartments.

"In the new plant there is but one long building down which the material journeys. The raw stock enters at one end and the boxes containing the finished product are placed in the freight cars at the other. At regular intervals along the main backbone building extend wings devoted to single processes, of varying size, as the requirements of the particular process demand. Each is capable of extension at the ends without in any way affecting the efficiency of the plant. Now the fundamental idea of this successful plan, eliminating, as it does, lost motion and double handling of materials, is essentially an architectural one. In his broad, general and eliminating view of a problem the architect is the ideal efficiency engineer, and when it comes to the details he can ably second the engineer himself in the solution of his more technical problems.

"Now, what is true of factory planning is equally or even more true of loft buildings and apartment houses. It is strange how backward the real estate operator has been to realize this. Any old draughtsman, or, rather, any young draughtsman, or any hack or cut-rate architect, who would accept less than the customary rates has been good enough for him. The saving of two or three per cent. in architect's fees has blinded him to a possible five or ten per cent. saving in the first cost of his building, and an increase in the net income of the building itself, or, what is even more important in the end, the continuance of that income.

"It is interesting to note that where apartment houses have been built, as along Park avenue, for an especially discriminating public, high-grade architects have been employed with advantage not only to the building, but to the operator and the investor.

Value-Making Factors.

"It is high time that those interested in buildings, for rental or for sale, be they apartments, lofts, or office buildings, recognize two facts: First, that the practical planning of a building, together with an appropriate and pleasing facade, determines in a great measure its real value, and, second, that it pays much better to decorate a building inside and out with brains rather than gold leaf.

"For too long have the operators been carried away with the idea that a lavish display of solid bronze and expensive marbles produces the most effective corridors, and that a wealth of ornament, be it in white marble or terra cotta, will enable them to obtain a pleasing and imposing facade. It is time that they realized that good planning, well studied proportions and a modicum of appropriate and carefully designed ornament are the elements which produce successful buildings. It is time that they appreciated the fact that these can be obtained only at the hands of an experienced and well-trained architect, and that an architect can, with the use of the most modest priced materials, obtain a building more appropriate and with more enduring charm than the untrained man with the highest priced product of the quarries and the mines.

The Advertisement Feature.

"But what about advertisement, you may say. A thing of beauty is a joy forever—yes, but be sure it is a thing of beauty. The test of time is severe, and what pleases for the instant is often meretricious and soon becomes abhorred. All is not gold that glitters, and a good set of white teeth is more beautiful than a set of gold ones, though the one may cost you nothing and the other run to three figures.

"One of the most interesting churches I know of is built of common brick, both inside and out, and with cypress, the least expensive of finishing woods. The reason it is so is because of the thought that was used in the treatment of materials.

Building Managers Meet.

Monthly meetings of the New York Building Manager's Association will be resumed on October 6, the first to be held at the Underwriters' Club, in Liberty street. Dinner will be served at seven o'clock, after which the meeting will be held. The speakers on this occasion will be Rudolph P. Miller, one-time Building Commissioner, and now engaged in revising the building code, and Abram I. Elkus, attorney for the Industrial Board.

Annual Meeting R. E. Board.

The annual meeting of the Real Estate Board will be held in the Board rooms, at 115 Broadway on Tuesday, October 15, at 3 p. m. Three governors are to be elected to fill vacancies caused by retirements.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration

Meter Housing the Latest.

NEW buildings being planned may introduce a novelty that should be appreciated by the owner or tenant. It is a clever device that provides for gas and electric meters in a new and advantageous way. Under the new arrangement, meters are set in the exterior wall of the house, face outward; when it is to be read by the public service company's employe, he has no occasion to come inside the house or make his presence known in any way: he reads the meter from the outside, and goes his way. The time-saving, trouble-saving features of this method are apparent, and are not counterbalanced by disadvantages. The cost is low—$6 to $10 for each meter so housed, if boxes are built in when the house is erected.

Meter men are not only an annoyance to the housewife, but, in the case of many timid women, are regarded as dangerous in providing impostors easy access to the house. The meter boxes do away entirely with these conditions, and at the same time save the basement space the meters would occupy and protect the meters against accident that might have troublesome results. The manufacturers,

Donley Bros., Cleveland, say that these advantages impress householders so strongly that installations are often made in houses already built—the owners being willing to incur extra trouble and some labor expense in order to do away with the nuisance which accompany meters placed in the basement.

The illustrations show the exterior of a gas meter housing and the interior of an electric meter box showing how the main feeder switch is protected against tampering.

Leadless Glaze.

ENGLISHMEN for some time have demanded "leadless glaze" when they purchase pottery for the reason that the leadless glaze does not poison the pottery workers. The majority of Americans have never heard of it and as a result do not insist upon it when buying chinaware. Dr. Alice Hamilton's exhaustive study for the Federal Bureau of Labor shows how serious a form of lead poisoning is contracted by workers in American potteries. All table and toilet ware, including bath tubs, sinks, and all pottery toiletroom fixtures is lead glazed. This glaze contains from 5 to 20 per cent. of unchanged and, therefore, poisonous white lead. In decorative ware the percentage is as high as 40 or 50 per cent. The dangers that arise and follow from dusty atmospheres, dusty floors or hands carelessly washed are conditions which call for immediate remedy if not radical changes in the manufacture of these articles.

Quick and Safe Window Exits.

OWNERS of all kinds of buildings will begin to feel this autumn and winter the activity of the various fire prevention, fire protection and insurance departments in the matter of more fire resistive windows, especially those leading to fire escapes, and of windows that afford an easier and hence a safer exit to emergency balconies, especially in commercial and industrial buildings. This is a matter which is to be aggressively followed up by those responsible for protecting life and property in this city and vicinity from now on.

When word went out to this effect managers, architects and contractors immediately wondered what the type of such a window would be, so the accompanying illustrations will have more than the ordinary interest. They show in architects' detail and in model form a window that has the approval of the National Board of Fire Underwriters and which embodies the ideas of the National Committee of Safety as to what constitutes a fire-resistive, easy and quick exit window. It was perfected by the S. H. Pomeroy Company, of 288 East 134th street.

There are two types of window. One has a fixed upper sash, with the sash equipped to close automatically under fire, and one in which both sashes lift and lower in closing automatically in case of fire. The other is a panic bolt casement, to be employed for opening onto fire-escapes.

Reports of committees investigating fire hazards for insurance or civic organizations have shown with remarkable unanimity that the great peril to workers in buildings is that fire escape and preventive effort in buildings of nearly all kinds has been made almost ineffective in time of emergency by competitive cheapness and indifferent maintenance. So when the Pomeroy interests undertook to perfect a window in accordance with the requirements of the National Board of Fire Underwriters Laboratories, they concentrated on automatic operation and no maintenance requirement.

The window shown is designed for openings not more than 5 feet wide or 9 feet high. It is equipped with wire glass, with an area not exceeding 720 square inches nor 48 inches in height or width. The automatic closing equipment is the same the company has had on the market for five years, but it has been made applicable to this window, which reduces the danger of trampling in panics to practically nothing.

According to a booklet being issued describing this window fire escape platforms frequently are placed a few inches below the outside of the window sill, and from two to three feet above the interior floor level. As compared with scrambling out over a window sill two or three feet higher than the floor, and through an opening never more than four feet high, that was, in addition, not intended to be a passageway for a person with plenty of time to climb in comfort, onto a platform that is reached often on hands and knees, it would seem as if a determined study to find a plan to utilize a casement window through which people can actually run had at last brought much needed results.

Quick Radiator Assembling.

WHEN trouble develops from radiators, tenants are likely to be impatient of any delay. To permit of quick assembling of segments, the Illinois Iron and Bolt Company, of Carpentersville, Illinois, is introducing a patented push-nipple device. This appliance may also be used in assembling boilers and heaters. In operation it is very simple, working on the straight leverage principle with power multiplied. It is powerful yet easy of application in any emergency or in making installations.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Arnold, Constable & Company Lease Frederick W. Vanderbilt Property, At 40th Street Corner, For Long Term—Rentals Approximate $5,000,000

ARNOLD, CONSTABLE & CO., for many years located at Broadway and 19th street, have at last obtained a Fifth avenue site in the Murray Hill section. The dry goods concern has been considering the removal of its business to this district for many years, and several sites have been under consideration at various times. During the last year, however, several important changes have been made in the immediate locality, notably the advent of Lord & Taylor, A. A. Vantine & Co. and the assembling of the plot for the Rogers Peet Co., which is now erecting a building at 41st street, with a frontage in 42d street. Other important, though smaller operations, have been or are now under way, including the alteration of the southwest corner of Fifth avenue and 39th street and the new building on the east side of the avenue opposite the Public Library.

T. Joseph Bartley, Architect.
PROPOSED ARNOLD, CONSTABLE & COMPANY ESTABLISHMENT.

Through the firm of Douglas L. Elliman & Company, the merchants acquire control of the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and 40th street, owned by Frederick W. Vanderbilt, for a term of twenty-one years with several renewals, the rental for the first term approximating about $5,000,000. No definite figures have been given out as to the probable cost of construction, though it is estimated that the operation will involve in the neighborhood of about $650,000.

The newest Fifth avenue department store as planned, will cover an irregular plot with frontages in three streets forming an "L" around the Union League Club House. The Fifth avenue front will be 112 feet, in East 40th street the building will extend to a depth of 175 feet, while in East 39th street there will be a frontage of 25 feet. Entrances will be provided on all three thoroughfares, the main entrance, however, being on Fifth avenue and the carriage entrance in East 40th street.

This structure will rise to a height of six stories, and will have a basement and sub-basement. Construction will be fireproof in the fullest meaning of the word. The building will be steel frame with floor construction of reinforced concrete and partitions of hollow terra cotta blocks. Brick and buff Indiana limestone are the materials which will be used in the construction of the facades. These facades are designed in a very simple manner, and their chief ornamentation will be found in the cornice, which is massive and well designed.

Much space in the facades has been devoted to windows, thus assuring the best of natural light. The light from the south will be permanently protected by the erection of a one-story structure on a 30-foot plot on Fifth avenue. While this one-story building will harmonize with the main building in design it will not be used by the company, but will probably be leased independently. Its main function is to provide a permanent light court, 30 feet in width, above the first story of the store building.

T. Joseph Bartley, architect, 15 Broad street, Manhattan, has prepared the plans and specifications for the project, and he will have direct supervision of the construction and all materials used.

Niemann & Luth, 31 West 42d street, have received the general contract for the erection of the building, and it is proposed to start work of active construction immediately. Test borings have already been made, and the work of demolishing the old building now on the site will be started in a few days.

As a department store, the proposed structure will compare favorably with any of those recently erected in the city, although not so large as some. The plans provide for the installation of the most modern conveniences and appliances which mean so much to employees and patrons. Their comfort will be assured in the rest and writing rooms, lavatories, etc., which will be provided for their use.

Particular attention has been given in the planning of this building to protection from the fire hazard. Wide aisles, commodious stairways and elevators, are designed to prevent a congestion of traffic within the building should a panic arise at any time. A smoke-proof fire tower and the most up-to-date mechanical fire protective and fire-fighting equipment, such as automatic sprinkler, standpipe, and alarm systems, will be installed.

A private high pressure power plant, which will provide heat for the building and electricity for lighting, elevator systems, ventilating, etc., and compressed air for sprinkler and cash carrier systems, will be included in this scheme. The plant will consist of a battery of boilers with a capacity of approximately 500 horse-power. Corliss engines, with direct connected generators, will be installed to provide electric energy. The building will be heated by exhaust steam from the boiler plant in a direct indirect system.

Arnold, Constable & Company was founded in 1827 by Aaron Arnold and James Hearn, under the firm name of Arnold & Hearn; at a later date Mr. Hearn retired from the business and was succeeded by James M. Constable. Later were admitted to the firm in order, Richard Arnold, Hicks Arnold, Frederick H. Constable and Edwin H. Weatherbee. The firm during all these years remained a private co-partnership under the name of Arnold, Constable & Company. Recently the firm was incorporated under the Laws of the State of New York with Hicks A. Weatherbee as president, being the great-grandson of the founder and grand-son of James M. Constable.

METAL LATH PARTITION.

Stood Up Under a Severe Fire and Water Test.

The official report of a fire and water test made at the Columbia University Fire Testing Station upon a fireproof partition installed by the Associated Metal Lath Manufacturers has been issued in pamphlet form by Professor Macgregor, who conducted the test. The data developed indicates that the construction may be classified as affording full protection. There was a large attendance of engineers, contractors, business agents and builders of New York and other cities, when the test was made, including H. B. McMaster, acting as commissioner for the Associated Metal Lath Manufacturers; R. J. Cullen, of the New York State Industrial Board; D. M. Buck, of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company of Pittsburgh; W. L. Cauldwell, of the Berger Manufacturing Co.; Professor Woolson, of the Board of Fire Underwriters; S. G. Webb, of the Gypsum Industries Association; L. R. Ferguson, of the Association of Portland Cement Manufacturers; Harold D. Hynds, of the Atlas Portland Cement Co.; L. I. Neale and John W. Owen, of J. B. King & Co.; A. R. McKenzie, of the U. S. Gypsum Co.; J. P. Whiskeman; Professor Perrine, of Columbia; Professor Nelson, from the Worcester Polytechnic Institute; F. P. Kafka, of the Fireproof Products Co., and many others.

Purpose of the Test.

The partition was erected in test house No. 2, which is designed exclusively for partition tests. It is the standard size required in the proposed rules of the Industrial Board. Four different types of expanded metal lath were used. The plaster was applied as a scratch, three inside and three outside coats. The resultant total thickness of the wall was two and one-half inches.

The purpose of the test was to determine the effect produced by subjecting the partition to heat and water by first gradually raising the temperature of the test chamber to 1700 deg. F. in one-half hour and maintaining an average temperature of approximately 1700 deg. F. for two and one-half hours, making the total fire test three hours; and second, at the end of this period applying a stream of cold water at hydrant pressure, which at this location varies from 25 to 30 pounds through a 1⅛-inch nozzle for two and one-half minutes.

Results of Test.

Four minutes after the start, hair cracks along the two central channel studs and also two diagonal cracks in the lower back corner of the wall developed.

At the end of ten minutes, cracks had appeared along eight channel studs, and two diagonal cracks were noticed in the front lower corner of the partition. All cracks were emitting steam freely, which was formed by the moisture in the wall.

Additional cracks along the studs and also diagonal cracks at the corners, both top and bottom, developed as the test progressed.

Stood the Test Well.

On the inside the wall appeared to be in perfect condition, and no cracks were noted during the first hour and one-half. At the end of this time four cracks appeared in the lower front corner of the wall. They averaged about two feet in length. Nothing further was noted until two hours and forty minutes of firing had passed when the inner surface of wall became crazed with innumerable hair cracks extending in all directions.

The application of water washed away a goodly portion of the finish coat and also of the second inside coat in patches over a total area of about sixteen square feet. No metal whatever was exposed.

No fire, smoke or water came through the partition and after it had dried out it was firm and solid and gave a good ring when struck with a hammer.

Competition on Fireplace Heater Design

The American Gas Institute and the National Commercial Gas Association have authorized a joint committee to offer a prize of $150 for the best design of a fireplace heater, burning gas. The committee wants a design of a heater that may be placed in the open fireplace of the library, living-room or dining-room of an artistically furnished dwelling, which will be appropriate for the purpose, and artistically consistent with the furnishings of the room. The appearance when unlighted is of equal importance with the appearance when lighted, and in awarding the prize these two features will be given equal prominence.

As a guide to the contestants the following technical facts are given:

The burners may be of either the illuminating type or of the atmospheric type. In the former there is always a certain amount of flicker in the flame. The flame must not be allowed to come in contact with metal or other material, but must burn freely into the atmosphere.

In the burners of the atmospheric type the gas flame has no illuminating value, and this flame may be allowed to touch metal or other material, without any danger of depositing carbon. This contact of the flame with other material is generally accompanied by the emission of some odor. With all types of burners, however it is the intention to have the products of combustion from these gas fires ascend through the flue.

The award will be made by the committee on the recommendation of a jury composed of three members, an architect (to be nominated by the American Institute of Architects), a member of the American Gas Institute and a member of the National Commercial Gas Association.

The competition will close on March 1, 1915, at which time the designs must be in the hands of the chairman of the joint committee, Wm. J. Serrill, 1401 Arch street, Philadelphia. Further information on this competition may be obtained by communicating with Mr. Serrill, Philadelphia, Pa.

FIREPROOF ZONES.

A Suggestion to Be Considered in Building Code Revision.

Three classes of fire limits are under consideration by the Building Committee of the Board of Aldermen, which is charged with the duty of revising the building code. Limits within which no new frame construction will be permitted have already been enacted in a separate ordinance, and another ordinance is in preparation which sets off certain districts in each borough within which the construction of frame houses when detached is permissible. Recently the committee has been asked to consider the advisability of establishing, in Manhattan and Brooklyn only, a third class of limitations, namely fireproof zones.

Within the bounds of a fireproof zone no new building, other than a low "taxpayer," would be legal unless it be of fireproof construction.

So far as Manhattan is concerned, such a commandment would be merely a recognition of the prevailing practice. Both 42d and 59th streets have been suggested as the northern boundary of the zone in Manhattan. For Brooklyn the committee has been advised that the zone should embrace simply the principal factory district lying along the water front, between Erie Basin and Newtown Creek.

The fact has not been overlooked that a fireproof zone two blocks wide extending across Manhattan Island in the latitude of 125th street, on the east side of the borough, and following the course of 129th street, on the west side, would be a barrier that would be the salvation of a large section of the city in the event of a conflagration which, were there no such fire stop, might reach the proportions of a Salem disaster.

Similarly, a fireproof zone two blocks wide along the course of Fulton street, in Brooklyn, from the bridge to East New York, might save the borough from a sweeping conflagration. The restriction would not affect existing buildings, but would require all new construction, except "taxpayers," to be fireproof, in the expectation that in years to come, when most of the combustible structures shall have been replaced, Brooklyn will have in a new Fulton street a sure protection against such a fire as ran over Salem and left not one piece of wood unburned in its path, so far as the present writer was able to discover on a recent visit.

New Plumbing Regulations.

The hearing appointed by the Building Committee for this week on the subject of the new plumbing regulations has been postoned to October 8 at 2 p. m. at City Hall.

Brisk Building at Nepperhan.

Building has begun on the home of Mr. Alexander Saslavsky, assistant conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra, which has been arranging plans for an attractive home at Nepperhan Heights, a suburban colony of Yonkers. Plans have been prepared for a residence on the corner of Fairview avenue and Morningside road for Charles C. Gillert. Arrangements are being made for the beautification of Wheelers' Pond, and also for the founding of a Nepperhan Tennis Club, which is to be incorporated very soon. The section surrounding the water is to be improved, a clubhouse erected, and courts for tennis and squash built. This will increase the social attractiveness of Nepperhan Heights.

Large Factory for Paterson, N. J.

The East Jersey Pipe Company, 30 Church street, New York City, is having preliminary plans prepared for a modern factory building to be erected at the corner of East 37th street and Twenty-first avenue, Paterson, N. J. The improvement will probably amount to an expenditure of nearly $300,000. The company's own engineers are preparing the plans, and details of construction have not been determined.

Proposed Clubhouse for Nurses.

The proposed structure will be eight stories in height and will cover a plot 75x100 feet. The building will be strictly fireproof, with facades of brick, limestone and terra cotta. All the conveniences of a modern clubhouse will be installed, and particular attention will be devoted to making the individual rooms homelike. The project will cost nearly $500,000.

It will cost $100,000.

New Broadway Office Building.

The building will be fireproof and will have frontages of 105 feet on Broadway, 197 feet in 37th street, and 23 feet on Sixth avenue. The structure will be 276 feet high. The facades will be of brick and Indiana limestone and will be designed in the style of the Italian Renaissance. This building will be erected by the Robert Hoe Estate, Inc., and will cost more than $1,000,000.

Addition to Standard Oil Works.

H. D. Best & Co., 320 Fifth avenue, New York City, have received the general contract for the construction of a can factory at the Devoe works of the Standard Oil Company, at Long Island City. The new structure will be of reinforced concrete, two stories in height, and will cover a plot 145x380 feet. It will cost about $200,000. The plans were prepared privately by the owner's engineers.

New Park Avenue Apartment.

George Fred Pelham, architect, 30 East 42d street, has been retained by the Rexton Realty Co., 37 Liberty street, to prepare plans for a thirteen-story apartment house, to be erected at 162 East 82d street (southeast corner of Park avenue), on a plot 25x100 feet. The building will be arranged for one family on a floor. The project will cost about $150,000.

The plans were prepared by John Graham, architect and engineer, Highland Park, Mich. Full details of construction were announced in the September 12th issue of the Record and Guide.

Total Net Valuation Increased $133,000,000.

The city tax rolls for the coming year were opened October 1.

The total assessments for the five boroughs, according to the tentative figures, which will be somewhat reduced, is $7,800,180,532. This includes the real estate of corporations, the assessments on which amount to $207,613,590, but it does not include the special franchise assessments assessed by the State Board. Of the total real estate increase, new buildings account for $130,000,000.

Real property shows important decreases in all boroughs, but new buildings and improvements have made it possible for the tentative assessment list to show a net increase over last year. Change of trade centers in Manhattan has had a noticeable effect. The district which includes Broadway from Bleecker street to Fourteenth street has a net decrease of nearly $15,000,000.

The district bounded by Broadway, Fourteenth street, Thirty-second street, Fourth avenue and Fortieth street had a decrease of $11,500,000, but new buildings amounting to more than $12,000,000 and improvements produced a net increase of a little more than $13,000,000. North of Fortieth street, between Third and Fourth avenues to Ninety-sixth street, there was only a slight decrease, while the net increase was more than $24,000,000.

| | New Buildings. | Increase. | Total Assessment. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Manhattan... | 297 | $63,307,594 | $4,932,364,260 |
| Bronx..... | 525 | 23,826,516 | 656,310,771 |
| Brooklyn..... | 2,887 | 35,354,065 | 1,628,268,257 |
| Queens..... | 3,558 | 26,985,582 | 500,226,209 |
| Richmond.... | 928 | 3,267,174 | 83,010,845 |
| Totals..... | 8,295 | $133,782,317 | $7,458,784,625 |

To this is added the increase on the real estate of corporation, which brings the total assessments up to $7,800,180,532.

Personal Tax Rolls.

On the personal tax rolls, which were also opened, John D. Rockefeller appears as the possessor of the largest amount of taxable personal property. His assessment is $5,000,000. The assessment on the personal property of James B. Ford is set down as $3,000,000, and there are over fifty persons assessed on personal property valued at from $200,000 to $600,000.

Electrical Trades Expectant.

As Germany is the chief competitor of the United States in the electrical trade throughout the world, American manufacturers say that her removal, even temporarily, will throw $100,000,000 of electrical orders to the United States. South America has been Germany's chief foreign market, and this territory is now at the mercy of American makers of electrical equipment and machinery, and the latter are already taking important steps to assume the reins. The second week in October will see the annual Electrical Exposition and Motor Show in New York. This year the exhibits of the domestic manufacturers will be directed largely with the idea of capturing the foreign business which has heretofore been swung to Europe.

New Bank Homes Show Prosperity.

The George A. Fuller Company numbers among its recent business contracts with no less than seven different banks in various parts of the country, involving work that will aggregate over $2,000,000. To particularize, the Old National of Grand Rapids is in the new Pantlind Hotel building in that city and the Fuller company is now engaged in fixing up handsome quarters. The Peoples State Bank of Detroit is putting up an addition to its present home. Another Detroit institution, the Wayne County and Home Savings Bank, is erecting a new building, and so is the First National of Durham, N. C., and the First National of Olean, N. Y. Crossing over to Canada, the Royal Bank is getting a new building at King and Yonge streets, Toronto, while the Merchants Bank of Canada is making an addition to the quarters of its Winnipeg branch.

TRADE LITERATURE

Railroad and Marine Paints.

IT must mean a great deal to a firm to manufacture a product that has through merit become useful round the world. Yet when the exchanges from building fields in England, and even as far away as South Africa are received giving reports of contracts awarded wherein Toch Brothers' paints and waterproofing compounds are to be used, the great scope of this commodity as a factor in high-class construction work begins to appeal to the imagination. But when it is known that the very conveyances which carry this commodity into the far corners of the earth are themselves protected with that same commodity, the part that this compound plays in engineering work, after sixty-six years, is really astounding. The firm's latest booklet, telling how their product is applied to ships of the sea and iron horses of the land, is fully as interesting as their works on building construction. They may be had for the asking at the office of Toch Brothers, 320 Fifth avenue.

New Steel Ceiling Catalogue.

Catalogue No. 19, describing the "Classik" line of steel ceilings manufactured by the Berger Mfg. Co., Canton, Ohio, is one of the finest productions of this kind that has ever come to our attention.

This handsomely bound and illustrated volume is something more than a mere catalogue, because it gives valuable information of a general character relative to metal ceiling application, in addition to complete particulars of the many exclusive points which distinguish the "Classik" line.

The book contains 148 pages of heavy art paper, bound in heavy antique paper covers of a dark brown color, richly embossed in red and gold, and one of its most pleasing as well as most useful features consists of numerous large and remarkably beautiful illustrations of the many unique patterns of "Classik" ceilings, cornices, mouldings, etc., reproduced by the highest type of halftone process.

Additional interest is provided by the pictures of interiors of theatres, banks, churches and other large and important buildings in which Berger's "Classik" Steel Ceilings have been installed.

The Berger Manufacturing Co. has recently effected a considerable reduction in the cost of erecting their ceilings by the introduction of their new close-fitting bead and counter-sunk, self-centering nailing point, which practically eliminate calking of the joints. Details of this feature are also contained in the catalogue. Copies of this book may be obtained by addressing the Berger Manufacturing Co.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

PRICE CHANGES INDICATE WIDE VARIANCE IN DEMAND AND SUPPLY—PLATE GLASS QUOTATIONS NOW 90-30 AND STIFF

Pig Iron and Steel Weak—Portland Cement Shaded—Plan Filings Show Gain

PRICE changes reported as of October 1, in the building material and supply department, indicate wide variance in supply and demand. Plate glass, which was quoted at 90-25 off list prior to September 15, but was cut considerably by small jobbers, is now 90-30 and stiff, with prospects of further tightening if the demand develops any more. Pig iron, the barometer of the future steel market, is weak at $14.45, while last year at this time it was bringing $15.25. Both the iron and steel markets are uneasy, with competition driving prices considerably below current quotations. Structural material, for instance, is being quoted at tidewater at 1.31 to 1.36c., but actual figures are reported to be much lower on good orders. Brick from the Hudson River district is a little firmer, at $5.00 to $5.50 a thousand, dock, N. Y., but Newark yard prices show no change. Portland cement is still being cut by certain small companies under the $1.58 level. Lime at $1.25 is not as firm as it was at the same level on September first.

American linseed oil is quoted three cents below the sixty-cent level current September first. Hardwoods are stiffer, reflecting the big gain in alteration work. Paints and varnishes are stiffer, owing to the shutting off of supplies from abroad, especially coal tar color products. White lead is stiffening, which also helps to put up the price of paints.

Coal shipments are heavy, and there is considerable activity on the part of building managers to safeguard their shipments and supplies. The Reading interests announced that they would operate their plants continuously to keep pace with the exceptionally heavy demand for commercial and domestic sizes. Port Reading, along the Staten Island Sound, has more coal in cars awaiting export than it ever has had before.

Pipe mills are encouraged by the demand for tubing. Bookings have been increasing to such an extent of late by reason of foreign purchases that increased capacity has been thrown in. Wire and nail mills are now operating at 75 per cent. capacity, whereas 60 per cent. was the prevailing rate of output two months ago. Sheets and bars, on the other hand, are extremely dull.

All naval stores, such as rope, rosin, acids, and potash, are higher. Lubricating oils show no change from the 13 and 13½ cent quotations ruling before the war.

The summary action taken by the Treasury Department against banks which have been hoarding funds will, it is believed, be prolific of good results in the building trades. Plan filings have shown that realty interests have felt a demand for more commercial buildings and industrial plant extension, but the difficulty has been to induce banks to finance the enterprises, regardless of interest rates offered.

Plan filings in the five boroughs for the week closing noon yesterday follow. In the same week last year there were 190 buildings projected, valued at $1,312,680.

COMMON BRICK.

Registered Unloading Shows Gain—Sales More Active.

HUDSON common brick sold a little more actively on the wholesale market this week, but prices remained unchanged. Shipments are restricted, the week closing with a reserve of four bargeloads or a little more than a million brick, as against 48 bargeloads or 16,800,000 brick in the corresponding week last year.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, Oct. 1, in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson Rivers unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

PLATE GLASS.

Discounts Now 90-30 and Stiffening—Foreign Supply Cut.

PLATE glass of all kinds is now quoted at 90-30 and is stiffening. Jobbers report heavy demand following the shutting off of foreign supply, but little of which is of a speculative nature. American mills have suddenly had to bear the plate glass demand of the world.

COAL.

Anthracite Mills Will Run Continuously From Now On.

ANTHRACITE coal plants have to operate their plants continuously from now on if they expect to keep up with the demand for domestic and small commercial sizes. The Reading has taken the first definite action in this respect. Consumers seem desirous of getting as much coal in store as possible to forestall eventualities arising from shortage at the mines later on. Prices have not changed. Port Reading reports a larger quantity of soft coal on cars awaiting export orders than it ever has had before.

WIRE AND PIPE.

Mills Encouraged by Freer Buying of Tubing—Plate Mills Active.

WIRE and pipe mills are planning to increase their capacities. Of all the subsidiary plants of the United States Steel Corporation the plate mills are rolling the heaviest output while structural steel mills are running as low as 30 and 40 per cent. Pig iron demand is light in all sections. Last month's fabricating orders totaled only 55,000 tons, a gain of about 7,000 tons as reported for August.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR CITY EXTRAVAGANCE

Mandatory Legislation From Albany Has Limited the Power of the City Government — Real Estate Board's Suggestion to Budget Committee.

THE hearings before the sub-committee on Tax Budget of the Board of Estimate have brought out an unusual amount of interest on the part of taxpayers. Or, to put it a little differently and at the same time emphasize a very important point, the interest taken by taxpayers has reacted in wide public interest in this matter of apportioning, within the limits of reasonable economy, the amounts to be spent by the various city departments in 1915.

The Real Estate Board, which is submitting in concrete form suggestions and criticisms to the sub-committee having this matter in charge has, according to Laurence M. D. McGuire, president of the Board, received during the week many expressions of encouragement for its work along these lines. Mr. McGuire has lost no opportunity to make it plain that these daily suggestions submitted on the budget requests are not criticisms of men, but of methods.

"It is rather difficult," Mr. McGuire says, "to present these concrete suggestions on the subject of economy, and at the same time avoid wounding the sensibilities of some official or group of officials. But it would be most unfortunate, and certainly most undeserved on the part of the Real Estate Board, if any such construction should be placed on the recommendations which, after all, are merely in line with a definite policy adopted by this Board and communicated to the Board of Estimate some weeks ago.

Not Common Scolds.

"It is unfortunately true that some taxpayers have in the past been apt to criticise in such general terms and so insistently, that all taxpayers would almost deserve it if the city officials had come to regard them in the light of common scolds.

"The Real Estate Board may be importunate, but it is trying not to be vague. It is presenting a cause which assuredly warrants persistence, and in a manner that cannot but be approved if a bill of particulars is what is desired.

"The Tax Budget Committee's hearings have been in progress two weeks. There remains a great many departments to be considered. It would be almost impossible to cover so wide a field as represented by the workings of the various departments without making some recommendation or suggesting some method that would not be at wide variance with official thought and practice.

Delayed Estimates.

"It is also most unfortunate that, in spite of the fact that the Charter in Section 226 makes it mandatory that Departmental estimates shall be presented by Sept. 10, and that the Mayor in June urged heads of departments to have these estimates ready by July 1, many of these estimates are not yet ready, or were not ready up to a day or two ago. This certainly does not give the public that opportunity for investigation that the Charter provision intended.

LAURENCE M. D. McGUIRE,
President Real Estate Board.

"In several particulars our recommendations have been radical. City officials are jealous of their authority, jealous of their official menage, so to speak. Economies do not always appeal to them. Sometimes the inertia of departmental habit or custom stands in the way of changes which if sugested as applicable to others than themselves would be considered highly desirable by department heads.

"It is not surprising, therefore, that the possibility of giving offense where the sole purpose is to give real, though not disinterested, assistance suggests itself.

Where Responsibility Rests.

"Upon one point, however, there should be no misunderstanding. And on this point taxpayers are apt to go widely astray. Very few criticisms of city expenditures make any distinction between the responsibility which properly rests upon city officials and that which should be placed upon the State Legislature. In other words, any criticism of the budget allowances which does not take into account the portion fairly attributable to mandatory legislation is manifestly unfair to the Board of Estimate.

"It requires very minute analysis of the City Budget to make an absolutely clear division of what is mandatory and what is not. Even after such an analysis there might be some difference of opinion. And there is also a further separation of responsibility as between the Board of Estimate as a whole and its Chairman, as Mayor of the city.

"Let us see to what extent the Board of Estimate is responsible and therefore accountable for increases in the budget. Just about a year ago City Chamberlain Bruere, who was then a director in the Bureau of Municipal Research, in an article in the Record and Guide stated that after deducting the items required for debt service, Board of Education State taxes, County offices, the City's contribution to the Police pension fund and several other items 'there is left approximately $85,000,000 as the part of the budget over which the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, individually or collectively, has more or less complete administrative jurisdiction.' This was based on the 1913 budget of $192,711,441.16.

"Let us take the 1914 budget for further analysis. This budget was $192,995,551.62. The very largest item, that of debt service, $52,611,517.65, is practically beyond the control of the Board of Estimate, as it represents bonds issued and obligations incurred by preceding administrations. The following is a reasonable statement of the amounts for which the Board of Estimate is not responsible, and the total for which it is, as Mr. Bruere puts it, 'individually or collectively' responsible:

| | Total Budget 1914. $192,995,551 | |
|---|---|---|
| Board of Estimate's responsibility. | | |
| Debt service | $52,611,517 | |
| Board of Education (city's share) | 28,170,466 | |
| Police Dep't | 13,922,665 | |
| Fire Dep't | 7,439,272 | |
| State tax | 4,576,303 | |
| Deficiency in tax levy | 2,500,000 | |
| Bellevue & Allied Hospitals | 1,460,063 | |
| Board of Elections | 1,339,715 | |
| College City of N. Y. | 684,963 | |
| Armory Board | 309,615 | |
| Board of Aldermen and City Clerk | 301,218 | |
| Board of Coroners | 159,598 | |
| | $113,415,398 | |
| Only nominally responsible for. | | |
| County charges: | | |
| New York | $3,966,164 | |
| Kings | 1,860,550 | |
| Queens | 449,707 | |
| The Bronx | 273,941 | |
| Richmond | 139,712 | $6,630,165 |
| | | $120,045,564 |
| Leaves Board of Estimate responsible for | | $72,949,987 |

"This is a liberal estimate. Probably a closer analysis figured so as to include responsibility for certain phases of administrative details where economies could be insisted on, would bring the amount up to about $80,000,000. It is true there are certain mandatory provisions for minor sums for charities and special purposes, but these are not large enough to affect the above estimate.

"This places responsibility on the Board of Estimate for approximately 41 per cent. of the total budget. The debt service represents another 27 per cent. Mandatory legislation claims the other 32 per cent.

"These facts the Real Estate Board has tried to take full account of in making its recommendations to the Tax Budget Committee, whose findings and recommendations will be reviewed by the Board of Estimate.

"We have also found it necessary, however, to call attention to certain conditions which it is not now in the power of the Board of Estimate to remedy.

"But we have done this with a definite purpose. It is assumed that where these recommendations have merit—and we hope many of them have—the city officials, in the interests of economy and retrenchment, will either initiate or support such legislation, or any necessary constitutional amendments looking to real Home Rule. Several of them have expressed their belief in this principle. The defects of the existing Home Rule law, to which, by the way, nobody seems to have paid any serious attention except in some of the smaller upstate cities, should be remedied.

"It is well known that in seeking legislation for New York City the battle is half won when Albany is informed that a given measure has the support of the city administration. For this co-operation we surely can look to the Mayor and his Cabinet."

Concrete Recommendations.

The Board of Estimate's Sub-Committee on Tax Budget began the second week of its sessions on Monday last in the Municipal Building, and the Real Estate Board of New York, following out its program of submitting suggestions for economy in city affairs presented a number of recommendations to the committee.

The recommendations covered the Tenement House Department, Magistrates' Courts, Board of Inebriety, Board of Assessors, Department of Health, Normal College and College of the City of New York, Registers' Offices, Department of Parks and Department of Correction. Among the recommendations are the following:

Tenement House.

The Tenement House Department has submitted an estimate which is not yet printed, asking for a decrease of some $20,000 odd, and requesting some unimportant increases of salaries.

The yearly cost of this department in recent years has averaged $755,000, taking 1906 as a base. Since that year the increases have been between $100,000 and $150,000, 1914 and 1915 showing some decrease from the preceding years. This yearly cost continues notwithstanding the fact that the department has been a number of years in existence and must have, to a very large extent, finished its survey of buildings erected before 1906.

The committee should ask the Commissioner to explain why it is necessary to employ 224 inspectors, in view of the presumed increase of efficiency of the department, the slackness in building operations and the fact, as stated above, that the older buildings must have been heretofore surveyed.

The Commissioner also asks for 24 reviewing inspectors and 15 patrolmen. There are also 269 clerks, an enormous number, although many of the salaries are low. In addition there are also 74 stenographers and 45 typewriting copyists, 10 process servers and a dozen plan examiners. These examiners are probably necessary. The process servers seem entirely unnecessary, as the processes could readily be served by the inspectors. The employees here enumerated make a total of 673.

Department of Health.

The amount asked for is $3,500,000.00. It is not practical for us to make a criticism of the individual items in the estimate, as the estimate has not yet been printed and will make, we understand, 116 pages. We therefore necessarily leave such investigation and examination to the Budget Committee and its examiners.

We must call your attention, however, to the increasing activities of the department itself. The true function of the department should be to make and enforce sanitary regulations. At its inception it was not contemplated that it would take the place of the physician, the nurse, the druggist and the dentist in the family. Neither was it contemplated that it should supervise and control the daily life of the citizen.

Paternalistic Government.

The constant growth in this kind of government has continued until the tax rate is now more than one-third of the average income from real property. If the present tendency is not checked and the earnings from real estate continues to decrease the time will come when the two will so nearly meet as to create a condition of, practically, confiscation of real property.

The fundamental wrong in this whole matter is that free medical service, free nurses and all the various things done for people by the Board of Health, are done only for a small part of the community. While all are taxed, mainly the part of our population who are always seeking something for nothing, is benefited.

It is a mistake to think that the self-respecting poor are helped. Many of those helped belong really to the middle class, and have become so accustomed to having things given them by the community, that they feel that certain kinds of personal service and certain special phases of education and entertainment are theirs by right.

If this system of the extension of governmental functions to include personal supervision and personal service to the citizen is continued, it should be so operated as to permit it to be available to every citizen, whether affluent or of moderate means.

ACTIVITIES OF THE UNITED OWNERS

A Comprehensive Program of Work for the Coming Year From Which Every Property Owner in the City Will Derive a Benefit.

BY HENRY BLOCH.

THE growing demand among realty owners that there be some tangible evidence of the fact that they are really united, assumed form and became crystallized in the recent establishment of the "Headquarters for Taxpayers" at 170 Broadway. The power of the great real estate interests of the city had lain dormant and unrecognized for years. Only after constant prodding, by a few who realized the situation, has it recently awakened from its lethargy. A new era has been inaugurated. Taxpayers have been taught their lesson. They now know that the so-called depression in values and the unsalability of real estate has been caused in a very large degree to their own indifference to oppressive legislation, over-regulation and the ever-increasing tax-rate. The owner who concentrates his interest in the real estate which he owned, has now been made to realize that the interests of the city are coincident with those of its real estate; that a drastic law or extravagant public expenditure affects not only the city, but every piece of real estate proportionately.

A Federation.

The Headquarters house a federation of taxpayers' associations having a membership of thousands of owners of property. It is not being used for organizing purposes, nor for the running of a political campaign. It is and will remain just what its name signifies—a place where all taxpayers can gather to discuss civic and realty problems; to obtain without charge information and expert advice with regard to the requirements of the Municipal and State Departments, etc. It is rapidly becoming a bee-hive of activity for the realty owners of New York.

The activities of the United Real Estate Owners' Association has covered a wide field. Since May 8, 1902—the date of incorporation—long before many of the present stalwart realty defenders ever dreamed of the need of a taxpayers' organization!—we have attended before the city and State authorities to fight the battle of the realty owners. Until comparatively recently we fought alone. Now others have seen the light.

HENRY BLOCH,
President United Real Estate Owners.

Program of Activities.

We have prepared a comprehensive program of work for the coming year. Twenty committees composed of the most active members of the various local associations are busily preparing to defend real estate against attacks; to co-operate with the public officials; to do constructive work rather than to ineffectually criticise. Our immediate attention will be directed to the following matters:

A scientific study of the Budget and an inquiry as to the high cost of running several of the city departments.

Urge the repeal of considerable of the existing mandatory legislation providing for the creation of positions, the fixing of salaries and the compulsory expenditure of money for purposes not properly included in governmental functions.

An inquiry as to the real estate exempt from taxation in the city, and the justification for such exemption.

A merger of several of the municipal departments having jurisdiction over Buildings, and the simplification of inspections.

An inquiry as to the many positions exempt from civil service in the city government, the salaries paid and the reasons why they are not placed under civil service control.

Attendance before the Mayor's special Committee on Taxation, and the Commission on the Heights of Buildings and Districting of Trades, etc. Attendance at all meetings of the Boards of Estimate and Aldermen and the Sinking Fund Commission.

Representation throughout the session of the State Legislature. Recodification of the Labor Law. Reduction of Accident and Workmen's Compensation insurance premiums. Modification of the Workmen's Compensation Act as regards janitors of buildings, etc.

Study of the questions to be considered by and the preparation of briefs to be submitted to the State Constitutional Convention.

Introduction of ordinances for the protection of realty. Advocate the use of public buildings for voting purposes. The better use of school buildings. Urge the adoption of new sources of revenue suggested by our associations to Mayor Gaynor's commission. Creation of a central purchasing bureau. An inquiry as to issuance of corporate stock by the city. Building code revision.

DOES THE CITY NEED ALL ITS PROPERTY?

If Not, Why Not Sell What It Has No Use For?—Various Opinions Held on a Question of Fiscal Policy Often Asked

THE City of New York owns a large amount of unused real estate. Its value has been estimated at between twenty and thirty million dollars. Much of the property was acquired at the time of the consolidation of the boroughs. It consists of lands intended as sites for public buildings, or for public works of some kind, and never utilized. Buildings that apparently have been abandoned or are no longer used for the purposes originally intended also figure in the property list.

From various quarters the suggestion has come that the city ought to sell these premises and turn the funds into the treasury to help defray the annual interest charges on city bonds, and at the same time permit the property to be taken off the exempt tax list and subjected to assessments as other private property.

In last week's Record and Guide Charles S. Brown of the firm of Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown & Co., was quoted as saying that:

Would Save Carrying Charges.

'I think if the city offered its unusued land at public sale, and did not protect the property, a sale could be made at what might be considered a very low price. But low prices exist nowadays, and the money received therefrom could earn interest, as against carrying vacant land and losing both the use of the principal or the interest return."

Inquiries by the Record and Guide in representative quarters has elicited a variety of opinions on the subject. In Manhattan serious doubts were expressed as to the advisability of trying to dispose of city properties at the present time. Brooklyn is strongly of the opinion that the city should clean house and dispose of its surplus property, if it can obtain a fair market price. In the Bronx it is believed that a properly managed auction would effect the purpose.

An Insufficient Expedient.

President McGuire of the Real Estate Board of New York said that under certain circumstances the city government might dispose of some portion of its unused property, but that it would be extremely inopportune now to offer city property at public sale.

Still, it was possible there might be some advantage in the city's placing what would be considered a fair price on some of the unused property which it owns and offering the parcels at private sale.

The Real Estate Board's president was inclined to believe, however, that this plan would be a poor expedient for correcting the evils of the present situation, because the city's fiscal policy was a matter that went farther than this and needed serious treatment. The present situation offered a wide opportunity to the city officials to place a restraining hand on city expenditures and to give the closest possible attention to necessary economies. More than that, the present status of fiscal affairs presented an opportunity of correcting evils which are frequently and glibly excused on the ground that they are mandatory legislation.

The Real Estate Board is at the present time making specific recommendations to the Committee on Tax Budget which, if considered seriously will, in Mr. McGuire's opinion, go a long way toward reducing the budget of 1915 and correcting other serious defects traceable to charter provisions.

Warren Cruikshank of the Cruikshank Company, said he was not in favor of the city selling its real estate at the present time, with the view of reducing the amount to be borrowed. In his opinion, it would be better for the city to borrow and pay a higher rate of interest than is paid in ordinary times, than to make forced sale under present conditions.

No Advantage At the Present Time.

Richard M. Hurd, president of the Lawyers Mortgage Company, said he did not believe that a reasonable price could be obtained under present conditions if the terms were all cash. And if the properties should be sold on any other terms, he did not see any advantage to the city in selling at the present time.

"I cannot possibly see what purpose the city has of keeping vacant or improved property for which they have no present or future use," said J. Clarence Davies. "There is a great deal of this kind of property lying throughout the city which should be sold and the money used for city purposes. In addition to the loss of interest on the money, the city is losing taxes.

"I see no reason why the city's finances should not be handled like any other business corporation. When they have no use for buildings, real estate, or other materials, they dispose of it to the best advantage.

"While the present conditions are not such as to promise a disposal of real estate at auction at good prices, I have reason to believe that the City of New York could dispose of property at the present time, if such an auction sale were properly handled."

Brooklyn Favors Sales.

In Brooklyn the opinion of the leading men of the borough was found to be strongly in favor of the City of New York disposing of property no longer required for public use.

The Brooklyn Board of Real Estate Brokers had this matter under consideration as to the property in the Borough of Brooklyn last year and a committee of that body was appointed to consider the matter and confer with Comptroller William A. Prendergast. The committee of that board comprised William P. Rae, chairman; and Messrs. H. C. Pyle, A. B. Gritman, W. J. Lynch and C. B. Smith.

A list of all the property owned by the city was furnished to this committee. The list comprised 45 parcels, which, according to the cost value as shown by the list, represented $2,337,-913.61, and three parcels with no cost given, and in addition 39 parcels held under tax deeds.

At a conference held between the committee and Charles A. O'Malley, representing Comptroller Prendergast, the following recommendation was made:

1. That the judgment of the committee was that the city authorities should dispose at the earliest possible moment of all the unused property held by the city, and that it was best for the city (which, after all, represents the taxpayers) that any property acquired by the city which was not put to use for public purposes within one year should be sold, as the loss to the city of taxable property, particularly where it was unproductive, did not warrant the holding of the property beyond the period of one year.

2. That in order to create the best market price, the property should be advertised and publicly auctioned.

3. That the terms of sale when the property was offered should carry with it a report of title or a title policy furnished by a reliable title guaranty company so as to insure to each purchaser an absolute title.

Frank Bailey, vice-president of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, said he was also in favor of the city clearing up property which had been abandoned by private owners and on which the taxes have been allowed to run. Mr. Bailey also said he knew of several pieces of property that have not paid taxes for twenty years. But the present administration was approaching the subject from a more nearly business standpoint than any previous administration, and seemed to be ready to respond to any suggestion which would be for city betterment and financial improvement.

A General Housecleaning Needed.

David Porter said it was his opinion that it should be the policy of the city never, or very seldom, to buy a piece of property until it is needed. While some of the investments of the past in real estate had been good, and if sold now would produce a good profit, it could not be forgotten that the city had lost the taxes and interest in the meantime. Not only that, it had also lost the taxes on the improvements that a private owner would very likely have made, which, if calculated up, would doubtless equal the profit.

"In the Borough of Brooklyn alone," continued Mr. Porter, "there are now about 50 pieces of property owned by the city which cost approximately $2,500,000, not one of which is being used for any public purpose, and they are rented for less than $23,000 per year, less than 1 per cent. of the cost—several of these are vacant, however, and bring in no rent. I do not know how many pieces there are, similarly owned, in the other boroughs, but one can imagine.

"At least one of these is a legacy from the old City of Brooklyn and the others have been acquired since 1900, so that the city has been losing approximately 1 per cent. more than the interest on the money, since each piece was purchased. This does not take into account the vast amount of property acquired for subway and bridge and other public purposes, that is being improved at the present time for use later; neither does it include property taken in at tax sales, but is simply property not being used in any way.

Business Methods Needed.

"From a business standpoint, this is all wrong and I believe that, especially at the present time, when every penny is needed for useful purposes, all superfluous property should be sold and converted into cash. Of course there are several school sites in this list that I do not think should be sold, as they are doubtless selected with a view to the needs of the neighborhood, and if sold and built upon they would cost a great deal more to acquire when needed.

"Again, the present state of the real estate market must be taken into account. If these properties were offered now, I cannot conceive that they would sell at their reasonable market value. What I mean is that when there is a fair market, there should be a general 'house cleaning' and in future the city authorities should be careful not to buy property until it is needed, unless in very exceptional circumstances."

OPINIONS OF BROKERS ON FALL RENTING

Managers Claim Conditions Are Good, Everything Considered—The Season Is Late, But Few Vacancies Are Looked For—Prices Maintained

NOW that October is here apartment house renting conditions were discussed this week by real estate agents in practically every section of Manhattan and in parts of the Bronx. It was learned that this branch of the market has been good, all things considered, and that brokers are in the main satisfied regarding the business transacted and optimistic about next year's possibilities. The demand along Park avenue and throughout the East Side seems to favor the suites, of more than six rooms; elsewhere tenants seem interested in the three, four and five-room suites. The following expressions of opinion were obtained this week in a canvass of the brokerage offices:

Francis S. Bancroft, of Pease & Elliman:—"We have rented more apartments in the last three months than in any other year for the same period of time. The renting season is becoming later each year and recent business transacted, after the usual closing of the season, has been highly satisfactory.

"Park avenue has shown unusual strength. The demand as we find it concerns large apartments, particularly in that section south of 75th street, where are to be found apartments of ten rooms or more which rent from $4,000 a year and up. In one building along the avenue where it was planned to have two apartments to a floor, in three specific instances. these were converted into single suites of twenty-seven rooms and leased to single tenants at rentals of about $15,000. The progress and development may best be illustrated by the history of the 17-story structure at the northeast corner of Park avenue and 79th street, which was fully tenanted and sold within two years after the plottage was obtained by the builders. Rentals range from $7,000 to $15,000 a year."

An Effect of the War.

Douglas L. Elliman, of Douglas L. Elliman & Company:—"Along Park avenue and in the intersecting streets results have been satisfactory. Many of the new buildings are completely filled. In those cases where renting has been held up by a delay in completion of the building the late demand which is now manifesting itself should aid in the speedy renting of these structures. The season is late this year, probably on account of the number of people who are waiting until the last minute in order to pick up bargains, and also on account of the European conflict, which has brought people into the market who intended to go abroad. The best demand is for large apartments of seven rooms or more with rents from $3,500 to $5,500. In one building of such a type we have rented 32 out of 36 apartments. In another with rentals ranging from $2,000 to $2,500 we have filled the building. There is more of a demand this year for expensive suites particularly for of twelve to eighteen rooms which bring from $6,000 to $12.000 per annum. Our renting so far shows a 50 per cent. increase over last year, which may indicate the trend."

On the Upper West Side.

Eugene S. L. Moses, of the J. Romaine Brown Company:—"On October 1 we had 95 per cent. of our apartments on the middle and upper West Side and on Washington Heights rented. This record would even have been better were it not that we were managing several buildings in course of construction where renting was difficult because of unfinished structures. In houses which bring from $8 to $30 per room, we have steadily held our schedule and given few concessions. To our knowledge there is no demand for any particular size of apartment, but rather for diversified kinds about equally distributed.

"Indicative of the strength of the market we can cite the instance of one upper Riverside Drive multi-family structure which we manage. The building operation was commenced early in June and the roof completed about July 15. From that time to October 1, 36 of the 41 apartments have been rented for two-year terms, at rentals averaging $13 per room. The vacant ones will probably be disposed of shortly. The renting season has been remarkable in many ways and the outlook for next year is just as promising. With the lack of additional construction there will be a limited supply, with the resultant effects on rent schedules."

Central Section.

Frank D. Ames, of Ames & Company:—"In the central section of the city we have noted little difference this year in renting conditions as compared with previous years. There has always been a demand for small apartments in this section and this year's record, as far as we can see, shows nothing unusual. We have enjoyed a good renting season in spite of the fact that we have granted practically no concessions. This circumstance in itself is an indication of strength in this particular branch of the real estate market."

J. Arthur Fischer:—"In the apartment houses which we manage below 59th street we have found an excellent demand for small suites, nearly five out of every six inquiries concerning such apartments. We have been renting many kitchenette apartments of three rooms and bath ranging between $50 and $60."

H. V. Dike, of O. D. & H. V. Dike:—"In all sections of the city, principally the upper East Side, where we control properties comprising the cheaper apartment houses and tenements, we have had a successful season. Collections are much better and very few tenants are in arrears which is most encouraging when general conditions are considered. Rentals in this class of property are no higher than last year and are maintaining about the same level.

Call for Small Apartments.

Harold Grey, of J. Edgar Leaycraft & Company:—"We have found so great a call for small apartments, that is of three, four and five rooms, that in several instances landlords are remodelling the larger apartments into smaller ones. While conditions in some sections are not so good as they might be, yet this demand for smaller suites has created considerable activity, and as a result rentals are maintaining their own."

David Y. Swainson, of the firm of L. J. Carpenter & Company:—"Our upper West Side and upper East Side high-class apartment houses have enjoyed better successes this year than last and we have had little difficulty in renting seven or eight-room apartments where the rental is not more than $2,000 a year. While the activity reached its height just before October 1, we still are kept busy by numbers of people who have just reached the city from Europe and the out-of-town country places."

On Washington Heights.

Philip A. Schindler, of Schindler & Liebler:—"On Washington Heights, in spite of the number of new buildings which have been erected renting has been excellent. All our holdings on Fort Washington avenue are completely tenanted. Builders, appreciating the demand, have built high-class structures containing three, four and five-room apartments, which average about $11.50 per room."

Thomas J. O'Reilly:—"In that section of the West Side from 86th street to 110th street, there has been an exceptional demand for apartments of three, four and five and six rooms and a less demand than ever before for large suites. Although the season began early the market is still active. Everywhere the tendency seems to favor small apartments, which means not only economy in rent, but in domestic help."

In Harlem.

A. V. Amy & Company:—"Conditions are rather quiet now. although there is still a demand for small apartments, in that part of the city from 110th to 125th streets, between Manhattan and Lenox avenues. The rentals average about $6.50 a room in walk-ups, and from $9 to $11 in elevator apartments, which are located principally along Seventh avenue. We find that about half of the tenants are new arrivals, while the other half are old residents who are evidently satisfied with the neighborhood and desire to remain there."

J. A. Goodwin, of Goodwin & Goodwin:—"Renting of new apartments in the neighborhood of 110th and 111th streets near Seventh avenue and in other West Side streets as far north as 176th street has been good, with small apartments preferred. The outlook for next year is particularly cheerful because of the decline of building operations which will not be able to offset the natural increase of the city's population. Owners of apartment houses already erected will receive the benefit of this development."

Charles S. Kohler:—"In that section of the city from West 80th to West 157th streets we have experienced a good demand for medium priced apartments of three to seven rooms where the maximum rentals have not exceeded $100 per month. Above that figure renting has not been so easy."

George W. Short, of Porter & Co.:—"We are carrying a very small percentage of vacancies and conditions remain sound. We are having little trouble in renting apartments at not more than $1,000 per annum. Although there has been a slight decline since October 1, there is still considerable activity."

Thomas F. McLaughlin:—"On the upper East Side east and west of Third avenue, renting conditions have been fair and not below the usual standard. The demand concerns chiefly three and four-room apartments."

Bronx Conditions.

A. G. Bechmann:—"In the Hunt's Point section tenants also appear to favor small apartments. There has been a heavy renting business in apartments of three, four and five rooms, averaging about $7 a room, in walk-ups in the immediate neighborhood of the Simpson street station. From all appearances October will surpass the other months from the point of view of quantity of business."

John O'Hara, of O'Hara Brothers:—"There is an unusual opportunity for five-story apartment house builders in Bedford Park and Fordham. in that section between Webster and Jerome avenues. We are receiving a steady stream of inquiries for five-room apartments at $7 a room and we cannot with our present supply meet an overwhelming demand. The activity has not been checked by the arrival of October 1 and the market is as lively as ever. We have room in this section for twenty-five more apartment houses."

CONGRESS OF NATIONS IN LOWER WEST SIDE

Syrians, Austrians, Bulgarians, Armenians, Greeks, Russians, Poles and Irish Among the Foreign Colonies In and Near Washington Street

IN the shadow of the thirty-two story Whitehall building, along Washington street and in the nearby narrow alleyways called streets, is to be found one of the most unique and interesting of the many foreign colonies characteristic of New York City's polyglot population. Here are to be found, mingled indiscriminately, even as far north as Cortlandt street, a number of Syrians, Austrians, Bulgarians, Armenians, Greeks, Russians, Poles and Irish.

This unusual development is the more surprising when it is considered that they are hemmed in on the east by the great financial district, on the south by the Custom House and Battery Park, on the west by the big docks and waterfront improvements, and on the north by the warehouse district.

WASHINGTON STREET, NEAR RECTOR STREET.

Foreigners Segregate.

In New York City, as in other large municipalities where thousands of people are compelled to live in congested residential districts, the foreign elements have a marked tendency to segregate in their own communities, where they try as near as possible to live under the same conditions and in the same environment that characterizes their lives in their native lands. So we have in New York, the Ghetto of the lower East Side, with its thousands of Russian and Polish Jews. These people have also formed large neighborhoods in various parts of the Bronx and Brooklyn. The Italians make it a point to become established within definite boundaries. Likewise, the Germans who have selected Yorkville, and the Bohemians and other Slavs in the section further south. Even the South Americans can be located in great numbers in certain blocks on the upper West Side. Then there is, of course, Chinatown, at Chatham square, which began with a man named Ah Ken, who arrived in New York in 1858, and opened a small cigar store on Park Row. There are to be found also in a great many parts of the city similar communities of other foreign peoples.

Noteworthy in these settlements is the absence of residents outside of that particular race. In Washington street, however, all those peoples who have no section of their own have apparently decided to form one group, and as a result have formed what may be called the most remarkable of New York's many unique foreign colonies.

Modern buildings are few and far between in Washington street and in the intersecting streets. Those which house this mixed population are either old-fashioned, six-story tenements or ancient three-story dwellings with the lower floors remodeled for business. The most important development in the street and which gives it its commercial importance is the presence of a large group of Syrian merchants who practically control the trade in Madeira and Cluny laces. These men are also jobbers and exporters of general merchandise, manufacturers of kimonos, hand-made laces and embroideries, groceries and liquors. They are located in stores which rent from $900 to $2,000 per annum, rents varying with floor space, depth, size of show window, etc. They have been established here for about twenty-five years, and conduct a flourishing business, with South American and other countries outside of the European war zone. One exporter showed this week heavy cases consigned to buyers as far out as Freetown, Sierra Leone, West Coast of Africa, Trinidad, Dutch West Indies, and Guantanamo, Cuba. As evidence of their thrift, the instance of one merchant may be cited who started in business about eighteen years ago with borrowed capital, and with the characteristic industry and business acumen of the race, built up a concern now rated at $150,000.

That they have faith in the real estate possibilities of the section is evidenced by their investment in local properties. Faris Azoon owns and occupies the building at 75 Washington street, with his dry goods establishment. Abraham Sahadi, a grocer at 84 Washington street, and Azeez Khayat of Fifth avenue, antique dealer, have a number of properties in the neighborhood. Khaliel W. Saydab, another large owner, paid $31,100 several years ago for the property at 66 Washington street. Among the leading business men and real estate owners of the section are the Faour Brothers, long established, who are the owners of the seven-story business building at 81-84 Washington street, which is one of the headquarters for salesrooms and display offices of the Syrian merchants.

Dominick J. Faour is enthusiastic about the possibilities of the street. He thinks it is one of the most stable in the city on account of its position with reference to the docks, foreign exchanges, steamship and banking offices and its proximity to the financial center of the city. It cannot, he thinks, be affected on this account, by the same conditions which caused trade centers in other sections of the city to shift as they have done in the last few years. Its location near the foreign steamship lines makes it ideal for the offices and show rooms of importers and exporters.

A Social Remnant.

The upper floors of the buildings with stores are occupied chiefly by Syrians and others of smaller means who are employed either as clerks or workers in the various establishments, or who are employed in factories further uptown. They include in their number also a great many peddlars who travel with packs, throughout various parts of the country. Here and there are a few members of the early families, who have stayed on in spite of the changes in the character of the neighborhood. Among the first of the Irish arrivals was the late Patrick J. Lonargan, the builder and real estate operator, who came over in 1826. He has been succeeded by his daughter, Ellen L. Loughlin, who manages the business at 9 Albany street. She controls a number of buildings which house the foreign population.

"These people," she said, this week, "are thrifty, hard working and law abiding and make excellent tenants. In the neighborhood of Morris street the rents are very low, averaging about $7 for two rooms."

This is indeed a good time to get better acquainted with goods made in U. S. A., but it must be remembered that international commerce is the life of New York, and that commerce is built up on the give and take policy.

A railroad president has declared to his stockholders that railroad systems are more endangered by the continued issuance of state and national government regulations than from any other source. Over-regulation, which means more regulation than is necessary and tolerable, has become the great evil of the times.

Every new building erected adds its proportionate share to the taxable property of the city, and during the last fiscal year $130,000,000 was added in this way. On the other hand, every piece of property taken off the tax list and put on the exempt list adds something to the bill of the owners of the remaining parcels. Higher taxes mean higher rents, and higher charges all around, with dismal times as the inevitable consequence.

Justice Hartman failed to get a single vote in the Board of Justices of the Municipal Court in favor of his project for a "landlords' and tenants' commission," to serve as a mediator between the tax-ridden landlord and his delinquent tenants. There are too many costly commissions and committees now, and the Real Estate Board recently asked the Board of Estimate to abolish a few.

The strategy of New York property owners always had one weak place, and that was at Albany. From thence the hidden enemies of good government could fire their shells into the city with little trouble and no danger to themselves. Hereafter our real estate interests will be more thoroughly protected at Albany, and they will have a powerful ally in the New York State association, which will hold its annual convention here next Friday and Saturday.

What the Stationary Condition of Land Values Proves.

The report of the Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments for the year 1914, which has just been published, makes interesting reading for students of real estate values. The Commissioners report that the past year has been remarkable for the shifting of values and for the serious depreciation which has taken place in certain sections. The detailed figures afford abundant evidence of the truth of this assertion. Real estate values have been declining throughout practically the whole of Manhattan lying south of 34th street. The net decrease in the assessment of this area has amounted to about $22,000,000. The gross decrease was, of course, much larger, but there was deducted from it the cost of certain new buildings and perhaps a slight increase in prices along Fourth avenue. The tax assesors managed to figure out an increase of $4,000,000 for the area between Second and Fourth avenues, 14th and 42d streets. They have also found more property to tax in the neighborhood of Times Square and the Grand Central Station, and along the line of Park avenue. In the Bronx they recorded an increase in land values amounting to almost $4,000,000 and in the value of new buildings amounting to $13,000,000. In Brooklyn the changes were negligible. Of all the boroughs only Queens showed any noticeable evidence of an increasing demand for real estate. The net increase in the valuation of all real estate is about $43,000,000, which is about one-fourth of the amount of money spent on new buildings during the year.

The interest of the report of the Tax Commissioners does not depend upon the showing for any one year, but upon the accumulated showing of several years. Since 1911 the population of New York is estimated to have increased a little less than 500,000. During the same period the net increase in land values, not including improvements, has been about $47,000,000. The addition, that is, to the population of New York of a city as large as Buffalo has brought about a merely negligible increase in land values. In 1911 the assessed land value per capita amounted to $915. In 1914 it amounts to only $840. Land values are consequently diminishing as compared with the increase of the city in population and wealth. Neither is this diminution confined to Manhattan. In the case of the central borough, the value of the land, apart from the buildings, has been practically stationary since 1911 and a sharp decrease has taken place in the assessed land value per capita. But in the cases of Brooklyn and the Bronx a much sharper decrease per capita has taken place. As long ago as 1906 the assessed land value per capita of the Bronx was $721. In 1914 it was $549. During those eight years the population of the Bronx has increased from 290,000 to over 600,000, while the percentage of increase in the assessed value of land has been only a little over fifty. It must be remembered, also, that during these eight years the Tax Department has been steadily pushing up the level of assessed values so that the actual increase in land values has been less than 50 per cent.

The figures for Brooklyn tell the same story. In 1911 the assessed value of land per capita was $464. In 1914 the corresponding figure is $417. An estimated increase in population of 170,000 has added nothing to the value of the land. The comparison for Brooklyn cannot be pushed back of 1911, because the rolls of that year contained a $200,000,000 increase in assessed values which was effected not by any increase in land values, but by the adoption on the part of the Tax Department of a higher standard of assessment. If this $200,000,000 is omitted, it will be found that in the case of Brooklyn, an increase in population of 475,000 since 1906 has not prevented a decrease in per capita land value and has resulted in a comparatively small increase of gross value, all of which took place during the first four years.

The failure of land values to increase in proportion to the population makes the problem of financing the necessary increase in expenses extremely difficult. The financial policy of the city has been based in general on the expectation of a steady expansion of land values. The yearly enlargement should normally be sufficient to pay the increasing expenses of the city without any change in the tax rate. The existing rate applied to the increased assessed values should produce enough additional income to meet the necessarily greater expenses of the city. Ten per cent. of the increase in assesed value ought to cover the city's needs for expenditures for the capital account. If, consequently, the increase in land values is slight or non-existent, what is the city to do? Its expenses will necessarily continue to increase, and the only way in which the heavier charges can be paid is by adding to the tax rate. But an addition to the tax rate levied upon a stationary fund of real estate values will tend actually to diminish the fund. In that event the city will be living not upon its income but upon its capital.

Such is the situation wherewith New York is confronted at the present time. Since 1911 land values have been either stationary or actually declining. New buildings have added only $130,000,000 to the assessment rolls, although much more has been spent upon new construction. During the same period the city government has had to provide for almost 500,000 new inhabitants, an increase of ten per cent. By rigid economy the increased taxes levied on real estate during the same period have been kept down to about $5,000,000, an increase of about six per cent. During the past three years there has been no increase at all in the taxes levied on real estate. But in spite of this fact real estate values have for the most part either diminished or remained stationary.

What is to be done in the future? Doubtless the expenditures of the city can be reduced, as the Real Estate Board suggests, by a more careful scrutiny of salaries and miscellaneous accounts. The Board of Estimate already has a committee which is working upon that problem. But it is improbable that any process of economizing can be made drastic enough to provide for the increased expenditures which are plainly impending. In order to improve the financial health of the city it will be necessary to derive certain expenditures now charged against capital from its annual income. It will also be necessary to pay out of income a large amount of floating indebtedness which is a grave source of embarassment both to the city and to the money market. If these increasing expenditures are collected from real estate the effect on real estate values in different parts of the city will be extremely serious. It would mean in many cases liquidation of existing holdings and a consequent shrinkage of prices in many sections of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx. Owners, who have been holding on to their property in the hope of an ultimate recovery of activity would be forced to let go and the city would find itself at the end of the year with a considerably diminished fund, from which to derive its ordinary income. The practically stationary condition of real estate values clearly proves that the limit has been reached for the time being in the power of real estate owners to stand additional taxation, and that any increase, which may be necessitated in the near future, must be derived from other sources.

Hints to the Charter Makers.

Pertinent suggestions can be gleaned from the news of the day by the committee engaged in revising the Charter. Commissioner Williams, of the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity, says the police could save the city a considerable sum annually by performing the simple service of turning on and off the street lamps, for which a corps of lamplighters are now paid. The suggestion has appealed to everybody as sensible and practicable, and has inspired the further suggestion that the police could do still other work for the city that now costs the taxpayers a great deal of money. Your modern policeman is a very intelligent man, he is well grounded in the laws and ordinances, and has had a good general education. He is in every way competent to take the school census, for example. He is, furthermore, as well or even better qualified to perform certain inspection duties than the inspectors now in the service, and he has plenty of time to do it in; and he would prefer unquestionably to perform duties which would increase public respect for his position in the world rather than be simply a watchman. Another body of employes that could easily add to their duties is to be found in the Fire Department. In fine, if the Charter revisers are sincerely desirous of reorganizing the municipal civil service and rightly apportioning the work, with a view to efficiency as well as economy, they can do considerable in that direction. While it may not be directly in the power of the Board of Estimate to accomplish fully such a reformation, under the existing laws of the State, so safely intrenched are some of the departments, the Board can do much toward it, and it can proclaim to the higher powers what further steps should be taken in order to end the economic oppression of the people.

City's Progress Toward Bankruptcy.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

In 1908 Mr. Edgar J. Levey, formerly Deputy Comptroller of the City of New York, in a pamphlet entitled "New York City's Progress Towards Bankruptcy," called attention to the ever-growing budget under which the city's finances staggered. Among other causes for this which he points out in his very able article he states as follows:

> The plain truth is that economy has not been popular and that extravagance has been. Extravagance has been popular not only with the innumerable grafting leeches always seeking to fatten on the city's purse, not only with the political organizations which obtain their sinews of war from the same source, and not only with the horde of superfluous employees who engorge the city's pay-rolls, but also it has been popular with those who seek gradually to lead the municipality into the perilous byways of socialistic paternalism, and those well-intentioned faddists who in their eagerness to advocate any new schemes of municipal betterment lend their influence unawares to the same end. Unfortunately, also, extravagance has been popular with the press, because positive programs of municipal development are interesting and possess news value, whereas economy with its more negative policies of self-denial is a dry and uninteresting subject to lay before newspaper readers.
> Taxpayers—always a small minority of the electorate—have been supine, and rent payers—which means the community at large—have dreamed blissfully in a fool's paradise that waste and extravagance concerned them not at all.
> So long as the mass of the voters retain their present attitude, it would be futile to expect the officials whom they elect—be they of whatsoever political affiliation—to rise to any perilous heights above the mass of the electorate. But once enable the people to understand—and by the people is meant not merely the taxpayers, but every voter and every voter's family, men, women and children—that the present path lies straightway towards municipal bankruptcy, from the effects of which no one can remain immune, rent payer no more than landlord—then and not until then may we look for a city administration pledged to reasonable economy, eager to secure it because it is the popular thing to do, and invincibly strengthened by the support of the people to withstand the pressure of special interests.

This rather lengthy quotation is made to show the attitude of the public towards economy then. Perhaps recent events have made it necessary for the public to change.

Since the writing of Mr. Levey's article many important reforms have been made which have tended to check the growth of the budget, but the process is exceedingly slow. The Real Estate Board and the United Real Estate owners, with commendable energy, have tried to effect decreases in the budget by pointing out to the Board of Estimate various items which, in their opinion, should be pruned.

The blazing of the way by such organizations is useful, because it helps to notify the community that something must and can be done, but, unfortunately, the whole subject is so involved in a mass of interlocking laws and regulations that the Board of Estimate is almost helpless as the law stands. A comprehensive survey of the whole situation, beginning with mandatory legislation, and ending with the economic conduct of the individual department and bureau, followed up by appeals to the Legislature and the Board of Estimate and the Board of Aldermen, must be made before any sweeping benefits can accrue. Until this is done, no matter how well intentioned the Board of Estimate and Apportionment may be, it will find itself hampered by mandatory laws and local restrictions which will nullify its efforts in a large measure.

It is true that the Board of Estimate could refuse these allowances in specific instances, but in the main the amounts asked for must be granted. Mandatory legislation has been complained of many times by the city authorities, who must pay the bills even though they protest against the laws. The Teachers' Equal Pay bill was passed by the Legislature over the protests of all the members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment except the Mayor, and approved by the Mayor and signed by the Governor. It added $3,000,000 to the budget the first year and the extra increment each year. It increased the pay of one class in the service (assistants to principals) $800 at one stroke. I cite this law simply as a sample without commenting on its merits.

I am not one of those who think that the city departments are clogged with employes who will not work and who are overpaid. It has been my experience that the majority are self-respecting, hard-working men. Much depends upon the head of the department. If he is alert and knows his business, his subordinates are the same. I believe, however, that some of the departments have too many men. They should not be dropped summarily, as many have spent years in the city's service and are likely to be more valuable than new men. They should be transferred to departments where they are needed and the city should stop taking on new men until the present supply is taken up.

It is futile to appeal to the Board of Estimate. The evil is more deeply seated. A general reform of our methods is necessary before any lasting good can come.

CYRUS C. MILLER.

The Cause and the Remedy.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Excessive taxation of Manhattan real estate has been the burden of complaint of property owners for many years, and yet but little if anything has been accomplished in relieving a situation that threatens the financial stability of the body politic, by destroying real estate values. Some other means of producing revenue must be devised.

When we reach the condition that taxes will rise above income, values will dwindle, and 95 per cent. of the revenue of the city being jeopardized, bankruptcy must ensue.

It would be well to consider first, the cause, and, second, to apply the remedy.

Real estate has always been considered stable, and heretofore has, in most cases, netted the owner a profit, over and above all deductions. Some years ago the Fire Department had a large control over tenements, and all complaints were centralized and disposed of by one department. Then came a new era, when many departments were formed, whose sole object was, not the improvement and betterment of real estate and its tenants, but to find berths for the faithful of the dominant political party.

The result has led to the introduction of many departments, and an army of subalterns, who have harassed property owners with notices, orders and commands, so as to delude the taxpayer into a belief that a strong necessity exists for the exercise of the functions of the various departments.

Heretofore, real estate has been regarded as legitimate prey to meet 95 per cent. of the budget. Values were raised, so as to sustain increased expenditures without increasing the tax rate. If the allied interests were to unite, the falsity of this method would be exposed and eventually other means found to relieve an otherwise intolerable condition. At this very moment the United States Government is confronted with the necessity of raising a large sum by direct taxes, in order to avoid a deficit, distributing its taxation so that it does not fall too heavily in any one direction. The result will be that the tax will not prove burdensome.

It is incumbent on the city administration that new sources of revenue should be singled out and utilized. Other sources of income should be provided by taxation and a revised system of tax revenue collections should be introduced that will relieve the almost ruinous raid on real estate, which in many cases is little short of confiscation.

The many departments should be consolidated under one responsible head, and the thousand and one political derelicts forced to seek other employment. If the departments were properly formed there would be a saving of many millions. Incidentally, the occupancy and use of buildings should be regulated by making the tenant comply with reasonable fire laws.

JOHN FINCK.

A Discrimination Against the East Side.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Realizing that no slight was intended by the New York City Railways Company, nor by the Municipal Ferry, to any one part of Manhattan, I wish notwithstanding to call attention the fact that in the new transfer across to Staten Island, the cars of the Lexington avenue line now run only to Bowling Green, though a short time ago some were sent to South Ferry.

The new surface car and ferry ride regulation means that a fare can be purchased to Staten Island only on such cars as run to South Ferry.

The same practice obtains on the northerly trip; that is, only the cars which start from South Ferry honor the ferry boat transfer, which now reads "good on Broadway, Columbus avenue, Sixth, Amsterdam and Eighth avenue lines."

Would it not be fair to the East Side that the Lexington avenue line should run, even under long headway, a car to South Ferry? At least conductors on that line could issue a ferry transfer which would be accepted on all cars at Bowling Green.

A READER.

Why Fight the World Alone?

Property owners in past years have too often fought their battles single handed when unity of interest demanded unity of action. In order to inaugurate a new policy of co-operative action, the Advisory Council of Real Estate interests has held conferences with the executive officials of the various taxpayers' associations for the purpose of thorough co-operation during the coming year. Unfortunately hasty action and premature criticism have too often worked to the prejudice of the righteous requirements and claims of the real estate owner.

By permitting just complaints and demands to flare up like flashes of powder in a pan instead of adopting a systematic and scientific method of presentment, reinforced with an irrefutable and indisputable array of facts, the cause of the property owner has been frequently unfairly criticized by the public, and consequently impaired by being placed in the unfavorable light of endeavoring to obstruct necessary public improvements.

Serious cases demand drastic remedies, provided it is reasonably certain that definite and effective results will be thereby accomplished. But false alarms, although well meant, have ocasionally been rung when the facts to be presented have not been carefully considered and there has been no careful study of the concrete propositions to be defended or criticized by property owners.

Nothing has reacted more unfavorably upon the real estate world at large than the utter collapse of the case of the property owner at public and private hearings upon some occasions in the past when protests were presented.

West Side Taxpayers Meet.

Frank Demuth was elected president of the West Side Taxpayers' Association at the meeting of the organization on Thursday evening at 267 West 34th street. He succeeds Dr. George Wenner who served for five years. The officers for the ensuing year will be Louis Schrag, first vice-president; Peter P. Cappel, second vice-president; Jacob J. Tabolt, secretary; Julius Neke, financial secretary; Frederick Keller, treasurer, and Charles Hvass, Christian Dohm and Thomas Burke, trustees.

The members discussed in detail the market question now occupying so much public attention. While no objection to the projects seemed apparent, most of the members were of the opinion that it would be more advisable to wait until the presently established market had really demonstrated worth before new ones were undertaken

Other business concerned the proposed sewer in West 46th street, which was recently rejected by the Local Board.

THE MORTGAGE MARKET.

Mutual Aid, Rather Than Mutual Pounding, Will Bring Best Results.

In commenting on the mortgage market situation since the outbreak of the war, Mr. Frank Bailey, Vice-President of the Title Guarantee & Trust Company, made the following very interesting statements:

"It is not at all discouraging. As in prior panics, it has been possible for this company to dispose of small mortgages with a constancy which has been most satisfactory. During the months of August and September, sales of mortgages by this company in Brooklyn amounted to $2,171,125. While this amount, of course, is below normal, and represents a substantial reduction of our average weekly sellings prior to the outbreak of the war, still the amount is very considerable, as practically none of these mortgages was sold at rates which would net the investor over five per cent.

"During this period, however, we have restricted our acceptances of new mortgages to those mortgages which have been called and were held by institutions which needed the funds for their current demands. Maturing mortgages which have been renewed by the owners, representing 95 per cent. of our maturing mortgages each month, have been renewed at 5½ per cent. in over 90 per cent. of the cases, while a few have asked 6 per cent., feeling that that rate was now obtainable. Many of the institutions, however, have taken the position that it is not the part of those who are entrusted with the funds of the people to press other people to the maximum amount obtainable because the rate of interest happens to be high at the time the mortgage matured.

"For instance, one of the largest savings banks in New York writes us this morning, as follows:

"'We are strongly of the opinion that the present is not the time to insist upon an advance in interest rates,' . . . and then authorizes us to renew the mortgage in question at the existing rate.

"I believe that moderation now will produce great fruits, and that the best advantage to all can be best conserved by mutual aid rather than by mutual pounding, and I am more than pleased with the patriotism of the people as a whole since the outbreak of the war as far as their money is concerned for it has been of a very high order and the improvement of the relations between the borrower and the lender, between capital and labor, between the captains of industry and the lieutenants and the masses as a whole, is now, in my judgment, in the way toward an improvement which two months have brought about. This improvement could not have been accomplished by years and reams of legislation."

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Washington Heights.

At a meeting of the local board on Tuesday, October 6, the following resolution was approved:

Amendment of resolution adopted on March 31, 1914, for re-regulating, regrading, etc., the service street on the easterly side of Riverside Drive from West 181st street to a point about 550 feet north in such a way as to carry the improvements for a distance of 585 feet rather than 550 feet, north of 181st street.

Chester District.

At a meeting of the local board of Chester, Tuesday, October 6, the following resolution was the only one adopted, all other resolutions being either laid over, withdrawn or denied:

No. 997. Constructing sewers and appurtenances in Rhinelander avenue, between Muliner avenue and Lurting Avenue; and in Neil avenue, between Bogart avenue and Hone avenue; and in Fowler avenue, between Neil avenue and Morris Park avenue; and in Bogart avenue, between Neil avenue and Morris Park avenue; and in Radcliffe avenue, between Brady avenue and the summit south of Rhinelander avenue; and in Colden avenue, between Neil avenue and Rhinelander avenue; and in Paulding avenue, between Neil avenue and Rhinelander avenue; and in Hone avenue, between Neil avenue and Rhinelander avenue; and in Matthews avenue, betwen Rhinelander avenue and the summit north of Neil avenue; and in Barnes avenue, between Rhinelander avenue and Neil avenue; and in Bear Swamp road (Bronxdale avenue) between Muliner avenue and Wallace avenue; and in Neil avenue, between Barnes avenue and Muliner avenue, together with all work incidental thereto.

Total estimated cost, $112,420. Assessed value of the real estate included within the probable area of assessment is $685,885. Estimated cost for each 25-foot lot where directly benefited, $125.

WOMEN'S AID SOUGHT.

Randall's Island Project Favored by Women's Municipal League.

The Women's Municipal League at 42 West 39th street, listened to an address on Tuesday afternoon by J. Bleecker Miller, in explanation of the proposed municipal central freight yard on Randall's Island together with the proposed subway freight railroad connecting all the boroughs of the city.

An interesting feature of the address was a comparison made by the speaker of the expense of the plans which has been proposed by Messrs. Bolton and Miller, with the estimate of expense based upon the plan contained in the report of the West Side Improvement Committee of the Board of Estimate, of which committee the present Mayor was chairman.

Mr. Miller showed that the expense of one would be about equal to that of the other, but that the Randall's Island project would have the advantage of contributing a waterfront of eight miles in length between 59th street and Spuyten Duyvil besides leaving free the streets in the present freight yards, extending from 59th to 72d streets, and the piers also within those limits.

Mrs. Bryant presided, and at the conclusion of the address a committee was appointed with power to exert the influence of the association in favor of the project.

Against the Single Tax.

Secretary Helms says the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests has determined to resist those forces in New York City which are striving earnestly and diligently to embody single tax principles in our present system of taxation, particularly with reference to untaxing improvements in New York City. No political work will be undertaken by the council but it will endeavor to present to its constituent organizations a concise and thorough brief upon the subject to be widely circulated. A comprehensive brief will also be submitted to the Mayor's Committee on Taxation. It is purposed later to suggest new sources of revenue outside of taxation on real estate to this committee, which has been formed to devise new forms of taxation. The council well appreciates the fact that the property owner is being weighted down with heavy tax burdens and that these burdens will undoubtedly become more onerous in the next few years. Consequently every effort has been made to co-operate with the Mayor's Committee on Taxation and present to it such points as may be adduced in favor of reducing the tax levy upon real estate.

Improvement in the Suburbs.

A strong evidence of the return of the realty market to a normal status is furnished by suburban operators. The sales of both houses and lots, while they do not show an unusual advance in volume, give indication of an active fall season. Throughout the summer months physical improvements have been under way, particularly as to roads, parkways and sidewalks. The various properties are now in excellent condition and most attractive to purchasers.

At Brentwood Park, Long Island, E. H. McWhorter is preparing for a very active season. Purchasers at this time who buy lots on the installment basis should have a large portion of their payments completed by early spring and will then be ready to commence building.

Proposed Suburban Fire Limits.

John M. Demarest, general manager of the Sage Foundation Homes Company, Forest Hills Gardens, considers that the proposed suburban limits principle does not go far enough. In a communication to the Building Committee he calls attention to the fact that at Forest Hills frame houses are prohibited, and continues:

"This best expresses our belief in the wisdom of masonry houses, both from an aesthetic and economical standpoint. I believe that the law should prohibit altogether, within the limits of the City of New York, the construction of frame houses."

Mr. Demarest believes that while there might be isolated cases in which the prohibition of frame structures would work a hardship, yet such cases could be provided for after investigation, and he sees no reason why such sections as Flatbush and Bay Ridge should be permitted to continue to build up with frame houses. He adds:

"I do not believe that the building up of large sections, like Flatbush, with frame houses is a safety to the public or a credit to the city, and just so long as the fire limits are confined as they are now, the speculative builder will take advantage of the opportunity to slap up frame houses and unload them on the public."

His personal experience as a builder, says Mr. Demarest, makes him believe that the additional cost of the masonry house does not mitigate against the sale of it in a section that offers greater fire protection, and he thinks the tendency of the builders today is to build masonry houses in frame house sections. He concludes:

"Since the interest in city planning has been stimulated to the extent, that it is now a consideration with every builder and developer, so with encouragement would the tendency of the public be to demand houses of better taste and masonry construction. Let the law help those who want to help the city and the people, and extend the fire limits."

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Fifth avenue, which furnished the leading transaction this week, still holds the center of interest. The large vacant plot, 74.1 x 125, at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 37th street, was sold this week to out-of-town capitalists at a reported price of $1,800,000. If this be the actual selling price the plot, which contains approximately 9,260 square feet, would have been sold at the rate of $194.33 a square foot, or about $24,300 per front foot. According to the land value maps published by the Record and Guide last week the front foot valuations were figured by the Tax Department at $14,000 a front foot for interior lots. While no definite plans regarding the improvement of this plot have been announced it is probable that a structure will be erected in keeping with the class of dwellings now typical of the greatest shopping center in the world.

The corner is in the heart of the retail center which has been established between 34th and 42nd streets. Within this radius are located such concerns as Franklin Simon & Company, Tiffany & Company, Lord & Taylor, Gorham Company, A. A. Vantine Company, James E. McCreery & Company, B. Altman & Company, Bonwit, Teller & Company and Stern Brothers. To these is soon to be added the Rogers Peet Company, and Arnold, Constable & Company.

Recent Bronx activity is reflected in the report of Register Edward Polak for the first nine months of the year, in which he gives a resumé of business transacted through his office. He reports that the total number of papers filed and recorded amount to 32,202, as follows: Conveyances recorded, 6,550; mortgages recorded, 7,209; miscellaneous papers, 105; chattel mortgages filed, 14,841; certified copies, 119; satisfaction of mortgages, 425; notaries' certificates filed, 1,607; commissioner of deeds certificates filed, 1,346. In addition, 208,570 folios have been recorded.

The fees in the Mortgage Tax Department amount to $123,498.82, and in the General Administration Department to $33 650.32, making the total fees $157,149.14. The register also reports the mortgage indebtedness is $35,530,887.87. Conveyances up to and including October 2, total number 5,853; number with consideration, 565; amount of consideration, $4,927,518.

County Clerk Leonard Ruoff, of Queens, also reported considerable activity as evidenced by the filed documents in that county during the month of September. There were recorded 921 deeds and 697 mortgages. The total value of the loans was less than 40 per cent. of the valuation of the land, indicating that buyers are retaining a good percentage of equity in their holdings. There were also filed 286 satisfactions of mortgages. At the office of John J. Hopper, Register of New York County, no recent reports could be obtained since that office has not been preparing quarterly statements of the business transacted.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 11 as against 18 last week and 15 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 6 as compared with 7 last week and 5 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 5 as compared with 11 last week and 10 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 97 as against 136 last week, 11 having stated considerations totaling $234,100. Mortgages recorded this week number 55, involving $1,812,750, as against 59 last week, totalling $1,187,663.

From the Bronx, 6 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 8 last week and 11 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $980,143, compared with $369,966 last week, making a total since January 1 of $32,280,797. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $311,470, and the total from January 1, 1913, to October 11, 1913, was $41,468,297.

Syndicate Buys Fifth Avenue Corner.

A newly-formed corporation known as the Murray Hill Investment Company, composed principally of New England capitalists, represented by the law firm of Olney & Comstock, have purchased from the heirs of the estate of Mary Lewis the vacant plot at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 37th street, fronting 74.1 feet on the avenue and 125 feet in the street. The broker was Alwyn Ball, Jr., of the firm of Frederick Southack & Alwyn Ball, Jr. The sellers were represented by Henry N. Taft, as attorney. The consideration is said to have been about $1,800,000, and if the twelve story building which is said to be contemplated, is erected, the transaction will mean an investment of about $2,600,000. The Lewis family acquired the property in 1885 from the estate of Edwin D. Morgan for a stated consideration of $385,000, which is less than a quarter of the present reported selling price. The property has been on the market since the old Morgan house and the adjoining dwellings were razed, about four years ago, and although frequent offers were made for the property it is understood that it was being held at $2,000,000.

Charles F. Noyes Company negotiated the sale for the St. Johns Park Realty Co., James H. Cruikshank and Wm. D. Kilpatrick, of the six-story loft buildings at 24-26 White street and 25 Walker street. The purchaser is William McKinny, who gave in part payment a four-story apartment house at 71 Brooklyn avenue, corner of Pacific street. The total transaction amounted to about $200,000. The White and Walker street buildings cover a plot of 6,630 sq. ft., are six stories high and were purchased by Messrs. Cruikshank and Kilpatrick through the Noyes Company last spring in a $350,000 deal with the Colonial and Manhattan Real Estate Associations.

Modern Improvements

Isn't it true that ofttimes some small modern improvement goes a long way towards selling and renting your houses?

Take for example the plan that has recently been adopted by some builders of placing in newly built apartment houses electric washing machines and outlets in the kitchen for electric ironing and cooking.

Does any one doubt, all other things being equal, that these apartments are the ones that will be sold or rented first?

Families of today are educated to demand the comforts and conveniences of electric service, and they are quick to see the advantage of living in an apartment that will minimize the drudgery of housekeeping.

We have other ideas along these same lines. Drop us a line and we will talk them over with you.

THE DIFFICULT PROBLEM OF MOVING "THE SUN"

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

SOME idea of the burdens that are sometimes thrust upon building managers and engineers may be gleaned from the experiences of the operators of the American Tract Society Building in remodelling a liberal portion of that pioneer among New York skyscraper office buildings into a modern fireproof twenty-four-hour-a-day newspaper plant. The mere fact that the operation entails the tearing out of an isolation plant for the Edison system yet keeping the elevator, heating and water supply services in continuous operation for hundreds of tenants would be enough to stagger resourcefulness of many experts.

The Sun Printing and Publishing Association is going to move around the corner and will occupy the sub-basement, basement, second, third, fourth and fifth floors now indicated to the passer-by in Newspaper Row by resonant window chutes vomiting brick and stone and terra cotta by the ton. The concern has taken a lease, through the New York Life Insurance Company, possessors in mortgage, with privilege of renewal at a figure in gross rental that seems to justify the expenditure required to make room for the new boarder in the A. T. S. household.

Time of Possession in Doubt.

George J. Miller, chief engineer and superintendent of the Sun's new home, says he expected to have the plant in and growing by the first of the year, but when he came to order his steel for spanning the light court five floors, he found that a different type of girder is being used today than builders employed in 1895 when the building was put up and he had to dig the columns out of solid masonry all the way up from the basement to the fifth floor to measure the bolt holes, gauge the webs and allow for cutting off the trellis work to make way for the new 15-foot double-I beams that will have to carry the floor loads required by the new tenants.

Then came the problem of moving all the risers in the building, for water, gas, steam and electricity, the shifting of floor mains and toilets, the readjustment of the elevator service and finally, but by no means least, the entire dismantling of what, in its day, was the star isolated plant of the city. Even the motive power of the elevators has to be changed from inverted hydraulic to overhead electric traction. Such mere details as the moving of some hundreds of tons of old book plates, the property of the American Tract Society, in some 6,000 packing cases, were merely incidental. When an obstinate tenant refused to make room and the kind of diplomacy, that in other countries seems to be at a premium, was called for in order to induce action, the fact that the tenant ultimately shifted his quarters in the same building was merely placed in the category of routine work and was soon forgotten.

Shifting Heating System in Autumn.

The heating equipment of the building alone called for some engineering skill because The Sun did not decide to move until recently. To shift a heating plant in October requires considerable courage, but Dennison & Co., through J. Milton Horner and George J. Miller, has the undertaking in hand.

George J. himself admits that the job he has tackled is bigger than he thought it would be. He forgot that as The Sun moves it brings changes with it. In tearing out the partitions he found what today is a rarity—wrought iron pipe. Everything is steel now because it is cheaper to make and sounds stronger. He also found that risers of this kind of pipe, hanging steadily since two years before the Spanish war reflected the practically unnoticed vibration that exists in buildings, especially those that are near the subway, by evidences of crystallization and electrolysis in water, gas and steam pipes.

To Remove 3,000 Partitions.

All this piping has got to be shifted. Where risers came down alongside of the 3,000 odd partitions that are going to be ripped out to make lofts of the first five floors they have got to be disconnected and moved over to the sidewalls of the building. Two new entrances on Spruce street will be erected exclusively for the Sun's three eight-hour shifts of editors, reporters, telegraphers, monotypists and casters, stereotypers, proofreaders, monoplaters, pressmen, and others.

There are a great many people who think that this is only a temporary shift of The Sun; that it is only going to move into the present building until its own home is completed, but the management of the American Tract Society Building says it has a ten-year lease and The Sun wants a chance to stay there longer at the close of 1924, so evidently such a little matter as changing the entire character of an office building into part loft and offices is fully warranted.

Building Managers Meet.

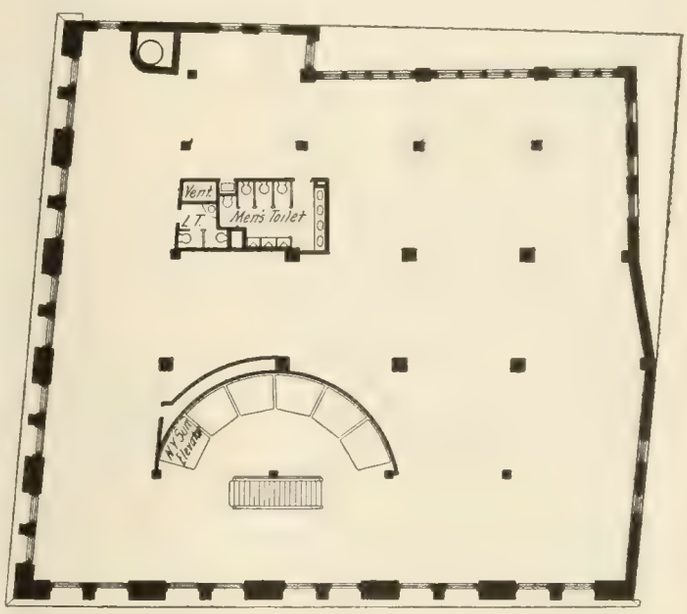
The New York Building Managers' Association held its first meeting of the autumn, last Tuesday evening, at the Underwriters' Club, 16 Liberty street, at which a dinner was served and addresses made by Rudolph P. Miller and Abram I. Elkus. About seventy-five persons were present.



Mr. Miller called attention to the fact that the conflict of jurisdiction over structures of various city departments is a real one and cited cases of plumbing and drainage in buildings in which case the Bureau of Buildings is directed by law to prepare rules for the installation of plumbing in all buildings and to enforce the same. At the same time the Tenement House Department makes certain requirements as to plumbing in tenement houses, and as a matter of fact this department is issuing orders with respect to plumbing. The Health Department, in the Sanitary Code, has a number of provisions affecting plumbing and the Labor Department has certain jurisdiction over plumbing in factories. Similar condition exist to some extent in matter of elevator installation and other things.

Mr. Elkus took the same stand as Mr. Miller, holding that with one department formed money would be saved and the present unsatisfactory conditions eliminated. The taxpayer should receive consideration outside of expense and should get a clean bill of health in one place. The five boroughs should be under one head and the inspectors interchangeable from one borough to another.

At the meeting legislation was proposed and hearings will be held. A committee was formed consisting of Raymond P. Roberts, chairman; C. T. Coley, A. C. Bangs, F. S. Bancroft and Charles B. Best.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

Bag-on-the-Handle Vacuum Cleaner.

VACUUM cleaners of the outside bag type have recently been placed on the market by the Western Electric Company, and embody new and distinctive features that should make it of use in apartments, hotels and residences.

A new type of frame construction for the bag, not only permits the use of a horizontal handle—the most natural and convenient grip for pushing a cleaner—but enables the cleaner to be hung on a clothes hook in the closet when not in use. The controlling switch is mounted on the handle directly under the normal position of the right hand, a most convenient position for instant control. Both are shown in the accompanying illustration. A third feature, and one of the most important improvements, is an ingenious arrangement incorporated in the cleaning tool for picking up loose threads.

Gas-Steam Heating.

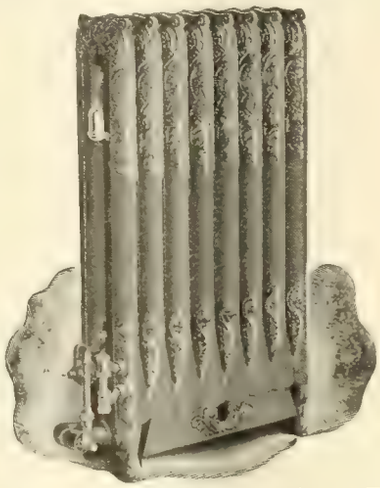
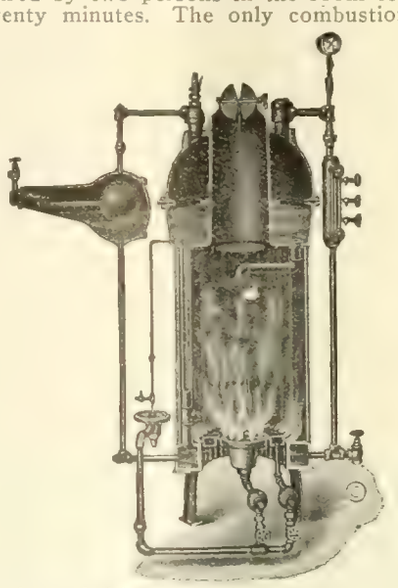
BY the use of a new type of radiator it is now possible to have a central heating plant simultaneously with an auxiliary heater in every room in the house regardless of its size or exposure. If only one room in the house requires heating it is necessary to employ the full central plant capacity. All that is required is to touch a match under a radiator, which may be of the steam or of the hot water variety, and within thirty seconds the radiator is giving forth a higher percentage of heat than would be possible from the use of the full central heating equipment.



Furthermore, the system goes so far as to supplant the ordinary dwelling-house coal furnace by gas firing with a consumption of not more than 1½ feet of gas per second per house for a twenty-four hour day. Illustrated herewith is this new type of gas heater boiler and the two types of radiators being introduced in this part of the country by the Eastern Gas Appliance Company, of 47 West 42d street.

Both radiators, made of cast iron, are identical. Water is inserted in the lower part of the radiator over a system of gas jets to a depth of about one inch. From this water 4½ pounds of steam pressure is produced in twenty minutes. The steam pressure automatically reduces and regulates the gas flow, which after the first twenty minutes is very small.



A minimum of gas consumption maintains the radiator at its maximum of heating efficiency. A gauge glass indicates the amount of water in the radiator. When the water becomes low it may be replenished by screwing off a cap and pouring in more water.

The system is known as the Clow Gas-Steam Radiation. It uses less than two per cent. of the air to induce combustion, a negligible quantity. The amount of gas required in maintaining the radiator is moderate, the oxygen consumption being not more than that required by two persons in the room for twenty minutes. The only combustion product of this system is one-quarter of one per cent. of $CO_2$, or, in other words, 25 parts in 10,000 parts of air, which is said to be harmless.

The advantages claimed for this system of heating include the following: the ability to heat one room or several rooms without wasting heat-producing power; the elimination of danger from fire because there are no pipes through the walls to become overheated; the safety against explosion by the control of the gas through steam pressure itself, and the great saving in the cost of cleaning up dirt, removing ashes and more or less attendance required for coal furnaces. By this system every tenant in the building has heat exactly as he wants it and is not dependent upon his neighboring tenants' whims or desires.

In the use of the gas furnace the manufacturers claim that there is a saving of 25 per cent. in fuel cost alone. This is quickly applicable in dwellings as well as in apartment houses. The construction of the central gas generated furnace is simple and repairs are easily made.

New Parallel Door Lock.

INCREASING use of parallel doors in residences and other types of buildings has given rise to a demand for an entirely satisfactory locking device, especially for garage doors. This has induced the Richards-Wilcox Co., of Aurora, Ill., to perfect and introduce the type of lock shown in the two accompanying cuts. One of these shows the parallel door lock in full view, while the other gives a phantom view of its operation in the door. By the use of this lock it is a physical impossibility to attack it successfully in attempt to open it once that it has been closed.

This lock is designed especially for parallel doors operating on parallel tracks, but it may be used on single doors by inserting the keeper casting on the jamb on the side wall. The lock in operation is inserted in the stile of the door, the key or bolt passing entirely through the stile on the inside track and into the keeper in the stile of the outside door. When used on single door this bolt passes into a keeper inserted in the jamb. By turning the handle the doors are drawn together and held in that position by a stop lug resting in a notched section of the plate.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

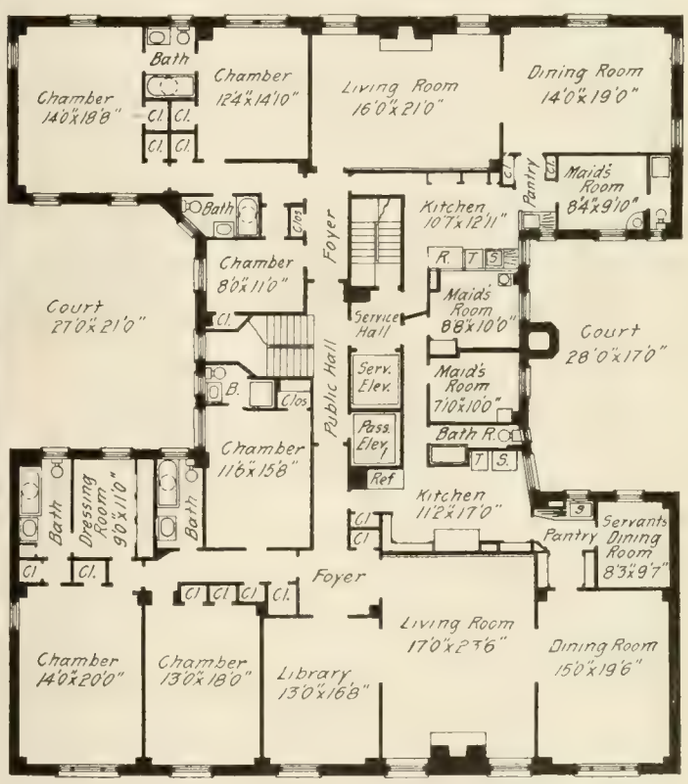
Interesting Project in the Upper Park Avenue Section—Every Device Installed For Comfort and Convenience of Tenants

PARK avenue with its environs is steadily being improved and the changes wrought are affecting an entire district. The neighborhood has changed during the last five years to a residential district and property values and rentals have increased correspondingly in a remarkable degree. A new project is now under construction. This improvement is in the form of a modern apartment house of the highest type which is being erected at 43-47 East 62d street, on a plot which adjoins the site of the proposed new building for the exclusive Colony Club. The Sixty-second Street Company, E. Clifford Potter president, 30 East 42d street, is the owner, and the plans and specifications were prepared by Rouse & Goldstone, architects, 40 East 32d street. Chauncey Matlock, 30 East 42d street, is the consulting mechanical engineer and the construction is under the direction of A. L. Mordecai & Sons, 30 East 42d street, general contractors.



Rouse & Goldstone, Architects.
NOS. 43-47 EAST 62D STREET.

This new apartment will be nine stories in height and, with the exception of the ground floor, the suites are arranged for two families to the floor, in front and rear apartments. The front apartments, consisting of eleven rooms, four baths, foyer, pantry and sixteen closets, are complete in every respect. The rear apartments consist of seven rooms, three baths, foyer, pantry and eight closets, smaller in size, but as perfect in detail as the front suites.

The facade of this new structure is designed in a very simple Colonial manner with mullioned windows and ornamental iron railings. The material used is brick with buff Indiana limestone trimmings. This design harmonizes perfectly with that proposed for the new Colony Club, which is also strictly Colonial in character. Construction is fireproof throughout with floors of reinforced concrete.

All the comforts and conveniences of an ordinary house, combined with many innovations and labor saving devices found only in modern multi-family houses, will be included in this building. Rooms are exceptionally large. In fact they are as large and in some instances larger than those often found in many fine urban residences. In the front apartments are found rooms forming as complete a unit as can possibly be desired. The principal room is a living-room of generous size. One of the features of the room is that provisions have been made for a real log-burning fire-place. A sound-proof partition divides this room from the service portion of the apartment, guarding against noise made by servants.

From the living-room, entrance is had to the library on one side and to the dining-room on the other. These rooms are of good size and proportions and well lighted. There are three master bed-chambers each with a bath, one dressing-room, with built-in wardrobe, kitchen, large pantry, servants' dining-room, and two servants' bedrooms. The servants' bedrooms each have individual wash basins and a bathroom is located in close proximity.

SHOWING ARRANGEMENTS OF ROOMS.

The rear of seven-room apartments differ only in the number of rooms provided which are, in a few instances, slightly smaller in size. In appointments they are the same. Commodious built-in closets, dressers and wardrobes are a distinct feature of this structure, as it is in this respect that the chief complaint is lodged in regard to apartment house living.

Interior courts are provided to supply abundance of light and ventilation to the service portion of these suites. In one instance only does a principal room have an outlook on this court, that being a bedroom in the larger suites. The courts are larger than those ordinarily found in apartments, being 21x27 feet and 28x17 feet respectively, finished in white glazed enameled brick. Two electric elevators are to be installed, one for passengers, which is entered only from the public hall, and one combination service and freight lift, which serves only the service portions of the apartments. A separate service staircase is also provided.

Master bathrooms are equipped in all instances with full-sized tubs, and shower baths will be installed in each. The plumbing fixtures are of the highest type procurable, and are well designed. Each bathroom has a built-in medicine cabinet and is completely furnished as regards toilet accessories. These are of brass, heavily nickel plated. The rear apartments have for an outlook the yards of private houses, assuring practically permanent light and air.

Much care will be taken in the trim, finish and decoration of each separate apartment. Woodwork will be of the finest, and various rooms will be treated in different woods and finishes. The floors will be of hardwood parquet throughout the principal rooms. The wall hangings decorative painting, lighting fixtures, however, will be left to the taste of the tenants of each apartment who will make their own selections of color combinations, materials and design. The management and rental of this structure will be under the direction of Douglas L. Elliman & Company, agents.

—Yonkers is busy with building operations. Twenty-seven permits in August. Plans are in preparation for the new theatre on South Broadway, the new Y. M. C. A., the Halstead School and the Masonic Temple. These jobs with several others are alone estimated to represent an investment of a million dollars.

—One purchasing real property is bound to take notice of the claims of one in possession.

NINE MONTHS OF BUILDING CONSTRUCTION

Comparative Table of Plans Filed in Five Boroughs Since January 1—Brooklyn Shows Increase of 847 Buildings.

THE record of building operations according to the revised figures of the Building Superintendents of the five boroughs, for the first nine months of 1914, closed with $104,749,495 to be expended, as compared with $110,097,958 for the corresponding nine months of 1913. The number of new buildings exceeded those filed in 1913 by 888. In Manhattan the decrease in specified cost over last year was $13,729,145, numbering 124 buildings, the falling off being chiefly in dwellings, costing over $50,000, stores and lofts, costing over $30,000, public buildings, places of amusement, stables and garages and other structures.

In the Bronx the decrease was 99 buildings, costing $3,533,099, showing principally that fewer brick tenements costing over $15,000, public buildings, places of amusement, stables and garages and frame dwellings are to be erected, although there was a large gain in the last three months in the Bronx, over the corresponding three months of 1913, by 47 buildings, costing $1,835,515, the increase being in brick tenements, costing over $15,000, and brick dwellings costing less than $20,000.

Brooklyn Shows Gain.

Brooklyn, which leads the five boroughs, shows a large gain over the same period of last year by 847 buildings that are being projected, to cost $9,515,294, the increase being in dwellings for one and two families, tenements costing between $20,000 and $50,000, stores and two-family apartments, public buildings and places of amusement. With building operations under way involving hundreds of thousands of dollars and a steady demand for flats and dwellings to justify this expenditure, Brooklyn real estate men, builders and owners are expecting a continuance of operations especially in the section of the borough which extends along both sides of Myrtle avenue into Queens and including the Fresh Pond road district.

Among the latest plans being prepared are nine residences in the west side of East 23d street, south of Vanderveer place, for the Charles Goell Construction Company; six brick residences on Voorhies avenue for Charles Lindebaum, nine residences at the northeast corner of Sixth avenue and 80th street for the Henry Roth Building Co., and tenements on Seventh avenue for the Hynes Real Estate Co. The Warwick Improvement Co., several apartments on Warwick street; the Idan Holding Company, tenements at Glenmore and Georgia avenues; S. & R. Realty Co., tenements on Hopkinson avenue, and the Wyler Construction Co., tenements on Lincoln place.

In Queens there was a decrease of $2,338,894 in the amount to be expended, and a falling off of 132 buildings, but alteration projects show a substantial gain over last year by 621 buildings, costing $243,192.

Richmond also continues to show a steady growth, the increased number of new buildings being 132 more than last year, with $56,593 more to be expended.

The following tables show the number and estimated cost of new buildings and alterations for which plans were filed according to the revised figures of the Building Bureaus, after allowing for the plans withdrawn and revised.

Architects Organize for War Relief.

The American Artists' Committee, made up of sculptors, painters, architects and other art workers, has been organized to raise funds for the immediate relief of families of the soldier-artists now serving with the French armies. On the committee among others are Daniel Chester French, Charles Dana Gibson, Cass Gilbert, Herbert Adams, J. William Fosdick, Louis C. Tiffany, Maitland Armstrong and J. Carroll Beckwith. This committee, which is composed mostly of members of the National Academy of Design, has established a headquarters in the American Fine Arts Building, 215 West 57th street. William Bailey Faxon is the treasurer.

Another appeal for the same purpose is made by a committee, the personnel of which includes Henry F. Hornbostel, president of the Society of Beaux Arts Architects; William T. Dannat, president of the Paris Society of American Painters; J. William Fosdick, president of the Société des Anciens de l'Academie Julian, and Joseph H. Freedlander, president of the American Group of Architects Diplomaed by The French Government. This committee is also affiliated with the brotherhood in Paris.

Hell Gate Bridge.

The masonry for Hell Gate Bridge, including the piers and abutments, has been largely completed and the steel work has been carried forward from grade at the north end to the Bronx Kills, where they are erecting the false work for the bridge over the Kills. No steelwork has yet been placed beyond that point. More than 100,000 tons of steel will be used altogether.

The bridge begins at 138th street in the Bronx and crosses the Bronx Kills on concrete piers of from fifty to seventy-five feet in height. The viaduct in Queens extends easterly to Second avenue in Long Island City, the streets being arched over with concrete. The bridge will terminate at Stemler avenue in Long Island City, the tracks being carried from that point upon an earthen embankment to the Sunnyside yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The bridge will join the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad with those of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, thus connecting the Boroughs of Queens and Brooklyn directly with New England and the West.

FIRE PREVENTNON DAY.—Friday being Fire Prevention Day, appropriate exercises were held at the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings. At nine o'clock the corps of inspectors assembled at their regular meeting place on the 22d floor of the Municipal Building, about two hundred and fifty in all. Acting Supt. Frederick H. Dewey presided and introduced the former Superintendent, Mr. Rudolph P. Miller, who is president of New York Chapter of the National Fire Prevention Association. In a brief address Mr. Miller called attention to the importance of the day. He said that as the first step in fire prevention was the safe construction of buildings, it was especially appropriate that the Bureau of Buildings should observe it as well as the Fire Department. The next speaker was Edward R. Hardy, of the Fire Insurance Exchange, who is Secretary of New York Chapter of the National Fire Prevention Association. Mr. Hardy made an address which greatly interested his hearers as building experts and business men. He maintained that everything destroyed by fire represented absolute waste. The losses paid by insurance companies simply represented sums chipped in by a lot of people. The annual fire losses in the United States are as large as they were fifty years ago. There was not the same fear of a conflagration in New York as there was in San Francisco and Chicago because we have not had a great fire here since 1845. The total annual fire loss in the Unidted States would support the municipal government in New York for a year without any tax levy. Mr. Hardy figured that the people of New York City were paying fifty million dollars a year directly and indirectlly on account of fires.

EXISTING FIRE-ESCAPES.

The New Rule Considered a Concession to Property Owners.

In answer to an inquiry in reference to Rule 380, of the Industrial Board, relating to existing fire-escapes which do not serve as required means of exits, George W. Olvany, special council of the Real Estate Board, has written an opinion commending the rule as in favor of real estate owners. The rule reads as follows:

Rule 380.—When, in addition to the required exits of any factory or factory building, there exist one or more outside fire escapes which are not entirely in accordance with the provisions of the Labor Law relating to fire escapes, such fire escapes may be retained without being changed to conform to such provisions, if steps are taken, satisfactory to the Commissioner of Labor, to prevent their use as means of egress, and provided that such fire escapes are maintained in good repair.

Mr. Olvany says: "The Labor Department had been issuing orders to the effect that all outside fire-escapes be made to comply with the law relating to fire escapes, irrespective as to whether they served as required means of exit or not, and the consequence was that the owners of buildings upon which there were these extra means of exit, instead of complying with the law, because of the heavy expense, annoyance and sacrifice to do so (in some cases an expenditure of $5,000 to $10,000 would be necessary, involving the fireproofing of all windows on the course of the fire escape, stairway to roof and to bottom landing, and a fireproof passage from the rear of the building to the street) began to take down these fire escapes, and the Fire Department immediately filed a protest on the ground that one of the best means of fighting a fire was being taken away.

"The counsel for the New York State Factory Investigating Commission stated to the Industrial Board of the Department of Labor upon the hearing on this rule that it was not the intention of the commission to include fire escapes not used as required exits in the general requirements for fire escapes which were so used.

"The construction placed upon this provision of the law is certainly very much in the favor of the real estate owner as it only requires him to maintain the fire escape itself in good repair, which can be done at a very nominal expense, and affords a most advantageous means to the Fire Department to extinguish a fire which may occur in the building.

"Instead of being a menace to the occupants, it might in the event of all the required means of exits being cut off by fire or smoke allow a possible escape.

"The placing of the sign, 'This is not an exit,' and the giving of a notice to that effect to the employees, ought to be a sufficient warning that such a fire escape must not be used as an exit except as a last means of escape.

"Therefore the rule, in my opinion, should be praised rather than condemned by the real estate owners."

Subway Progress.

According to the progress reports for September made by the division engineers to Alfred Craven, Chief Engineer of the Public Service Commission, there are now about 17,000 men engaged in construction work on the Dual System subway and elevated railroad contracts. Of this total about 14,000 are employed by contractors building the lines to be owned by the city and about 3,000 by contractors building the elevated extensions and additions to be owned by the companies.

The Dual System is divided by the commission into 83 contract sections. Contracts have been awarded for 59 of these sections, leaving only 24 yet to be made. Of those already awarded 31 are on lines to be operated by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and 28 on lines to be operated by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation. Of those remaining to be let, 8 are on Interborough lines and 16 on New York Municipal lines, the latter including 6 sections of the Eastern District route. All told, the City of New York now has outstanding contracts for Dual System construction on city-owned lines aggregating $140,516,385.38, of which $69,462,918.84 is on lines for operation by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and $71,073,466.54 on the New York Municipal lines.

Roughly speaking, the Dual System agreements call for the construction of about 80 miles of new subway and elevated roads on city-owned lines, with about 260 miles of single track. The contracts already let cover about 50 miles of the total road mileage, so that it may be said that about five-eights of the contracts on city-owned lines have been awarded.

WHAT NEW YORKERS WORK AT.

Twenty Thousand Engaged in Real Estate and Insurance.

Forty-five per cent. of the total population of New York City were engaged in gainful occupations when the last national census was taken, in 1910. Eighty-two per cent. of all the males and 30 per cent. of all the females were so employed.

The 2,152,433 gainful workers in 1910 were distributed among the main branches of occupations as follows: Agriculture, forestry and animal husbandry, 9,950, or 0.5 per cent.; extraction of minerals, 886, or less than one-tenth of 1 per cent.; manufacturing and mechanical industries, 873,497, or 40.6 per cent.; transportation, 169,834, or 7.9 per cent.; trade, 361,053, or 16.8 per cent.; public service, 41,004, or 1.9 per cent.; professional services, 127,39[illegible], or 5.9 per cent.; domestic and personal service, 333,954, or 15.5 per cent., and clerical occupations, 234,860, or 10.9 per cent.

The Building Trades.

There were 15,000 builders and building contractors, 15,800 brick and stone masons, 41,400 carpenters, 15,500 electricians, 14,800 stationary engineers, 24,000 machinists and millwrights, 27,100 painters, 6,300 plasterers and 19,500 plumbers, 5,700 helpers in the building trades, and 35,000 general laborers.

Real estate agents and officials numbered 12,800, insurance agents and officials 8,000.

There were 33,700 bookkeepers, cashiers and accountants; 84,600 clerks in stores, 87,800 other clerks, 16,800 typesetters and linotypers, 7,500 elevator runners, 39,700 teamsters and expressmen, 10,500 lawyers and judges, 10,600 policemen, 107,300 retail dealers, 10,900 commercial travelers, 66,400 salesmen in stores, 4,200 saloon keepers, 6,342 male stenographers and typewriters, 49,200 tailors, 5,641 teachers, 20,650 waiters, 7,700 wholesale dealers, importers and exporters.

Women Workers.

Among women and girls there were 65,000 sewers and sewing machine operators, 3,700 actors, 6,700 boarding-house keepers, 19,400 clerks, 7,500 housekeepers and stewardesses, 21,600 bookkeepers and accountants, 10,400 janitors, 5,800 laundry operators, 12,000 milliners and millinery dealers, 5,800 musicians and leaders of music, 27,700 saleswomen, 113,400 servants, 33,700 stenographers and typewriters, 21,680 school teachers, 7,300 telephone operators, 7,500 trained nurses, 8,950 waitreses.

Eastern Parkway Trees.

The preservation of the trees in Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, is assured by a change in the plans for the Eastern Parkway subway recently recommended by Alfred Craven, Chief Engineer of the Public Service Commission. Mr. Craven's staff has been making a study of this situation for months in response to requests of prominent citizens and civic associations of Brooklyn, who made strong pleas for the preservation of the trees along the route. The new plan is to narrow the subway structure which passes through Eastern Parkway by making it a double-deck railroad, that is, instead of having four tracks on one level there will be two tracks over two tracks.

FIRST NINE MONTHS OF YEAR SHOW GAIN IN PROJECTED OPERATIONS OF 888, BUT WITH SLIGHT LOSS IN VALUE

Money Shows Signs of Loosening—
Portland Cement—Plan Filing Gains

DEVELOPMENTS in the autumn situation in the metropolitan district indicate a tendency toward loosening of building money. The continued closing of other securities markets has thrown a large volume of money into mortgage and building investments. The European war has not disastrously affected building projects.

Comparing September of this year with the same month last year in building activity, Bradstreet's shows a current decrease of 33.5 per cent. in 121 cities. When it is recalled that September, 1913, showed a gain of 11 per cent., this makes a net decrease in September, 1914, of only 22.5 per cent., despite the unsettling of finances by the European war, since August 1. September showed a decrease of only 16.6 per cent. from August. The third quarter shows a loss of only 10 per cent. from the same period last year and the nine months just closed is but 8.2 per cent. below the record of the first nine months in 1913 which was 5 per cent. behind the same period in 1912. Chicago reports a decrease of 37 per cent. from last year in September, so New York has not fared so badly. St. Paul showed a gain of 209 per cent. Denver a gain of 241 per cent. and Cleveland 9 per cent.

Although the current year contained the worst two months the American real estate and finance markets have ever known, the first nine months close with a net gain over the total number of new building plans filed in the same period last year of 888, although there was a loss in value for all boroughs for 1914 of $5,348,463.

This recession in value may be credited in large part, if not entirely, to the extremely low price of basic building material during the current year. For instance, the average wholesale price of common red brick in the first nine months of 1913 was $6.75 a thousand. This year it was $5.25. Structural steel last year was 1.46c., while this year it was averaged about 1.31c. Portland cement was rigid at $1.58, in carload lots, N. Y., while this year it has been seriously cut. Lumber was higher in practically all departments last year. It is a conservative estimate that the loss accredited to values for the entire city this year would be changed to an actual gain of at least $2,000,000 on 888 buildings, if material prices used in making estimates of cost had been identical with those prevailing when the architects were figuring last year's plans.

The significance of these figures would seem to be that manufacturing centers showed the greatest expansion, that the industrial labor centers are shifting from the high rent boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx to the lower rent areas of the suburbs. East Jersey doubtless reflects this tendency, judging from the large numbers of factory extensions that have been reported within the metropolitan district, many manufacturers moving their plants and taking their help across the Hudson to escape the drastic city and state factory laws now operative here.

If there has been any tightness in building money during the last nine months it has been for office, loft and apartment house construction, all of them types of buildings quickly affected by any change in business activity in general. Factories, manufacturing buildings, such as ice and steam plants; industrial and small house construction are the preponderant factors in the building statistics of this year, while hotel, apartment and loft building construction and high-class suburban construction featured last year's statistics. The inference capable of being drawn from this condition of the building market in the light of the disturbed state of finances is that American business is aggressively laying plans to take to itself any commercial opportunity that may arise in its industrial life through the war in Europe.

Plan filings in all boroughs for the week compared with those of last week follow: Total number of new buildings projected in all boroughs in the corresponding week last year, 153, valued at $1,448,013.

| | Week Ending Oct 2 | | Oct 9 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | No | Value | No | Value |
| Manhattan | 7 | $1,820,500 | 5 | $1,775,000 |
| Bronx | 5 | 11,800 | 5 | 11,800 |
| Brooklyn | 92 | 534,800 | 70 | 315,200 |
| Queens | 50 | 135,655 | 71 | 134,300 |
| Richmond | 21 | 37,785 | 13 | 9,745 |

STRUCTURAL STEEL.
Drop in Low Level, But High Level Is Still Quoted.

STRUCTURAL STEEL succumbed to the pressure of competition this week and was quoted 1.26@1.36c., a drop of five cents on the low level. Heretofore the quotations has ranged from 1.31 to 1.36c. Fabricators in Newark, Richmond, Long Island City and Brooklyn all complain of high pressure competition, one concern stating that he bid on a job at what he considered cost and was beaten by another concern by several thousand dollars. During September it seemed to be a case with many fabricators of keeping their organizations together until the fall building operations got more fully under way.

Wire products are holding up firmly and so is the equipment market, but only on steel. Pig iron sales have been small to moderate with little interest being displayed even at the present low prices by steel mills for supplies. Prices current for shipments over the fourth quarter of 1914 run at 15@15.25 for No. 1 X foundry northern with basic at 14 00 flat. Both the steel and iron markets are dull and heavy.

LUMBER.
Consumption Only Slightly Below Last Year's Record in Queens and Brooklyn.

ADVICES from the local distributing yards in Queens and Brooklyn indicate that the volume of lumber moving so far this year is only slightly below the total moving in the corresponding period last year. The building situation in the five boroughs shows a gain in the number of permits filed up to and including September 18 of 1,016 over the same period last year and a gain in value of $898,713. This activity is reflected largely in purchases of lumber by local yards for stock. There has been a gain of 15 per cent. in lumber buying by dealers in Brooklyn and Queens. The Bronx shows a loss of 20 per cent., while Manhattan indicates an increase of about 20 per cent.

This increase for Manhattan, however, does not represent building grades. It is due to the tremendous amount of timber used for shoring and street surfacing incidental to the construction of subways. In building grades there is a decrease in demand for Manhattan and the Bronx of about 35 per cent. This decrease has not been taken up entirely by other building materials, proving that there has been a reaction in building construction in that borough.

According to advices in the wholesale market, spruce has moved only moderately, and cargoes of dimension from the East are held at $18 to $23, and lath from the East by cargo seem to be a shade weaker, due to heavy receipts, and are quoted to-day at $3.80 to $3.90.

In other lines there appears to be practically no quotable changes. The long and short-leaf yellow pine mills are curtailing their operations wherever possible, in an effort to steady the market; and the hardwoods, while going through an exceptionally dull month, seem to be getting into their stride again and doing somewhat better than in early August.

PORTLAND CEMENT.
Prices Slightly Lower—Works Operating at 80 Per Cent.

ACCORDING to information available in the local market this week, there is slight weakening in the price of Portland cement at mill, owing to large supplies on hand. This brings the price in the New York market at a level which is somewhat shaded from the 1.58 quotation ruling a month ago.

Most of the companies report current sales off about 10 per cent. Shipments, however, have been about normal. Some of the largest companies are operating more than 80 per cent. of capacity. The weakening in prices being much in the nature of concessions, many of the smaller companies have been shading quotations, and this has made necessary some action by the larger manufacturers.

Reaction is anticipated when those who are cutting prices today attempt to benefit from the rebound on the ground that dealers will probably insist upon continuing to get cement at the prices now being charged. The experience of the brick manufacturers in this market during the last few years with respect to price cutting may be that of the cement companies who are now stimulating business by sacrificing profits.

As far as the national movement is concerned, construction work is requiring less cement, but road construction is taking up the slack. Germany and Belgium have been the principal exporters of cement in the past, and England has also been a factor, but hope of diverting some of this business into American manufactories is responsible for the comparatively large capacity now being operated.

An estimate of the total quantity of Portland cement manufactured in the United States this year, judging by the capacity employed at the leading mills, will run up about 97,000,000 barrels, with shipments about equivalent to last year's total productions, which was approximately 93,000,000 barrels. Lehigh Valley's contribution, however, will not exceed 30,000,000 barrels, as against 27,000,000 barrels last year. New York State's mills now give evidence of running to about 7,000,000 barrels, partly because of the shutting-off of German cement and the reversion of this year to some of the Hudson River establishments.

ROPE.
Arrivals of Manila Hemp at Atlantic Seaports Stop.

ONE of the indirect effects of the war upon building construction and equipment is the fact that Manila hemp has ceased to arrive at Atlantic seaports. All the Manila hemp that is coming into this market now is arriving on railroads from the Pacific coast. Cost of railroad transportation makes the cost high and has shut off demand temporarily. Riggers are not buying as freely as usual and a demand is being created for wire rope. It was stated that it would not be surprising that if the supply from Russia, Italy and German East Africa is shut off much longer, the price of hemp rope will be equal to that of wire rope.

COMMON BRICK.
September Sales and Arrivals Compared With Same Month in 1913.

SALES of common Hudson brick in September were 36 per cent. below total sales of September last year. Arrivals dropped off 28 per cent. Arrivals in the month just closed were 119 bargeloads or 41,650,000 brick. Sales totaled 144 bargeloads of 50,400,000 brick. Left over from August, 8,750,00. In September, 1913, total arrivals were 57,400,000 in 164 bargeloads and sales were 220 bargeloads or 77,000,000 brick. Left over from August, 31 bargeloads. Prices have been about a dollar less than they were September a year ago.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

THE REAL ESTATE CONVENTION

Delegates From All Sections of Empire State Meet at Hotel Astor—Many Important Matters Discussed, Including Licensing of Brokers

CO-OPERATION was the keynote of the first New York Real Estate Convention which opened yesterday morning at the Hotel Astor under the auspices of the Real Estate Association of the State of New York. Many interesting subjects were discussed, but probably the most important was that dealing with the licensing of real estate brokers. An explanation of the measure was made by R. A. Borland, of Norwich, N. Y., and also by L. D. Woodworth, of Rochester, N. Y.

The New York real estate men were asked by the State Real Estate Association to co-operate, and they took hold with such enthusiasm that the committee on arrangements had difficulty in crowding into two days set apart for the convention all of the speakers, sightseeing expeditions and other features planned by the sub-committees. The sightseeing trips as planned, include tours through Brooklyn, the Bronx, and

L. D. WOODWORTH,
Vice-President State Association.

Queens, so that the delegates from out of town may get a comprehensive idea of Greater New York from a real estate investment standpoint.

The Bronx trip includes an excursion this afternoon through the industrial, residential and waterfront sections of the borough with a luncheon at the Community Building, and judging from the applications for tickets large attendance is looked for.

Yesterday afternoon the Queens committee, with the active co-operation of the Queens Chamber of Commerce, arranged a trip, at the end of which a reception and supper was held at the Queens Chamber of Commerce rooms. The Brooklyn committee has arranged an expedition for Sunday morning through that borough.

The Crowning Feature.

The crowning feature of the convention will be a dinner at the Hotel Astor this evening. Secretary Elisha Sniffin, chairman of the dinner committee, reports such a large demand for tickets that increased seating capacity is necessary. Among those who have taken one or more tables are the American Real Estate Company, New York Edison Company, Deputy Tax Commissioners, the United Real Estate Owners' Association, O. D. Schwencke, M. Morgenthau, Jr., Company, the Queens Chamber of Commerce, A. N. Gitterman Corporation and the Real Estate Company of America.

WILLIAM H. MOFFITT,
President State Association.

Following the reception and registration of delegates, the convention was called to order promptly at 10.30 o'clock by President William H. Moffitt, who spoke briefly on the results achieved by the organization during the twelve years since its formation. He stated that while today the membership roll totaled 260 people, there was every reason to believe that this number would be augmented considerably during the coming year.

William C. Breed, vice-president of the Merchants' Association, gave the speech of welcome and showed what could be accomplished by co-operation. As an example he cited what had been done by the Merchants' Association and how the membership had been increased during the last two years from 1,500 to 3,500 members. "Real estate men are natural optimists," said Mr. Breed, "and this trait is essential to every successful man in the business. Unless you have faith in the product that you are selling, you had better devote your efforts in other channels."

In response Thomas J. Overturf, of Buffalo, first vice-president of the convention, made a short address in which past accomplishments and future possibilities of the organization were the themes.

At the close of Mr. Overturf's address, President William H. Moffitt delivered his report for the year, in which he outlined the progress of the organization and suggested plans for the enlargement of its activities. He was followed by Secretary H. L. Reed, of Amsterdam, N. Y., who reported that, with new enrollments, the total membership of the State Association was 260.

The License Question.

The discussion of the proposed licensing of real estate brokers by L. D. Woodworth, of Rochester, and R. A. Borland, of Norwich, was laid over until a later session and for the rest of the morning the convention debated the proposed bill. Alfred H. Wagg, vice-president of the Long Island Real Estate Exchange, outlined the remarkable growth of Long Island development and the possibilities which the enormous amount of business offered for unscrupulous brokers. He urged the passage of the bill licensing professional real estate men in order that the inexperienced and objectionable might be driven out of the field.

Herbert A. Sherman discussed the situation in this city and came out with a direct criticism of the general principles of the bill. He doubted its practicability and declared that in a small town there might be a possibility for discrimination in the selection of brokers, but that in New York City it would be an impossibility.

E. A. Tredwell appeared for the Real Estate Board and registered the opposition of that body. He said in part: "Passage of this bill means restriction of business. What it calls for seems to be a doctrine of fear. Its operation might tend to drive out of business the smaller dealers necessary for the natural development of the trade. It will cripple free agency and action and the large firms transacting the bulk of the business will be hit hardest. Natural selection will eliminate the objectionable elements in the business and time will drive out the undesirables. The ethics of the profession must be established through real estate exchanges, such as yours, and not hammered in with a club. In the opinion of the Real Estate Board, the passage of this bill would be a mistake."

Ira J. Ettinger, executive secretary of the United Real Estate Owners' Association, speaker at the morning session, declared that the organization which he represented had taken no official action regarding the question, but that a special committee which had undertaken its study had by a close vote decided to recommend opposition.

After luncheon, which was served in the convention hall, a representative of the New York Telephone Company delivered an address on the "Telephone and Its Relation to Real Estate," which was illustrated by moving pictures. At one o'clock the delegates departed in automobiles to inspect the plant of the company.

Mayor Mitchel Speaks.

Upon their return to the convention hall the delegates were addressed by Mayor John Purroy Mitchel, who outlined the new financial policy of the Board of Estimate. "This new policy," he said, "may not superficially appear at first to be in the direction of a lower tax rate, but in the long run I think it will appear to those who examine into the question carefully, that it has been and will prove a step in that direction. The aggregate gross funded debt of the city of New York approximates today $1,320,000,000, the net debt approximates $70,000,000, and the debt service that we carry annually in the budget, or to be exact, that we did carry in the budget for 1914, approximates $50,000,000. The taxpayers of the City of New York are called upon to pay $50,000,000 in order to carry the interest and the sinking fund upon the funded debt outstanding of the City of New York. For a long time the members of the Board of Estimate had realized that we would soon have to meet the question of a new financial policy in regard to the service debt, that we could not go on piling up debt on debt, that something had to be done to check that growth. The matter came to an issue in connection with the hundred million dollar loan that the City found itself compelled to negotiate, chiefly in order to meet its foreign maturities coming to payment before the first of January next. We then found ourselves in a position where we believed we ought to declare a permanent policy for this City and we did declare it by resolutions of the Board of Estimate. Now, it is this: As to all permanent public improvements of a self-sustaining nature, meaning by that, rapid transit, docks, terminals and water supply, we will finance them through the issue of long-term 50-year bonds as heretofore; all public improvements heretofore authorized, whether they have been matured in contract or not, but as to which bonds have not been issued as yet to defray the cost, we will finance through the issue of 15-year serial bonds to be amortized in fifteen annual payments to be carried in the tax budget of the City. As to public improvements of a non self-sustaining character hereafter authorized, we will finance them—as to those made subsequent to the adoption of the resolution and before the first of January, 1916—one-quarter to be carried in the tax budget, three-quarters of the cost to be defrayed through the issue of similar 15-year serial bonds; those authorized in 1916 one-half in the tax budget and one-half the cost through the issue of 15-year serial bonds; and those in 1917 in the proportion of three-quarters and one-quarter. And it is our intention, and I believe that no future Board of Estimate that sits in this City will ever reverse the policy, that in years subsequent to 1917 all public improvements of a non self-sustaining character shall be carried wholly in the tax budget of the City. That may seem to mean an increase in the tax burden that real estate is called upon to carry, and it is true that in the immediate future it will mean a somewhat increased burden."

LAURENCE M. D. McGUIRE,
President Real Estate Board, New York City.

The Mayor discussed also the work of his Advisory Committee on Taxation, which is also considering the possibility of devising new sources of city revenue. He closed by mentioning the efforts which were being made to remedy the evils of duplications of building inspection and said that already a result has been obtained in the arrangement of one of his department heads and one of the State Department to co-operate along these lines.

ROBERT E. FARLEY,
Chairman Westchester Committee.

Laurence M. D. McGuire, president of the Real Estate Board, and Tax Commissioner John J. Halloran also addressed the afternoon session.

Secretary's Report.

The following is an excerpt from the report of the secretary, H. L. Reed, of Amsterdam, presented to the convention:

"Since last May sixteen new members have been obtained and one resignation received, giving the Association a total membership to date of 228. I have received twenty-five letters from real estate men who have promised to join our Association and I believe it possible to increase the membership to 1,000 within a year or so. Real estate men as a class do not realize the benefit from co-operation and organization of this character. A bulletin containing the report of your committee on the licensing of real estate brokers was compiled by L. D. Woodworth, chairman of the committee. This bulletin has been mailed to all members and nearly 1,000 others interested in real estate. The Executive Committee has held two meetings during the year, one at Pittsburgh July 9, at which the questioning of licensing brokers was the principal topic, and some suggestions and changes were made in the bill as grafted at that time. The second meeting was held at Saratoga, August 22, at which time the committee was appointed and arrangements made for this convention."

At the Country Life Show.

On Thursday evening those delegates and their friends who had already arrived in town visited the Country Life Permanent Exposition in the Grand Central Terminal. The New York Farm Brokers' Association, Edward J. Webb, president, was the host. A business meeting of the Farm Brokers Association was held at 7.30 o'clock, prior to an entertainment which included speech making and musical selections.

At the Country Life Exposition the delegates were given an opportunity to see what was being done within the commuting zone toward the building up of the farm lands in suburban New York. An address of welcome was delivered by L. W. Stotesbury, president of the Dutchess County Society, and the response was made by Robert E. Farley, chairman of the Westchester County Committee. A graphic picture of the delights of living in the suburbs was the topic of the response. Professor O. S. Morgan, of Columbia University, spoke of the many things in store for the New York Farm Brokers' Association which met in connection with the coming of the real estate men.

Professor Morgan has a practical farm within the limits of New York City and he drew attention to the fact that garden or specialty farming was well suited to the city man whose support comes from a salary in some city enterprise.

Marc W. Cole, superintendent of the State Bureau of Cooperation, also spoke of good results obtained and Clifford B. Harmon told some of the secrets of developing and dealing in out-of-town properties. Mr. F. Webb, agriculturalist for the New York Central Railroad, told of a projected trip through the Middle West, the object being to demonstrate that the Empire State has enormous agricultural resources and is one of the most thrifty in the Union.

A Common Purpose.

It was through the instrumentality of Secretary H. L. Reed of Amsterdam that the State Association was organized in 1905. Mr. Reed was the first president, and at that time published a magazine called "Real Estate." He believes that there is a big field for the association. He remarked yesterday that while New Yorkers did not agree with Upstaters in some points, both parties were trying to improve conditions, make business more pleasant. By co-operating along the right lines real estate would be made more attractive to the investor and more easily handled.

"We want to eliminate the dishonest fellow from the business, and while it isn't possible to do so entirely, any more than it is possible to wipe out the backsliders and sinners in the church, or the dishonest cashier in the bank, we can certainly elevate the business and improve many conditions.

"New York City has its part of the work and for years has tried to control the situation at Albany, but as to its success you well know. An organization made up of members from all parts of the State, working jointly throughout the State, not dominated by the New York City men, can do more at Albany and accomplish more by having its officers and directors scattered throughout the State, than a New York City organization. Nearly every real estate man can call one or two Senators or one or two Assemblymen his 'friend,' and when real estate measures are presented at Albany, a letter from a friend will do more than from a perfect stranger.

"Our association is very much interested in the 'licensing of real estate brokers,' and while a number of New York City men do not approve of the measure, they cannot close their eyes to the fact that it must come in a short time."

Mr. Morgenthau's Comments.

Referring to the purposes and the possible benefits to be derived from the Convention, Mr. Morgenthau, Jr., said to the representative of the Record and Guide: "I do not believe that I can put the matter more tersely than appeared on your editorial page of the Record and Guide when the statement was made, last week, that "The strategy of New York property owners always had one weak place, and that was at Albany." Hereafter our real estate interests will be more thoroughly protected at Albany, and they will have a powerful ally in the New York State Association, which is now holding its annual convention here.

"The object of the convention is to show the Upstate real estate men the magnitude of New York City and its commercial activities. We wish to show them that New York is the gateway through which the immigrants pour into this country; also what it means for the City to be the port of the Empire State and why New York is the magnet which draws yearly thousands of their best sons from upstate to join in making it the City that it is.

"As to the results that we hope to achieve, they are first, the unification of all the various real estate men of the State, so that they may present a solid front when it comes to obtain justice at Albany or elsewhere in the State or Nation for the men who, more than any others, help to pay the expenses of the government.

"I had this in mind when I reluctantly agreed to take charge of this convention as Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, and I am proud to say that not a single Real Estate Organization in the City has failed me. The Real Estate Board has contributed its best men to work, shoulder to shoulder, with representatives of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations, the Queens Chamber of Commerce, the Allied Real Estate Interests, the North Side Board of Trade and many others. It has been splendid to see some of the busiest men in the city, such as Lawrence B. Elliman, E. B. Boynton, A. N. Gitterman, Ira J. Ettinger, Elisha Sniffin, William D. Bloodgood to mention only a few, coming regularly, meeting after meeting and spend hours of their time in order to make this Convention a success. I wish to take this opportunity to thank them and all others, who have participated in the good work, for their fine cooperation. I am sure that the convention will result in lasting good for the City and State."

HOW THE TAX BURDEN COULD BE LIGHTENED

The Real Estate Board's Suggestions—Enormous Cost of Public Charities and Hospital Service—Fire Prevention Bureau Costly.

THE Board of Estimate's sub-committee on Tax Budget began the third week of its session on Monday last. The following are recommendations made by the Real Estate Board, in pursuance of its plan for calling attention to the need for economy and retrenchment in city affairs. The departments include the Fire Department, Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, Public Charities, Parks, Manhattan and Richmond, United States Volunteer Life Saving Corps, City Court and General Sessions, Commissioner of Records, Surrogate's Court, New York; County Courts, Department of Bridges, Sheriff's Offices, Borough President of Brooklyn.

Fire Department Too Large.

In regard to the Fire Department the Real Estate Board respectfully suggests that the budget of the Fire Department should be materially reduced because of the transfer of its jurisdiction over factory buildings to the State Labor Department, which was a very important and large part of the work of the Fire Prevention Bureau. The Labor Department now inspects factory buildings, and there can be no adequate reason for the continuance of the inspectors and the office force in the Fire Prevention Bureau who did the work of factory inspection and matters pertaining to it.

In dealing with the budget the department should be divided into two classes, the civilian force and the uniformed force. The salaries of the uniformed force cannot be questioned at this time because they are fixed by law, but the salaries of the civilian employees and the necessity for their employment should be closely scrutinized. The budget in Code No. 1650 provides for the increase in pay of three clerks. This does not seem reasonable in view of their recent increases and apparent adequate pay.

The request for the increase in the force of the Fire Prevention Bureau, as shown by Code No. 1651-1652, involving an additional expenditure of $79,800 for salaries, seems to be unnecessary and unwarranted for the following reasons:

1—That the Fire Commissioner has stated that the uniformed force was being used to make inspections and, if that be so, it would seem logical that the number of inspectors in the Fire Prevention Bureau should be decreased, if not wholly discontinued, and it is therefore not quite apparent why in view of this fact, and by reason of the transfer to the Labor Department of a very large and important part of the work of this bureau, that forty-one additional insnectors should be asked for.

2—The Labor Department employs its own inspectors to do the work formerly done by the Fire Prevention Bureau, and therefore that Bureau should be compelled to make a reduction in the force by eliminating those who did the work now being done by the Labor Department.

3—That one cashier has always been able easily to handle the finances of the department, and why another should be asked for is not quite clear.

4—That the private secretary to the Chief of the Fire Prevention Bureau, which has, as heretofore been stated, had a large part of this work transferred from it, seems like the creation of an entirely unnecessary position.

5—That the office of the Chief Inspector is now vacant and it would be no difficult task to secure an able and qualified man to fill this position at $4,000 per year, and further the duties do not call for a higher salaried employee.

It might be interesting to find out how many of these places are to be exempt from civil service.

Bellevue and Allied Hospitals.

The estimates for Bellevue and the Allied Hospitals have not yet been printed and are not available for examination.

The Real Estate Board desires to call the attention of the Budget Committee to the delay by department heads in submitting their estimates. The Mayor urged in a letter to his commissioners that these estimates be presented to the Board of Estimate before July 1. If this had been done civic organizations would have had an opportunity to make the investigation necessary for proper criticism. The Charter requires submission of these estimates by September 10.

In this case, and in many others, although civic bodies were specifically invited to attend these hearings and make suggestions the opportunity to do so intelligently has been denied them through the negligence of department heads.

Last year the allowance for these hospitals was $1,400,063.50. This shows an increase of nearly 100 per cent. since 1906 and nearly 200 per cent. since 1905.

While the Real Estate Board is unable to criticise special items it feels that the amounts asked for supplies, amounting last year to $500,000, and for equipment, amounting last year to $121,500, should be carefully scrutinized. Arrangements should be made for the best possible method of purchase and distribution. These supplies and equipment should be purchased by unbalanced bids and should be distributed on signed requisitions, and accurate records should be kept of their final disposition.

The Real Estate Board respectfully submits that the committee, as a subcommittee of the trustees of trust funds, should require absolute proof of necessity before they authorize any appropriation of these funds.

Department of Public Charities.

The Real Estate Board is again at a loss to submit its suggestion. The Department of Public Charities whose estimate is under consideration today, failed to submit its estimate as required by law and the Board has no knowledge of what is asked for. It can only offer its general criticism based on last year's expenditures and on the growing expense of this Department and its increasing activities.

In 1906 this department received $2,048,740.16; in 1907 the panic year, $2,218,844.59. In 1914 the Budget allowance was $3,722,983.36. This latter amount shows a tremendous increase since 1905, when the expenditures for all purposes was $1,976,509.19.

Surely there should be some compelling reason given for increases for this department.

It can be said to the credit of New York City that the vast majority of its citizens are not charity seekers. The increased activities of all the partly charitable or charitable departments of the city are apparently due more to the initiative of the department than to actual public demand.

One-Half for Salaries.

The real public demand is best shown by the expense for Municipal Lodging houses and in the out-door relief, or temporary relief which forms but a trifling part of the expense of this department. It is a significant commentary on the city's present method of giving charity to its dependent poor that out of an allowance of $3,722,383.36, $1,552,584.70 was for personal service. The Commissioner's office alone cost $107,090.

It would seem that the efficiency organizations of the city government could devise some better way of aiding the city's poor than the present method whose results are shown above.

The Real Estate Board suggests that a comparison be made by your examiners of the cost per bed for maintenance in the various privately managed hospitals in the city and the cost per bed for maintenance in the Sea View Hospital.

Department of Parks, Manhattan and Richmond.

The amount asked for by the Department of Parks, Manhattan and Richmond, is $31,000, as against $30,100 in 1914. A topographical drattsman is dismissed and an assistant landscape architect added at a larger salary. It would seem that one landscape architect at $4,000 a year would be sufficient unless new parks are planned.

The estimate of the Public Recreation Commission is not available, but it would seem that such a Commission is not necessary. The duties of this Commission should be transferred to the Board of Education. It is merely duplication.

Department of Bridges.

The Bridge Commissioner asks for $833,832.58, an increase of $37,867.27.

With the completion of the bridges and the end of improvement work, there should necessarily be a large diminution in the expense necessary for the Department of Bridges. This the Commissioner seems to have partially recognized, but the Real Estate Board regret to find him asking for an increase in salary for a Deputy Commissioner and an Assistant Engineer.

There are also a number of other increases asked for. These should not be granted, as the present is no time for increases in salary. The Real Estate Board would like, it says, to call the Bridge Commissioner's attention to the salaries paid Assistant Engineers by the great transportation corporations in the United States. It cannot understand, either, why a Deputy Commissioner should be paid the same salary as the president of the Board of Aldermen.

Borough President of Brooklyn.

The Borough President of Brooklyn asks for $2,272,513, a decrease of $2,649. The Real Estate Board feels that the Borough President is a member of the Board of Estimate and is thoroughly familiar with the financial position of the city and the need of economy.

It has also confidence, based on his record in every office he has held, that he will exercise the greatest care in the expenditure of his office, such as salaries, purchase of supplies, and also in the matter of initiating local improvements.

—Prof. Seligman in the second edition of his "Income Tax," just issued by MacMillan, says there are two important criticisms to be urged against the income tax law: No attempt has been made to distinguish between earned and unearned incomes, and the method of collecting the tax on business incomes is inefficient. These are very important as well as accurate criticisms. The man who earns his five thousand a year by real labor should get some credit for it.

TICKET SALES ON ALL ELEVATED LINES

Study of Statistics Shows Trend of Population and Where New Systems Are Needed To Care For Present Traffic

EXAMINATION of the figures compiled by the Public Service Commission for passenger traffic on the Second, Third, Sixth and Ninth avenue elevated lines of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, as indicated by the number of tickets sold at each station during the year ending June 30, 1914, shows that 311,473,568 passengers used these lines. The year's increase was 4,628,562, and the daily average 916,098. With these figures may be compared the record made by the Subway for the same period, which was published in detail in the Record and Guide on September 26. The Subway system carried 340,413,103, indicating an increase of 12,941,593 and a daily average of 1,001,215, which means that the Interborough Rapid Transit system is used every day by 1,917,313 passengers, or 651,886,671 in the year, counting 340 days to the year, Sundays being treated as half days. The figures show that the Subway afforded transportation to 28,939,535 more passengers than the four combined elevated railroads.

Dual System Needed.

James Blaine Walker, assistant secretary of the Public Service Commission in discussing the report said this week: "These figures show a continuation of the tremendous increase in local traffic and prove the urgent need of the dual subway system which is now in course of construction and which ought to be completed by October 1, 1917. There is no city in the world where the street car habit has grown more than in New York City. In statistics which I recently compiled I estimated that each year 1,700,000,000 people in Greater New York used the subways, elevated roads and surface cars in the five boroughs. Figuring on a basis of the population of 5,000,000 it means that there are 365 car rides for every resident each year or at least one ride each day for every man, woman and child in Greater New York. With the growth of the city and the amplification of the transit facilities, the use of the various lines seems to have become more general."

Second Avenue.

On the Second avenue line there were 44,979,638 tickets sold, showing an increase of 595,660 and a daily average of 132,293, as compared to 130,541 for 1913 and 129,350 for 1912. From Chatham Square to 50th street advances are noted in all stations but Grand street and First street, which indicate declines of 35,068 and 25,172 respectively. A decrease at the Grand street station may be explained by an increase of 567,784 at a station in the same street on the Third avenue line. The Houston street station on the same line with an increase of 183,928 may explain the loss at First street. On Second avenue all the stations north of and including 50th street, except 57th, 72d and 105th streets, show marked declines. At 57th street, the nearest station to the entrance to the Queensboro Bridge, an increase of 55,645 may be attributed to an increase in traffic over that structure. At 105th street there was an increase of 1,102,745 tickets sold, but this station was opened April 1, 1913, and since this report covers an annual period ending June 30, 1914, the record for twelve months cannot be compared with a previous record of only two months. It may account, however, for large decreases in sales at 99th street and 111th street of 330,887 and 172,115 respectively, and at 106th street on the Third avenue road. Other stations on this route which show decreases are 65th street, 80th street, 86th street, 92d street, in Yorkville, and 117th street, 121st street, and 127th street, in East Harlem. The station at which the most tickets were sold was Rivington street with 3,864,192, a yearly increase of 32,866 and a daily average of 11,365; 80th street was second with 3,117,640, a decrease of 29,508 and a daily average of 9,170.

Third Avenue.

The largest increases in passenger traffic were noted on the Third avenue line, which sold a total of 147,568,868, showing an increase of 4,260,856 over the corresponding period of 1913, and a daily average of 434,026, as compared with 421,494 for 1913 and 416,576 for 1912. The largest advances were noted in the Bronx on all stations but 133d street, the very first one, and Bronx Park, the very last one, which show decreases of 34,989 and 68,213. These figures show the almost phenomenal growth of that part of the city and the same increases have been noted in similar compilations in years past. Provision is being made for the handling of this unusually large traveling public by the construction of three new elevated lines which will be extensions of the subway and by the third tracking which is now nearing completion.

In the Bronx the largest gains were made at 183d street, Pelham avenue, and 169th street. At 183d street there were 3,674,216 tickets sold which was 426,284 more than in 1913.

The losses on the Second avenue line seem to be offset by the gains on the Third avenue line; large increases having been made at 116th street, 99th street, 84th street, 76th street, 67th street, 59th street, 47th street and Grand Cenral. The 106th street station shows a decrease of 600,622 ticket sales, which is the greatest falling off at any single station in the city. At City Hall 11,865,395 were sold, indicating a decrease of 44,313, and a daily average of 34,898; 116th street was second with 6,236,042, an increase of 31,351 and a daily average of 18,341.

Sixth Avenue.

On the Sixth avenue line, which runs from Rector street to 155th street, there was a considerable decrease, amounting to 497,248, a daily average of 255,173, as against 256,636 for 1913 and 255,894 for 1912. The greatest decline was made at the 23d street station. There were 499,302 less sales at this point than in 1913. Other stations in this district, including 28th street, 18th street, 14th street, and 8th street also show marked decreases.

The falling off in passenger traffic at these points is generally attributed to the change of character of the neighborhood occasioned by the northward advance of the large retail establishments. Many of the large buildings formerly occupied by firms with thousands of employes and patronized by thousands of shoppers have now gone to other sections of the city, and the railroad which formerly carried these people has suffered as a consequence of this withdrawal. Farther north, at 33d street, which is nearer the new shopping center, there was an increase of 89,033, and at 42d street an increase of 164,422. These stations would have showed even greater advances had it not been for the opening of the new station at 38th street in January of this year, which drew away considerably from each of the other stations. There were 755,557 sales at the new stop which ordinarily would have gone to either 33d street or 42d street.

South of the former shopping district every station except Cortlandt street shows less ticket sales this year when compared with last year. These include Grand street, with a decline of 122,045; Franklin street with 14,060; Chambers street, 42,519; Park place with 18,267, and Rector street, 57,790. Out of 52 stations on the Sixth avenue line 32 stations showed less ticket sales for 1914 when compared with the corresponding period for 1913.

Ninth Avenue.

On the Ninth avenue line, in spite of decreases on nine stations out of eighteen, there was an increased sale of 32,166,121, with a daily average of 94,606, as compared with 93,814 for 1913 and 93,094 for 1912. The station which sold the most tickets was Cortlandt street, with 3,334,610, an increase of 49,140, and a daily average of 10,102; 23d street was second, with 2,896,080, an increase of 355 and a daily average of 8,518. At the subway station in this street there was a decrease of 36,922, and on the Sixth avenue elevated a decrease of 499,202.

Other stations which show decreases are Rector street, Barclay street, Warren street, Desbrosses street, Houston street and Christopher street. From 14th street to 34th street there were advances on all stations, while from 42d street to 59th street, the end of the line, there were declines. The largest increase was made at 14th street, where 162,633 more tickets were sold than for the corresponding period last year.

A Historic Social Center.

At the southwest corner of Fulton and Nassau streets, 136 Fulton street, was the old Shakespeare Tavern, particularly famous in National Guard history. It was a low, massive, two-story structure, of small yellow bricks, with dormer windows. Entrance was on Nassau street. It had been built many years before the Revolution by John Leake. In 1822 a three-story extension was erected on the Fulton street side. On the second floor was a large room for meetings and drills, and on the third floor an arched roof for concerts and balls. Here gathered the literary, musical and political leaders of the day in the most brilliant period of New York literature. The Shakespeare Tavern stands comparison with the Mermaid of Shakespeare's time and the Turk's head and the St. James Coffee House in the days of Garrick, Goldsmith and Reynolds. The widening of Fulton street in 1836 caused its demolition. It had long been a favorite resort for actors. —Wall Street Journal.

Property owners in the Riverdale section north of the present terminus of the subway wonder why they cannot have the benefit of rapid transit as well as the more distant suburbs.

Nobody professes more patriotism and loyaltv to government than public job seekers, and nobody imposes more upon the generosity of the government than some of these job seekers when they become job holders.

Yes, we have learned how to build a subway through a business thoroughfare without imperiling the commercial life of the street. What the contractors did to 42nd street ten years ago, and to other important business streets as well, would not be tolerated now. This is one thing that the Public Service can be credited with.

There can be little hope of any material economy in municipal expenditures until the city government is left reasonably free to decide what its expenses shall be without dictation from the State Legislature. Certainly there should be an end to the practice of secretly running up to Albany with bills for the appointment of more New York City official boards and commissions with regiments of inspectors, whose salaries and expenses are to be defrayed by taxing real estate.

Nearly all the laws that worry good citizens here are contained in mandatory legislation passed by the State Legislature over the head of the local authorities. The sanitary laws, the school laws, the tenement laws, the fire laws, the labor laws, and nearly all the other departmental laws (except the buiding code) are either wholly or in part of State, instead of local, origin. They are neither wholly wise nor wholly wrong, but one and all have served the purpose of manufacturing jobs for those who want to work for the public, and have had the effect of increasing the cost of living.

An Example from Germany.

In their program of future work the Taxpayers' Association should make a particular point of studying the sources from which the city of New York will derive the increasing revenue which will be needed next year, and in this connection they should inquire into the tax systems of certain German cities. These systems usually differ so radically from ours that they could not be adopted as a whole, but certain parts of them might well be borrowed to advantage. Let us take, for instance, the city of Frankfort, which has the reputation of being one of the best governed of the German cities. Its gross income in 1911 was approximately $8,000,000. Of this about $1,100,000 was derived from the profits on municipal undertakings, for Frankfort, like other German cities, has its own tramways, electrical and gas works and its municipal markets.

Of the remaining $6,900,000 of revenue, more than half, viz: $3,800,000 was raised by a municipal income tax, which was graduated and was collected chiefly from well-to-do people. About $1,100,000 was raised by a tax upon the rental values of houses, which amounted to about four per cent. of the rent; but here again, the scale was graduated so that on expensive houses the charge amounted to about eight per cent. of the rent. Another $600,000 was collected by means of a tax on the profits of local industries —a tax not large enough to drive industries away, but still sufficient to bring in a substantial addition to the revenue. None of these three taxes, from which Frankfort derives the major portion of its revenue, would be possible of adoption in New York at the present time, although they all have meritorious aspects. But the city has many minor sources of revenue which could be advantageously copied by New York. Thus it derives a small income from a special license fee for restaurants and it obtains a still larger amount of revenue from a tax on theatre tickets.

In the opinion of the Record and Guide, New York will certainly have to fall back for its necessary increase in income in part upon such sources of income. Theatres and restaurants cannot escape taxes as can other kinds of business. When the new tax is first applied it will have the unfortunate effect of forcing out of business certain theatres and restaurants which are now operated on an extremely low margin of profit, but in the long run the consumer will pay the tax, and there is every reason why he should. The opportunities of dining at restaurants and amusing oneselves at theatres are precisely the kind of opportunities which can be made to cost more without doing anv injury to the prosperity of the community.

The theatre tax in these davs of "movies" could be made particularly remunerative. A more doubtful source of revenue used by Frankfort and other German cities is what is known as a "Stores Tax." This really amounts to a tax on large dry goods and department stores. It was levied partly for the benefit of the small retailer, but it has not succeeded in checking the growth of large retail organizations. A tax of this kind would meet with a great deal of opposition and would perhaps be successfully attacked on grounds of constitutionality, but it might be made to bring in a substantial revenue without hurting the department stores. They derive enormous advantages from municipal government and the municipal transit systems and can be made to return some of it without ill effects.

Efficient Representation.

A very encouraging development is the increasingly efficient activity which is being exhibited by the real estate associations of New York. For the first time in many years, they are becoming effective agencies for the protection of real estate interest and the promotion of the city's welfare. They are pursuing a policy of scrutinizing the details of the municipal accounts and of municipal policy, and of offering concult suggestions looking towards economies and improvements. As the Record and Guide has frequently pointed out, this is the only method of criticising the city government, which will in the long run, prove to be fruitful. The business of governing New York has become, during the past ten years, an increasingly technical matter. It has been seriously studied by outside agencies such as the Bureau of Municipal Research, and these studies have resulted in a gradual improvement in the making of the budget in the distrbution of the city's income, and in the organization of the city's departments.

Of course, much remains still to be done; but if a man or an organization is going to criticise a city department he needs to know a good deal more about its methods and operations than he formerly did in order to make the criticism good. The criticisms now being urged by the Real Estate Board have precisely this character. They are based upon a close inquiry into the facts, and are made thoroughly concrete and practical. Moreover, they are characterized by fairness as well as by knowledge. A public official naturally resents the kind of criticism which starts from the assumption that he is either crooked or incompetent, and which because of this assumption condemns indescriminately everything he does, and makes no attempt to distinguish between that part of his work, for which he is responsible and that part for which somebody else is responsible.

Much of the criticism passed upon city officials by taxpayers used to be of this character, and it was as fruitless as it was trivial and unjust. The Real Estate Board, as well as the Advisory Council, has abandoned that method of blaming individuals, and it does not even object to methods until it is prepared to make out a good prima facie case against them. It can be as importunate as it pleases as long as it is concrete and fair-minded. By adopting these tactics the Real Estate Board really becomes a voluntary unofficial agency of government, which is cooperating with the official administration in the attempt to make that government sound in its general policy and economic in its methods.

The activity of the United Real Estate Owners' Association is also assuming an unceasingly helpful character which will result in a much better understanding of the problems of city administration by the property owners of New York. Its program for the coming year is both comprehensive and specific. It is going to undertake a scientific study of the Budget, to work on behalf of the repeal of much of the existing mandatory legislation about salaries, to insist upon the unification of the building inspection service and to inquire into the large number of positions which are exempted from the operation of the Civil Service laws. All these proposed kinds of work are useful and will be productive not only of practical results, but of a valuable educational by-product. Active work of this kind by property owners will give them an increasing insight into the operations of the city government and of the enormously difficult task of keeping a proper balance between economy and liberal expenditures for good public purposes. An increasing number of property owners will be, that is, converted into experienced unofficial public servants, who are capable of considering municipal questions from a well-informed public point of view.

Rare Investment Possibilities.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

From letters beginning to come in from relatives and friends in the various countries in Europe, it is becoming more and more evident every day that there will be a tremendous immigration to this country, and particularly to this city, within six months; whether the war ends or not, in the meantime. The old tenement houses will, of course, be the first to feel the effect of this immigration, and it looks as if there will be at least 100,000 Germans, 200,000 Jewish residents of Poland and Russia, East Prussia and other portions of the surrounding country, as well as immigration from Belgium, France and England. We can look for an addition of 500,000 people to the New York population within the next two years.

Tenement house construction is almost at a standstill, due to the money conditions, and the new as well as the older houses are now nearly all full. What this will mean to the East Side of the city, from the Battery all the way up to Harlem, what it will mean to Brooklyn, and what it will mean to the older loft districts which are within walking distance of the tenements and cheap immigrant labor, can easily be foreseen by anyone who has gone through these transition periods before.

If mortgagees and owners generally will just realize what effect this will have on this city, they will believe as I do, that never in the history of the world was there a better security for the investment of money than in New York real estate, especially at present-day prices, when many people are, under the stress of necessity, being compelled to sell at the buyer's price.

Stocks and bonds may look good at present prices, but they are in the control of other people, who can do as they please with the investor's money, and the sense of honor which was presumed to be a foregone conclusion when speaking of the directorate of large enterprises seems to be sadly lacking in the present day. A real estate owner is his own board of directors, his own executive committee, and makes his own market, if he chooses. This is the time, it seems to me, to begin to arouse the public to a knowledge of the wonderful investment possibilities now presented by real estate here.

The city administration, under the able lead of Mayor Mitchel, has been conserving the interests of owners and taxpayers, and this is the beginning of the dawn after seven years of depression. The chaos into which the business had fallen will now begin to disappear, if we read history aright at all. A new generation of buyers will now begin to form, and it behooves the brokers to pluck up courage and begin to get their lists ready. The first ones in the field will reap a harvest, and while, at the present time, it would seem as if there is no life to the market, and no energy in any buying movement, a realization of how well the market was beginning to come up in May and June of this year, coupled with the fact that investment moneys keep on rolling in automatically to many individuals and estates, and that some disposition must be made of it, sooner or later, the brokers will, if they are wise, use this opoprtunity to give their friends a chance to get in on the ground floor. ELIAS A. COHEN.

Importance of Records in Real Estate Appraising.

Since reading in the Record and Guide, of the the 3rd instant, the letter of M. Morgenthau, Jr., on the subject of appraising real estate, Harry Stewart Hall has, in a personal letter, expressed to Mr. Morgenthau his individual views on the subject more clearly on certain points than appeared in the interview with him that was printed in the Record and Guide of September 19. As both gentlemen are appraisers of large experience and wide reputation, their discussion is profitable reading for students of real estate values. Mr. Hall now says:

In my opinion the qualified or expert appraiser should have a very considerable personality, and it seems to me that such personal equation, combined with complete records provides a basis for accurate work. I agree with you that voluminous records in themselves may well be valueless. In other words, the owner of the most elaborate records obtainable would find them of comparatively small value if he did not have the personal experience and ability to properly use them. Vice-versa a man with such appraisal ability and experience would be quite at sea were he not possessed of proper data.

Except in certain standard instances of small properties, such as ordinary types of flats and tenements, it is my opinion that a great proportion of appraisals are, or should be individual cases, each to be studied from an individual viewpoint.

I have always been utterly opposed to the system of appraising which merely assumes a certain land value, adds thereto the estimated cost of the building, and fixes the total as the value of the property. To me it seems, for example, that if a builder selects a plot in an active neighborhood where conditions seem to point to a good future and where rentability is assured, he is entitled to a reasonable profit for his time and ability in producing such a property, and that such ability should receive due credit in an appraisal.

On the other hand, if a builder were to purchase a plot and erect thereon a structure unsuited to the neighborhood, one that would probably always be out of place and a general misfit, I believe that he should suffer for his lack of judgment, and by no means should even the rule of land and building cost be applied to this case. If such a man were foolish enough to expend a certain sum of money for such an operation, it does not follow that the property is intrinsically worth the amount expended.

In a general way theoretically, improved property values should be determined by a capitalization of the rental, but that is a dangerous proceeding in New York with the rapidly changing conditions. For example, I have in mind a certain building which is leased to one tenant at about $7,000 net per annum, the lease having some eight further years to run. The tenant is very strong, and supposedly this would be a good example of obtaining value by the capitalization of the income derived by this lease. As a matter of fact, however, the neighborhood has very materially changed recently, the tenant in question has removed elsewhere and for some time has been subletting the premises at a very material loss. Had he been less responsible financially he would no doubt have quit long since. When this lease expires, from present indications, it is doubtful if this property will produce much more than fifty per cent. of the present rental, and this appears to be an instance where it is more than reasonable to assume that the future value will not increase.

I use the above instance as an example of studying each property as a separate entity, and I think that in many cases facts such as these are neglected by appraisers, and often-times not even sought for.

It has always been a point with me to study the rental ability of an improved property, and to incorporate in the appraisal a statement as to its legitimate annual rental value. These figures I obtain for myself, not accepting, especially in the cases of new or unfinished buildings, the estimates of the owners as to the rentals that are to be expected. I doubt if many appraisers take this trouble, and I know of but few instances where such figures are incorporated in and made a part of the appraisal. In the case of rented buildings the question of a continuance of such rentals is an important one, as in the case cited hereinbefore. An appraiser should know something more than mere land and building values.

Most certainly I agree with you that there is in New York a great amount of slipshod, unscientific appraising, and if it so happens that some publicity and attention is about to be given to this fact it seems as if the real estate interests may benefit thereby. The entire subject is one of many ramifications, and by no means reduced to an "exact science." In my opinion, it is based on many personal qualities, acquired by years of experience and mature judgment, coupled with proper records, and always subject to a certain amount of human fallibility.

HARRY STEWART HALL.

Registry of Land Titles.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

The value of some system of uniformity in the registration of land titles throughout the country has been recognized and discussed for several years by many real estate investors and lawyers. It is interesting to note that this subject has been raised to one of national importance by the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, and a report of what has been accomplished toward simplifying land title acts in the States of the Union will be presented at the coming 24th annual conference in Washington, D. C., from Oct. 14 to 19.

The committee, consisting of Eugene C. Massie, Virginia, chairman; John H. Wigmore and Nathan W. MacChesney, of Illinois, and Rome G. Brown, of Minnesota, has made a careful study of the matter, and particularly with reference to the conveniences of the so-called Torrens Act. It may not be generally known that the Torrens law has been adopted by the legislatures of ten States as a legal means of registering titles. They are: California, Colorado, Illinois, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon and Washington. The Act was adopted by New York in 1908. Ohio and North Carolina placed it on their statute books last year. In addition, the Torrens system prevails in Hawaii and the Philippines and over a great portion of the Dominion of Canada.

Although based upon the same fundamental system, the laws in these ten States differ widely. A tentative draft of a uniform act was submitted to the Uniform Laws Conference last year and efforts are being made to obtain necessary amendments to the conflicting State laws in the direction of greater uniformity.

In a very exhaustive report at the conference in Montreal a year ago, in which many of the cases to test the constitutionality of the Act were cited, the committee on the Torrens Act stated that the tide of Torrens legislation was evidently rising with irresistible force.

In nearly every State where the Torrens system is a law, the constitutionality of the Act has been tested and upheld by the Courts. In Illinois an amendment was enacted in 1903 making it compulsory to register all lands passing through the Probate Court. In Massachusetts a special court known as the Land Court has been established for the administration of the system.

Charles Thaddeus Terry, of New York City, a professor in the Law School of Columbia University, is president of the Conference on Uniform State Laws and, in addition to his work for uniform workingmen's compensation and incorporation laws, he has made a thorough study of the legal questions involved in the Torrens system of land registration. ### Will Deepen Staten Island Sound.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

It is a source of great gratification to me to be able to tell you that I am just in receipt of a communication from Mr. James N. Stout, secretary of the Staten Island Deep Waterways Association, in which he informs me that, owing to the energies of this association, the Secretary of War has allotted the sum of $400,000 for the deepening of the Staten Island Sound out of the twenty million dollars' compromise of the Rivers and Harbors bill just passed by Congress.

This is a matter of considerable importance to the owners of waterfront property along the Kill Von Kull and the Staten Island Sound, as it will make the waterfronts on Staten Island available for ships of greater depth and will thus be a help in the industrial development of the island, in which, of course, everybody is interested.

BRONX AUCTION SALE.

Real Estate and Other Assets of the Estate of Henry Ahr Sold in the Bronx at Good Prices.

A remarkable demonstration of the stability of Bronx real estate was shown by the extraordinary attendance and the activity of the bidding at the sale held by George Price in the former headquarters of the Corn Exchange Bank at Third avenue between 148th and 149th streets October 14, at noon.

The bidding on all six offerings was spirited, one parcel in particular bringing fifty-one bids. The buyers and prices were as follows: Parcel No. 1, The Henry Ahr Iron Works in 148th street, nine bids, sold for $27,050 to Adolph Ahr.

Parcel No. 2. A small gore corner at Tremont and Haviland avenues, thirteen bids, sold for $505, to Henry Kroeger.

Parcel No. 3. An inside small gore lot of about 35 square feet, on three bids, sold for $50, to Julius Wolf.

Parcel No. 4. A lot 28x87 on Baylis avenue, South Jamaica place, Borough of Queens, twenty-nine bids, sold for $155, to Henry J. Jordis.

Parcel No. 5. One share of Bronx Consumers' Ice Co. stock (par value $100), nine bids, sold for $122.50, to J. Strauss.

Parcel No. 6. Twelve claims against debtors of the Henry Ahr Iron Works, on fifty-one bids, sold for $136, to Milton Silberman.

The sale at this time was strongly opposed by certain parties in interest who feared that the factory property would be seriously sacrificed unless an upset price was fixed or the sale protected. The executors and auctioneer having advertised a sale absolutely without reserve, decided to carry it through on that basis.

That their judgment was good is amply proved by the fact that only one parcel was bought by a party in interest and active outside bidding forced the price to a satisfactory figure on the ninth bid.

This sale, held right at the hub of the Bronx, would seem to indicate that you can sell anything here if you go about it right and the sale is honestly conducted. That Bronxites have confidence in Bronx industrials is shown by the fact that, although the bottom is supposed to have dropped out of the stock market, a single share of the Bronx Consumers' Ice Co.'s stock (par value $100) sold on the ninth bid for $122.50.

Mr. Price expects this to be the forerunner of other similarly successful Bronx voluntary sales in the near future.

The Bryant Park Neighborhood.

Of all the public squares in New York, Bryant Park has become the object of greatest interest in real estate circles. The park has 42nd street on the northern side, 40th street on the south, and Fifth and Sixth avenues on either side. The buildings that are going up around it will have not only a fine outlook, but will never have their light dimmed. The 42d street block is not likely to be changed by the erection of new buildings for some years, but the other three sides are gradually being transformed.

Certain restrictions in favor of private dwellings on the 40th street side have retarded new construction there, 'but have served to give the new twenty-story office building known as the "Eight West 40th Street Building" exceptional prominence and position. Parts of seven floors in this building have already been rented from the plans. Three have been taken by Frank A. Munsey, the publisher.

Several new tenancies in architectural design are illustrated in this building. For one thing it responds to the growing preference among business firms for moderate sized buildings, because they hold that the identity of a tenant is submerged if a building is too large. It will be close to the main traffic terminals and will appeal to high grade tenants in a number of business lines that are migrating to midtown.

On the Fifth avenue side the Rogers-Peet and the Edison Disc buildings, under construction, together with the projected Arnold, Constable Building at the corner of 40th street, are the new improvements. The Union Dime Savings Bank is the only building on the Sixth avenue side of recent construction.

City Planning.

A series of city maps of unusual importance is being prepared for the guidance of the members of the Commission of Building Districts of which Edward M. Bassett is chairman. Those who saw the interesting maps at the City Planning Exposition at the Public Library last year will appreciate the value of the new maps when it is said that they will go into even greater detail. One will show the location not only of dwellings, apartments and factories in every borough, but also the location of buildings having stores on the first floor. Another map will illustrate the density and trend of population in each borough, and a third map will show all traffic lines. The maps are being drawn under the supervision of George B. Ford, consulting expert to the committee. An advisory commission to the Committee on City Plan of the Board of Estimate will be announced in a short time.

Electrical Household Advantages.

The extent to which electrical home facilities have made life for the Long Island commuter and his family easier was made apparent at the Electrical Exposition at the Grand Central Palace this week. Ill smelling oil stoves are no longer necessary as a quick substitute for the coal range. By electric current two quarts of water can be brought to the boiling point in two minutes; a steak or chops can be broiled in six minutes; an electric griddle can be used for eight minutes at a cost of one cent; a Welsh rarebit can be made in a chafing dish; coffee can be cooked almost in the twinkling of an eye and eggs can be fried in a jiffy. No commuter should miss his train on account of breakfast being cooked.

Electrical facilities not only attract, but they hold, suburban tenants and owners because previously the drawback to suburban life was the crudeness of it. Now, electricity has eliminated the raw phases of suburban existence.

Sewing machines are operated by electrical joining of the motor with the light fixture, while clothes are ironed by heating the iron through an electric wire; woman can curl her hair with electric curling irons; ice cream is frozen by electricity and the suburban resident can quickly make his own best Sunday dessert; he can press his trousers by electricity and if necessary spank the children by electric current. So far as the comforts of residential life in the suburbs is concerned, the electrical age is complete, and it has much to do with the rapid increase of suburban population.

Law Makers and Insurance.

Law makers should understand what they are trying to do, but so far as insurance is concerned they do not. For them insurance law making represents a large wheel in a political machine, and beyond serving the purpose of the machine it means nothing. So far as practical knowledge is concerned, let us make a few comparisons. Allow the average law factory—both branches of State government—250 employes. Put them in to operate the Du Pont Powder Company factory. Can you see their finish? Put them in to operate the fleet of Steel Corporation boats on the Great Lakes, or let them reorganize and operate the Pere Marquette Railroad, or any manufacturing plant or large department store or a big bank or any big insurance company. The finish in every case would be that of the powder mill. They would blow it up because of ignorance.—National Agents' Record.

UNITED STATES REALTY.

No Action Taken Declaring a Dividend, Though Savings Exceed Requirements.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the U. S. Realty & Improvement Co. no action was taken on the question of declaring a dividend on the stock. While the earnings for the period are in excess of the dividend requirements, yet owing to the prevailing unusual business conditions, the directors were of the opinion that the company should retain for the time being the present surplus as working capital to meet the unusual demands, and through conservative action accumulate and maintain a safe amount of liquid assets.

The consolidated income and surplus account of the United States Realty & Improvement Co. and George A. Fuller Co. for five months ended September 30, 1914, follows.

|---|---|
| Gross earnings | $1,250,142 |

| Dividend paid August 1, 1914 | 202,035 |
| Surplus for five months | 214,719 |

A Sewer Project Turned Back.

The Chief Engineer of the Board of Estimate has reported on the resolution for a sewer system in West 176th street, from Jerome avenue to Macombs road; in Davidson avenue, from West 176th street to a point about 80 feet south of West 174th street; in Grand avenue, from West 176th street to Macombs road; in West 175th street, from Grand avenue to Macombs road; in West 174th street, from Davidson avenue to Macombs road; in Featherbed lane, from Jerome avenue to Macombs road; in Inwood avenue, from Belmont street to Featherbed lane; and in Belmont street, from Inwood avenue to Macombs road, Borough of The Bronx. (Resolution of the Local Board of the Van Courtlandt District.)

Engineer reports that title to each of these streets where not acquired can be vested in the city at any time under an opening proceeding now in progress. The resolution affects an aggregate length of about 5,400 feet. With few exceptions the streets are not in use and the area traversed is almost entirely unimproved. The improvement is petitioned for by the owners of about 10 per cent. of the frontage who desire to develop their holdings in anticipation of the completion of the Jerome avenue subway, now under construction. The territory served by these sewers will unquestionably be substantially developed in the near future, but it is believed that the improvement might properly be deferred for a short period.

The resolution, by order of the Board of Estimate, has been left with the Chief Engineer, and is to be withheld until the urgency of the improvement is more apparent.

Protest Against Assessment Area.

Property owners in the neighborhood of the proposed extension of Second avenue, from Hamilton avenue to 28th street, are remonstrating against the smallness of the area against which the assessment will be levied. The proposed area is bounded as follows: On the north by an irregular line not exceeding 500 feet north of Hamilton avenue at any point; on the east by a line 100 feet west of Third avenue, on the south, by the center line of 27th street, and on the west by the bulkhead line of Gowanus Bay.

The area of assessment for the proposed opening of First avenue from 39th to 40th streets will be bounded as follows: On the north by a line 350 feet north of 39th street; on the east by a line midway between First and Second avenues; on the south by a line midway between 50th and 51st streets and on the west by the bulkhead line.

INDUSTRIAL DIGEST.

The War's Effect As Noted in American Trade Journals.

Textiles.

Europe's greatest textile nations are in death struggle and industry is prostrated or seriously restricted. Exports of European textiles will be seriously restricted as long as war continues and long afterward if war is protracted. Domestic wool, tops and yarns already have advanced one to two and one-half cents, due to covering of canceled foreign contracts. Wool up to ten per cent. in West and very firm in seaboard markets with scattering advances. Generally full employment of wool and worsted mills seems assured for light-weight season.—Textile Manufacturers' Journal.

Iron and Steel.

The uncertainty of the situation has developed an attitude of conservatism on the part of both steel producers and consumers and the almost complete stoppage of exports has resulted in the curtailment of operations in plants engaged in the manufacture of machinery and equipment. The suspension, and in some instances, the cancellation of orders for semi-finished and finished steel have followed, although the tonnage involved is not very heavy. In the Chicago district, the leading producer this week increased operations to 72 per cent., while at Pittsburgh there has been no curtailment of production, contrary reports notwithstanding.—Iron Trade Review.

Shoe and Leather Trade.

Since the general advances were made in leather prices shortly after the European war started, the trend has been further upward. Some fine tannages of oak sole leather are up five cents a pound from where they were the latter part of July and fine tannages of union have advanced three cents. The consumption of leather in foreign countries under these war conditions is much larger than when the world is at peace. Every country must keep her soldiers well shod. That is almost as essential as the food supply.—Boston Letter.

The paralysis of industry abroad has already resulted in cancellation of orders for leather and other exportable commodities. On the other hand, inquiries are coming in from European nations for army shoes, and it is reported that the Geo. E. Keith Company has booked an order for one-half million pairs to go to the French Government. Other Brockton firms report inquiries for army shoes, but state, that owing to busy factories, are unable to meet requirements of immediate delivery. —American Shoemaking.

Paints.

In the paint trade the "Spirit of '76" is beginning to show itself already. America has had all the raw material necessary to produce the best paints without help from foreigners, but up to the present emergency comparatively little had been done in the chemical line in developing our materials. We have been largely dependent on Germany for analine colors, while the Pennsylvania oil fields offer a well-nigh boundless supply of raw materials.

Germany has been able to command chemical ability at a lower price than we could pay, but now they can no longer command the labor market nor the means of transportation. American manufacturers see the need and are getting ready to supply the demand. They expect to bring in a few experienced chemists from Germany, France, Holland and England. America's experimental ingenuity can supply the rest. —Paint, Oil and Drug Reporter.

Glass and Pottery.

The glass men are feeling the pinch in potash and manganese. We have good deposits of both these minerals in this country, and they only require development to supply the market. Nothing but the low price of the foreign products has stood in the way. The situation is clearing up very materially. Word has come from many of the English factories that they are running full time and are shipping as fast as transportation can be obtained.

Foreign china and pottery business in America has been knocked in the head and Trenton, N. J., and other centers where these goods are made will benefit greatly.

Lumber.

It should be borne in mind that lumber markets as well as most other markets will be disorganized by the war. The countries engaged in the fighting will not buy much lumber, and they have been America's best customers. Their misfortune will not necessarily increase the prosperity of American lumber dealers. Our loss of sales in Germany and France may more than offset gains in the Mediterranean countries. A long war will exhaust the resources of all the countries engaged, and its effect will be depressing in all parts of the world. American lumbermen will doubtless get as much out of the situation as possible. —Hardwood Record.

Oil.

Of all our industries petroleum probably stands first in the line of unsettlement by European complications, since the markets abroad are depended upon to absorb about 65 per cent. of the country's production in the form of refined varieties. The United Kingdom, Netherlands, Germany and France constitute the mainstay of foreign consumption. The closing of these and other markets has resulted with particular hardship, as the general status of the industry during the last few months has been one of continued depression by the heavy overproduction and the restricted movements in the various refined products.—Petroleum Gazette.

Hardware.

Buying in hardware lines is not nearly so active as are the variations in price. Practically every commodity in this market is being advanced in price and most quotations are for prompt acceptance.—Hardware Age.

BUILDING OPERATIONS SPASMODIC.

General Decrease in Expenditures No Index to Country's Prosperity.

If the degree of activity of the building industry is taken as an index to prosperity, figures gathered by the United States Geological Survey of building operations in 1913 show that prosperity is sporadic. For instance, New York City, the largest building center of the country, showed in 1913 a considerable decrease from 1912, whereas Newark, only a few miles away, showed a large increase. Chicago, which showed the largest decrease in 1912, rallied and showed the largest increase in 1913. Most of the cities that showed increases in 1912 showed decreases in 1913. A few that showed decreases in 1912 showed increases in 1913, though none of these, except Chicago and Pittsburgh, were among the larger cities. Many cities ascribe the decrease in 1913 to the fact that in 1912 the structures erected were unusually costly.

In 48 of the largest cities of the country, the total cost of building operations in 1913 was $659,515,746, compared with $738,989,510 in 1912. The greatest decrease was in New York City, $56,414,655. The largest increase was in Chicago, $6,492,527. New York City is the leading city in the cost of building operations, notwithstanding its large decrease in 1913. Last year the building operations of that city cost $107,104,707. The maximum annual cost of building operations in New York City was reached in 1909, when it was $186,047,477.

Efforts were made by the Geological Survey to obtain detailed information for all cities of 35,000 or more inhabitants—157 in number. Information was obtained from 147 of these cities in sufficient detail to permit the compilation of statistics. In these 147 cities the building operations in 1913 cost $859,657,250. In 108 of these cities the new wooden buildings erected in 1913 cost $174,197,886 and new brick buildings cost $226,478,584. All other new buildings cost $115,894,022. The cost of all additions, alterations and repairs was $78,483,933. New concrete buildings were reported by 71 cities, of which Philadelphia was the leader, reporting a cost of $4,634,855, and San Francisco was second, with $3,745,389.

TWO-STORY STORES.

The Part Escalator Plays in Making Second Stories Valuable.

Choice locations on the principal business streets of any city are, even under the most favorable conditions, a heavy overhead expense. If the store is a rented one, and a growing business demands more sales space, it is the tendency to make room by acquiring an adjoining store space, with its attractive but costly street-level frontage.

This tendency has been a natural one, because it has been brought home by experience, all too often, that people cannot be induced to climb stairs to make their purchases, no matter how tempting the offerings may be.

That the second floor of a non-elevator building can be rented for from one-fourth to one-fifth the price of an equal ground floor space is a matter of great importance to the merchant, but of little concern to the public—a public that has very definitely refused to expend its energy in stair climbing.

To put it concretely: If a merchant who pays $10,000 a year rental and who seeks to double his sales space by paying $10,000 more for an adjacent store, can be sure of doing just as large a volume of business and pay but $2,000 for an equivalent second floor area, he would ordinarily consider it sound business judgment to do so.

And the fact that such a move is no longer experimental should serve as a guide to greater profits for every merchant who is alive to the fact that a reduced rental expense is simply a proportional increase in his net income.

Escalators are the remedy which is making it possible for the merchant to expand economically upward instead of expensively outward. A booklet just issued by the Otis Elevator Company contains these arguments:

"Escalators are stairways that move continuously and their popular use makes certain the value of an installation in any busy store. Escalators virtually place the second floor on the street level by comfortably carrying people to the second floor counters without calling upon their strength or patience.

"Where Escalators are installed in department stores, it has been found possible to sell goods on the upper floors with almost the same rapidity that they are sold on the street floor, due, of course, to an increased circulation among the upper floors. Where railroad stations are equipped with Escalators, few passengers use the stairs and the crowds from incoming trains are distributed rapidly and comfortably. The theatres that have Escalators are invariably better attended and their balconies are filled with pleasure-seekers who cannot afford orchestra chairs and who refuse to climb stairs to the balcony and gallery seats.

"The Escalator in its perfected type—known as the Duplex Escalator—carries passengers in both directions with equal facility. There is an important advantage in this type of machine in that the two machines, one traveling up and the other down, are geared together, located side by side. By gearing them together in this way and using one motor, advantage is taken of the passengers descending to assist in raising the ascending passengers, and since during the day's operation as many passengers descend as ascend, it can be readily understood that the consumption of operating power is extremely moderate.

How the City Can Save Ten Million a Year.

In response to Mayor Mitchel's invitation to taxpayers to give helpful suggestions looking to a reduction of the 1915 budget, Henry H. Klein has sent a letter to the Mayor's office in which he points out a number of extravagances and weaknesses on the part of the city government and tells how the city can save ten million dollars a year:

"In order to reduce the public payroll I suggest a horizontal cut in salaries in excess of $3,500. All salaries above $6,000 should be reduced to that sum and $500 should be taken from each salary between $3,500 and $6,000. This will result in a saving of $7,000,000 out of a total annual payroll of $90,000,000 and enable the city to retain its minor employes. I might add that many of those added to the payroll during the past five years and particularly since Jan. 1 last, were employes of the Bureau of Municipal Research or recommended by representatives of that body.

"The use of city automobiles for other than public business is a scandal. You gentlemen have condemned such practice in the past, yet city automobiles are conspicuous on all thoroughfares after working hours. Department heads and subordinates are rarely engaged in public business after five o'clock, so the use of city automobiles after that hour is mainly for pleasure and personal convenience. An hour's watch on the main thoroughfares of the city, particularly Lafayette street, after five o'clock, will convince you that city automobiles are used for pleasure purposes. It costs the city about $500,000 a year for repairs and maintenance of automobiles and hire of chauffeurs. One thousand dollars a day can be saved if the number of city automobiles is reduced from 250 to 25 and if the cars are kept on call for ALL departments.

"The city should recover tolls for the use of its bridges by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. This company receives the full amount of its tolls averaging $250,000 a year, as rebate on its franchise tax. The total amount of this rebate to date exceeds $2,000,000. No such rebate was intended when the city entered into agreement with the railroad company for the use of the bridges and the city should make every effort to recover the tolls which were paid by the railroad company into the city treasury, up to nine years ago. The tolls now swell the surplus of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company."

In connection with reductions in the proposed budget, Mr. Klein calls attention to the following facts:

"The war in Europe will probably cause a reduction in dock revenues. This means that some of the dock bonds ($70,000,000) exempted from the debt limit a few years ago, will cease to be self-sustaining. Interest on these bonds which were applied mainly for subway purposes, and on other subway bonds, must be paid out of taxes. Interest on additional water bonds must also be provided in the budget so the debt service for ensuing years will increase several million dollars a year. Unless cuts are made to offset these increases and other increases due to the new $100,000,000 loan and the financing of city improvements, by fifteen-year bonds, the tax rate will rise to burdensome figures. The increase in the budget will rise to $20.000,000 in 1918.

"These facts are cited so that you may reconsider the expenditure of $20,000,000 for a new county court house in Manhattan and $15,000,000 for a marginal freight railroad in South Brooklyn. The court house bonds will not be self-sustaining, and interest on only half the cost of the terminal improvement will be returned under the terms of the contract for construction and operation. At least $1,400,000 a year interest will have to be added to the budget for these two items alone, after a few years."

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

INTEREST of local and out-of-town real estate men will be focused on their annual Convention held this year in New York City. The average real estate broker has been so busy with the daily routine of business that he has had little time to undertake the study of the deeper problems of his vocation, and even less time to attempt their solution. Within the last two or three years, however, there has been a marked tendency among real estate organizations not only to raise the ethical standards of the profession but also to take an active part in the consideration of civic questions.

Investors, builders, and speculators and all others who are associates of the broker in the real estate business are keenly interested in the proceedings of the convention. For the broker who is the delegate at this session is the man who manages their properties, collects their rents, and advises when to buy and when to sell.

It was learned this week that the transaction which was recorded in the Record and Guide of July 16, and which affected the former Stern Brothers' department store in West 23rd street, had been closed by the signing of the final papers. It is proposed to model this market after Covent Garden in London. After extensive alterations, it will be opened on May 1, 1915, and will be known as the "Cosmopolitan Garden." It is expected that the new enterprise will fill a long-felt want to the retail shopping public. Besides the unique arrangement of floor space and provision for the display of merchandise in booths, every facility will be afforded to the housewife to do her shopping quickly among pleasant surroundings. The originator of Cosmopolitan Garden is Maurice M. Berger. Albert B. Ashforth, who conducted the negotiations which resulted in the closing of the lease, has launched the project and has been able to secure application for space and promises from a large number of merchants whose leases aggregate, according to Mr. Ashforth, about $125,000 in annual rentals.
